Famous Prisoners, Dr. Crippen And Miss Leneve, Now in Jail In Quebec---Threw Away Poison.

(Intelligence. Special.)

Quebec, August 1.—Behind the bars in the cells of the provincial buildings here today are the most famous prisoners this ancient city ever took care of.

Both of them are seemingly on the verge of collapse and under the care of physicians.

Dr. H. H. Crippen and Miss Leneve, after the sensational chase of the century, and eventual capture through that greatest sleuth of the age, Detective Wireless, are being put through an examination that is nerve-racking for themselves and questioners.

No death watch ever put over condemned prisoners was ever more more complete than that which guards the accused Crippen and his typist in their cells here.

The fear that they will try to suicide was given justification this morning by Dr. Stuart, of the Montrose, who asserts that Miss Leneve threw some white powder, probably poison, through the port hole when surprised and put under arrest.

There was a great jam at the piers when the Montrose arrived here, word saying passed up from Father Point of the arrest of the pair there.

Inspector Dew was the first person to start down the gangway when the Montrose tied up at 12.30 this morning.

The police had to push back the crowd to make way for him.

Close behind him came Crippen, white-faced, staggering, seemingly close to collapse and with his hands manacled, with Canadian Detective Denis, clutching him by the arm.

On their heels were three figures, the drooping figure of Miss Leneve in the centre, Chief McCarthy of the Provincial Police, on one side, and Stewardess Beer of the Montrose, on the other.

The girl prisoner was swaying from side to side. Her face was of ghastly paler.

Roughly the officers hustled their prisoners into a cab, the driver whipped his horses up and drove rapidly to upper town.

Just what was the outcome of Inspector Dew's interview with the prisoners this morning was not given out.

The girl is now in a state of total collapse.

WHAT SCOTLAND YARD SAYS ABOUT CRIPPEN

(Intelligencer Special.)

London, August 1.—Scotland Yard authorities intimate to-day that Dr. Crippen and Miss Leneve would remain in Canada for ten days, anyway.

They expect the prisoners to put up a strenuous fight for freedom, and are carefully avoiding any chance of escape on technicalities.

Inspector Dew, in Quebec, was instructed by cable to-day to have the accused remanded before Canadian courts until the arrival here of Sergeant Mitchell, of Scotland Yard, with all the formal papers. The Superintendent said to-day that he was satisfied there was a most complete chain of evidence.

CRIPPEN AND LENEVE ADMITTED IDENTITY

Intelligencer Special

Quebec, August, 1.—Dr. Crippen and Miss Leneve were arraigned before Judge Angers and admitted their identity. They were not asked to plead and were remanded for 15 days.

DISMISSED FIREMAN SHOOTS HIS COMRADES

(Intelligencer Special.)

San Diego, Cal., August 1.—Angry because he had been dismissed from the Fire Department, Bert Durham, rang a false alarm and when his former comrades came shot and killed two, including the captain, who suspended him, and also severely wounding two others. Then he went home and killed his wife and child with bludgeon.

His house was quickly surrounded by the sheriff's men, but he got away, covering his retreat with a rifle and shooting a sheriff's officer.

LATER—Durham was found dead. He had suicided.

ENGINEER KILLED IN U. S. RAILWAY WRECK.

Intelligencer Special.

Albany, N. Y., August 1.—New York Central, Buffalo and Toronto special, with a number of Canadians aboard, ran into a light engine near here. Engineer West, of the light engine, was killed, and several passengers slightly hurt.

THREATS OF LYNCHING

HUNDREDS OF PRIESTS TO ATTEND CONGRESS

Intelligencer Special.

New York, August 1.—It is expected that hundreds of priests from various parts of the United States will visit the great Eucharistic Congress to be held in Montreal in September.

STILL TALK, TALK, TALK, IN GRAND TRUNK STRIKE

(Intelligencer Special)

Montreal, Que., August 1.—There were further conferences between the Minister of Labor, President Hays of the Grand Trunk and the labor leaders today in an endeavor to get to a satisfactory basis of arbitration.

It is understood that Mr. Hays is still obdurate regarding his proposition of retaining the strike breakers. This is a principle of justice, he says, that the Grand Trunk cannot afford to sacrifice.

The Minister of Labor afterwards said that he hoped to succeed in persuading both sides to submit to arbitration before evening, though he refused to make any definite statement as to how far the negotiations had proceeded.

GUILTY BELGIAN'S SIN HAS FOUND HIM OUT

(Intelligencer Special)

Winnipeg, August 1.—After living three years in apparent security, Pierre Vinecekier, a Belgian, has agreed to return to Belgium without extradition proceedings. Vinecekier escaped after being sentenced to six years for assault on a ten-year-old girl, and had been living in St. Boniface with his wife, who followed him here.

ORILLIA HAS A VERY UNSAVORY SENSATION.

(Intelligencer Special)

Orillia, August 1.—The trial on a charge of child murder against Thomas McNulty, a married man with a family, and Miss May Dolan, a prominent young lady, who were arraigned on Saturday, promises to be a sensation. Over Sunday feeling ran high against McNulty. The trial goes on Thursday.

REV. MR. M'CAUGHAN DEAD.

Former Pastor of St. Andrews's, Toronto, Died In Belfast.

Toronto, Aug. 1.—News was received early last evening by the Canadian Associated Press cable of the death of Rev. William John McCaughan, who was terribly injured last Tuesday in the Kelvin Hotel fire, in Belfast, Ireland.

On receipt of the cable, a reporter conveyed the sad intelligence to Mr. McCaughan's former church, New St. Andrew's, West King street, where evening service was in progress. Rev. Dr. Lyle, who was about to open prayer, was much shocked, and in his prayer referred very feelingly to the self-sacrificing life of one who had died far from his former home. He then announced a most appropriate hymn, Ellerton's beautiful, "Now the Laborer's Task Is O'er."

The formal announcement of Mr. McCaughan's death was made by the acting minister, Rev. J. C. McConachie, at the end of the sermon, after which the Dead March was played by the organist, the congregation standing.

Though Mr. McCaughan had not been connected with St. Andrew's for about ten years, his memory is still beloved by most of the church members, who feel a sense of personal loss and horror at his shocking death. A message of sympathy from all the congregation was cabled last night to Mrs. McCaughan in Belfast.

Mr. McCaughan, who was a native of Belfast, was at New St. Andrew's from 1897 to 1900, when he accepted a call to Chicago. In 1907, he returned to his native city of Belfast. His wife was Miss Sara Cooper of Philadelphia.

In the fatal fire of Tuesday, Mr. and Mrs. McCaughan delayed their departure so long, in their efforts to inform other inmates of the danger, that their retreat was cut off, and they were obliged to jump from a third storey window, fracturing their skulls. Mrs. McCaughan is on the road to recovery.

Mr. McCaughan was a well-known Mason, Orangeman and Forester.

Uniform for War Secretary.

London, Aug. 1.—Lord Dundonald suggested that Mr. Haldane should wear uniform and be liable to court-martial when he spoke Saturday at a meeting of the Council of the Imperial Mission at St. Dunstan's, Regent's Park, the residence of the Earl of Londesborough. He said:

"Great changes have recently taken place in the management of the armed forces of the crown, not only in the Mother Country, but in the colonies. Some of these changes have been for good, but others, I think, might be harmful in the future.

"The power hitherto held by the military commander in conjunction with the Secretary of State for War has, apparently, been absorbed entirely by the latter, and I have hopes that this Minister, besides absorbing the powers, will also take unto himself some of the penalties.

"I have hopes that he will assume uniform and rank and render himself amenable to court-martial and to the inevitable bullet if it is found, when the country goes to war, that it is deficient in rifles, in ammunition, or in anything that renders defeat not unlikely."

Escaped Convict Caught.

Ottawa, Aug. 1.—Col. A. P. Sherwood, head of the Dominion police was yesterday notified of on important arrest at Winnipeg by Chief E. J. Elliott, one of the Dominion force officers. He took in charge Pierre Vinckier, who is wanted by the Belgian Government, and who, in 1907, was sentenced to six years on a charge of indecent assault on children under 11 years of age. Vinckier, while held at or near Flandro, Orientale, Belgium, escaped without serving any of the sentence.

IS G.T.R. STRIKE OVER?

Conferences at Montreal Do Not Seem to Have Been Effective.

Mackenzie King Leaves Town and Looks Very Satisfied—Strikers Who Are In Close Touch With Their Leaders Are Still Expecting to Return to Work Soon—No Statements Were Given Out.

Montreal, Aug. 1.—The Dove of Peace has not been caged yet, and although there were a number of conferences Saturday between the Grand Trunk and the brotherhood officials, and prolonged conferences of the strike leaders among themselves yesterday, there was nothing satisfactory to be learned last night as to the actual situation between the parties. Vice-Presidents Murdock and Berry were quite reticent, and declined to say what had been transpiring. But both were quite certain that no settlement had been reached, and neither would hold out any hope for anything doing to-day to relieve the situation. Mr. Berry will remain in Montreal to-day.

Still, the Grand Trunk conductors and trainmen living at Point St. Charles, who are on strike, and who are in touch with their leaders, have been expecting to go to work since late Saturday afternoon. Hon. Mackenzie King, too, paid his bill at the Windsor, although he will say absolutely nothing, the Minister does not appear like a man who has failed.

The company, however, so far, even at the conferences yesterday between Presidents Garretson and Lee, and Vice-President Fitzhugh, refused to treat the strikers otherwise than on the assumption that they will abandon their demand to get back their former status.

Vice-President Fitzhugh claims that the suburban trains are all running, and that the position of the freights is improving every hour.

Troops at Fort Erie.

Toronto, Aug. 1.—Acting on a request from a magistrate at Niagara Falls, Gen. Cotton, D.O.C., yesterday despatched 27 men of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, at Stanley Barracks and 23 men of the R.R.C.I., at London, to Fort Erie. Major Elmsley is in command of the detachment, with Lieut. Bell of the Dragoons, and Lieut. Chrysler of the R.R.C.I. assisting.

It is understood that the call for troops was due to the fear of the Grand Trunk that 500 racetrack followers hanging around the Fort Erie track may try to damage the G.T.R. property because of the postponement of the race meet, due to the inability of the company to provide special trains.

Supt. Cunningham of the G.T.R. was in Fort Erie Saturday, but was afraid to remain over night, and returned to Niagara Falls.

Bringing Strike-Breakers.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Aug. 1.—Immigration Officer George Thomas was inspecting a train which came across the G.T.R. bridge about 7.30 last night and asked one of the passengers how much money he had.

The man replied that he had $25.

"Where did you get it?" asked the officer.

"From that man there," replied the passenger, pointing to Supt. Cunningham of the G.T.R.

At this point Cunningham is said to have butted into the conversation, and refused to let the immigration officer ask any more questions of the passenger, as the requirements of the act had been complied with. He then took the man into his office and took the $25 away from him.

This is the second case of the kind that is reported to have occurred at Niagara Falls.

Are Charged With Murder.

Orillia, Aug. 1.—Thomas McNulty of Orillia, and Miss May Dolan of Uptergrove, were arrested and placed in the jail here on Saturday, charged with child murder. McNulty is married and has four children.

On the evening of Friday, July 22, Frank Utley of Orillia was fishing in Lake Couchiching when he found the body of a baby in an advanced state of decomposition.

The pair were indicted for murder before Police Magistrate George H. Clark. No witnesses were examined. The preliminary hearing will be continued on Thursday. The Dolan girl confessed to Chief of Police John R. Reid and Crown Attorney J. R. Cotter of Barrie that she had a letter from McNulty advising her to commit the deed.

Octogenarian Missing.

Cornwall, Aug. 1.—John Baily, aged 80 years, is missing. He lived with his son and was last, as far as can be learned, on the street about 4 o'clock yesterday morning. He was in his shirt sleeves and bare head. His cane, a few trinkets, and a note addressed to his daughter were found on the step of a relative. He had been in poor health, and had remarked Saturday that yesterday was the ninth anniversary of his wife's death.

Dr. Cook Again Discovered.

New York, Aug. 1.—Friends of Dr. Fred. A. Cook, the vanished explorer, believe that he is now in seclusion at the home of his brother, in Brooklyn, and that he has been there since July 2nd.

General Conference Of Methodist Church

GREAT GATHERING AT VICTORIA B. C., SHORTLY — MANY PROBLEMS OF GREAT INTEREST ARE COMING UP.

The approaching general conference of the Methodist church in Canada which opens on the 14th of August in Victoria, B. C., is the principal subject of conversation in Methodist ministerial and lay circles at present.

Ministers and members are looking forward to the discussion of several more than ordinarily important subjects, and the result of the general overhauling of all departments of the church organization which is to be a feature of this conference. The re-election of all general conference officers is, of course, among the first items of business. There will be 320 members of conference, and the conference is expected to last for two or three weeks.

Undoubtedly the Jackson controversy will come in for a prominent place in discussions. The question of the training of students and testing of the belief of professors before their appointment and their supervision afterwards, is known to be on the program for a thorough thrashing out. The question is, of course, one which extends far beyond the mere matter of the work of Prof. Jackson, which awoke such a lively discussion during the Toronto conference this year, and is one of great importance to the Methodist church at large.

The proposal that the four years' term of pastoral office be extended is a question which naturally arouses the special interest of pastors throughout the church, as also does the question relating to the establishing upon a firmer basis of the superannuation fund and enlargement of annuities, which is another matter that falls to be discussed at this year's conference.

Of wide general interest to the church is the proposal to establish a new church department, to be called the department of financial education and membership leaving, with a paid general secretary in charge.

This scheme, which owes its origin to a plan put first into practice in the Trinity church Toronto, is designed with a view to securing better and more systematic methods of raising money for church and connectional purposes. The plan on its original lines as carried on in Trinity church has proved so successful that it has been thought advisable to extend the movement.

The selection and appointment of a successor to the late Rev. Dr. Sutherland is another matter of particular interest. Rev. T. E. Egerton Shore, who was Dr. Sutherland's assistant secretary in the Methodist Foreign mission department, is regarded as his most probable successor; but as there is a question of rearrangement on foot in regard to the management of the mission departments nothing definite can yet be said as to this important appointment.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

BASEBALL

Park Nine Won Another

The Park Nine and T. A. S., leaders and tail-enders respectively in the local city league, played a match on the Coleman's Flats diamond on Saturday afternoon before a fair-sized crowd. The game, while not a first-class one in all respects, was much closer than many people thought it would be. As a matter of fact, the chaps in the cellar made it decidedly interesting for the league leaders, and had a look-in right up to the time when their last man was retired in the ninth. The Park Nine won by an 11-8 score. Phelps started the game as pitcher for the winners, but retired later in favor of Gerow, who finished the game in good style. Whalen pitched for the T. A. S., had dazzling speed and good curves, but was a little shy on control, and gave his catcher a busy afternoon. Some good hitting was done, "Crow" Connolly, for the Park Nine, making a home run, while Burgoyne, for the T. A. S., soaked the ball hard on a couple of occasions. The match started with two umpires, Eddie O'Flynn handing out the balls and strikes, while "Cam." St. Charles looked after the bases. There was more kicking than one would see at a football match. Between the objecting players and talkative spectators the umpires had a beautiful time of it and made a noise like quitting several times. In fact, Mr. St. Charles did quit, his place being taken by Alderman Flagler. Mr. O'Flynn stuck it out to the end, though he looked like pitching up the job several times. The City League should pay its umpires a salary—as a rough guess we might suggest that about a million dollars a game would be a fair remuneration for the job. Another thing the league should do is to take steps to keep back the boys and other pirates who crowd on the field. There is no reason why good baseball, dished up in proper style, should not be played on the local diamond, but it cannot be looked for while people crowd on to the field as they do at present. This was the score by innings:

Park Nine ....012032030—11
T. A. S ... .003140000—8

The teams were:—

PARK NINE		T. A. S.
	Pitcher
Phelps		Whelan
	Catcher
Gerow		Champagne
	1st Base
Connolly		Burgoyne
	2nd Base
Reeves		Ross
	3rd Base
Connell		McNabb
	Short Stop
Brennan		French
	Right Field
Thomas		G. Gayer
	Left Field
Symons		Hogan
	Centre Field
McGuire		N. Gayer

The League Standing

The result of Saturday's match gives the Park Nine a lead of three games over the Ontarios, Grand Trunks and Coleman's Flats, who are all tied for second place. The Total Abstainers appear to be anchored safely at the bottom.

FOR THE KIDNEYS

A Guaranteed Treatment, Money Back If It Fails.

Kidney diseases are more prevalent than is generally supposed, and are not always recognized as such. What was at first but a slight derangement of the kidneys often results in indigestion, rheumatism, anaemia, chronic and very painful headache, neuralgia, eye weakness, and other diseases of a most aggravating type. Therefore it is highly important and absolutely necessary that the kidneys and the urinary system be kept in an active and healthy condition.

After a thorough experience with the most successful forms of kidney treatments we are confident that the one remedy which embraces the most desirable, safe and efficacious qualities, so necessary to the successful treatment and positive eradication of kidney diseases in general, is Rexall Kidney Remedy.

We are so positive that Rexall Kidney Remedy is unexcelled, and that it will do all we claim, that we will sell it with our own personal guarantee that it will not cost the user a cent if it should fail to give entire satisfaction.

We particularly recommend Rexall Kidney Remedy for kidney ailments that are chronic and which resist ordinary treatment. We believe, if taken according to directions with regularity and persistency for a reasonable length of time it will positively remove all symptoms and effect a permanent cure.

Surely we could not more strongly demonstrate our faith in Rexall Kidney Remedy, and our generous guarantee should convince the most skeptical that we would not dare make such a statement except we know what we are talking about. We urge you to try Rexall Kidney Remedy at our risk. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00 a bottle. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store. J. S. McKeown.

Big Day in Trenton.

The I. O. O. F. band went to Trenton to-day to participate in the Firemen's Tournament being held in that town. The Park Nine and G. T. R. baseball teams were this afternoon scheduled to play a game there for a trophy offered for competition. A large number from the city were in attendance at the sports.

DEATHS.

COLLINS—Died at Belleville, on Monday, Aug. 1st, 1910, Hugh Collins, in his 66th year.

The funeral will take place from his late residence, Queen's Hotel, Front street, on Wednesday morning, Aug. 3rd, at 10 o'clock, to Plainfield. Service in Plainfield Methodist church. Interment in Garrison cemetery.

SENSELESS CHARGES.

Mr. James Murdock is quoted in a contemporary as saying in reference to the Grand Trunk strike: "I can cite "cases of absolute green men being "placed in charge of trains; I know of "instances where the trains have run "past signals hung out to indicate that "there were orders there for them "through the ignorance of the train "crew, and other instances where trains "ran for miles against each other." There is something radically wrong here either the newspaper makes a fool of Mr. Murdock or the latter is making a fool of the newspaper. In either case the result is the same, stupidity being employed to fool the public and create a feeling that travel on the Grand Trunk is not safe. That trains are running past displayed order boards simply because they happen to have a non-union conductor and brakeman on board is such a ridiculous assertion that it can only incite laughter among people who know. It is, however, calculated to cause apprehension amongst the travelling public, and for their enlightenment it may be mentioned that the conductor, the brakeman, and the baggageman have nothing to do with the train order board until the train has stopped. The board is there for the guidance of the engineer, and he is the man responsible. If a train runs past a displayed order board he is to blame. When he stops for an order board he is not expected to move his train again until he secures his release in the shape of the orders the board was hung out for. Surely it is not intended to convey to the public the idea that the Grand Trunk engineers are a careless lot of men not to be trusted with a train unless they have a brotherhood conductor on board to see that they do not run past displayed order boards. Again there is the charge that trains have been running for miles against each other. How did that happen? A train cannot run against another train unless it is running against an order. It surely is not charged that the Grand Trunk engineers have been running contrary to orders. It certainly is the duty of the engineers to enter a protest against this charge of criminal carelessness on their part, no matter whether the fault lies with Mr. Murdock or the newspapers.—Montreal Gazette, July 27, 1910.

The Last Sad Rites.

Yesterday afternoon the funeral of the late Mr. Joseph Demarsh took place, and the large attendance at the obsequies was an evidence of the popularity of the deceased. The funeral was under the auspices of the Catholic Order of Foresters, and a large number of the members turned out. The Sergeants of the 15th Regiment also turned out to honor the memory of a departed comrade. At St. Michael's church Rev. Father Spratt conducted services. The floral tributes were numerous and very beautiful. The bearers were, Messrs. F. P. Carney, T. Hurley, Jas. Hanley, Jas. St. Charles, jr., J. Fitzgerald and P. Cote.

The funeral of the late Mr. William Thompson, Canifton Road, took place on Saturday afternoon, and was largely attended. Rev. A. M. Hubly conducted an impressive service at the home. Interment took place in the Belleville cemetery. The bearers were, Messrs. M. Donovan, M. Bran, W. McCarthy, H. McGinnis, R. Ketcheson and E. Stanley.

Several English railroads have built freight cars especially for aeroplanes, the ends having double doors which open to the full height and width of the car.

The wires of a full sized piano, if straightened, would extend a mile.

The Color of His Coat.

Professor Virchow was almost as famous for his excessive bluntness of speech as for his very remarkable mental attainments. Often he spoke so unfeelingly to the students who sat under him in the lecture rooms that they have been known to leave his classes and not return. According to Berlin traditions, one of the professor's favorite replies to a wrong answer to one of his questions was:

"Certainly not. Any cook would know better than that."

On the other hand, he seemed to appreciate the spirit in some of his students which prompted them to answer him back in very much his own tone. Once when he was presiding in a very old and faded suit of clothes he turned suddenly upon a seemingly bashful man sitting near him and asked:

"Do your eyes tell you the truth? What color is this coat of mine?"

Without an instant's hesitation the young man rose and said: "I presume it was once black. Now it is any color except white."

That student was passed.

BASEBALL PITCHING.

Mordecai Crown's Hook Curve and How It Is Delivered.

Hugh S. Fullerton, writing in the American Magazine about the "Wonders of Pitching," says of "Three Fingered" Brown, the star twirler of the Cubs:

"Beyond doubt Mordecai Brown's hook curve is the highest development of the fast overhand ball which curves down and out, as all good curves do. Brown has but two entire fingers on his right hand and only fractions of the others. His first finger is cut off short, and the middle finger is wrecked so that the first joint turns almost at right angles toward his thumb. Perhaps this mutilated hand is the secret of his marvelous curves. Brown pitches the hook overhand, releasing the ball at graduated points after the hand passes the line of the center of the body in swinging. Upon the point at which the ball is released by the fingers the place of the 'break' depends, and Brown can by regulating the point of release make it either describe a wide, fast arc or, after traveling fifty feet, break suddenly at a sharp angle from its original course. If the batter retires to the back of the batter's box Brown, by releasing the ball a flash sooner, can make it break in front of the batter, almost over the plate. If the batter moves to the front of the box to meet the curve before it breaks a sudden jerk of the pitcher's wrist makes the ball break several feet in front of the plate. He controls the point of the break or curve at will, except when the ball slips, as it sometimes will do even with the greatest of pitchers. Most players who faced him in duels between batter and pitcher concede Brown's curve to be the greatest of all, but no member of the Detroit team who batted against Overall in the world's championship series of 1908 will acknowledge that Brown is better. In the game that Overall pitched, the final one of the series, his curve broke in such an astonishing manner as to surprise even himself. Overall pitches his curve with a wide, sweeping, overhand swing, releasing the ball over the side of his index finger just as his hand turns downward."

Ducks Slaughtered Out of Season.

There is a great slaughter of ducks along the Rideau Canal, more particularly at Dog and Cranberry Lakes, despite the fact that it has been the close season.

A Colt From the Blue.

A nerve-racking spectacle was witnessed by thousands at Adelaide, Australia, one day lately, in the course of a balloon and parachute exhibition given by Messrs. Rinaldo and Eastwood. A race was arranged, and Eastwood made a descent from a height of 4,500 feet, while Rinaldo released his parachute at 5,000 feet. The latter dropped, with the use of two parachutes, rotationally; but his final one failed to open fully, and he could not shake out the folds. Then he shot down at remarkable velocity, covering about 2,000 feet in six seconds. Fortunately for the aeronaut, he landed in a big fig-tree in the grounds of a nursing home. He tore the bark off the limbs of the tree and he dashed through; but his fall was broken, and thus a tragedy averted. His injuries only consisted of bruises on the hip and leg. When he fell through the tree he landed within a yard of a baby in a cot, and within two yards of a lady patient, who ran screaming away from the apparition.

TIME FREIGHT CARS.

Traced by Hourly Reports the Whole Length of Their Run.

A freight car is essentially common property. It has to go from one line to another in the course of its business. It has to carry loads from Jacksonville, Fla., to Spokane, Wash.; from Phoenix, Ariz., to Augusta, Me. If all the freight cars in the United States were owned by one big company and if that company charged the railroads for the exact amount of use which they made of each car the situation would theoretically be more reasonable than it is today.

But in any case the wanderings of freight cars will always entail an enormous amount of labor with pen and pencil and telegraph key and typewriter and long distance telephone, writes William Hard in the Technical World Magazine.

The modern hunter of freight cars is not satisfied with knowing where all the cars on his own lines are at the end of each day's run. Modern business life has become so rapid that in the case of certain kinds of freight it is necessary to know just where each car is every few hours. This kind of freight is called time freight.

Ordinary freight is dead freight. Time freight consists only of certain materials. These materials run alphabetically all the way from asbestus, through cranberries, egg case fillers, ink, peanuts and varnish, down to zinc. All cars in time freight trains are reported by telegraph from all division points.

You can stand in front of a big board on the wall—it is like the board in a stockbroker's office except that it has little holes in it—and watch the progress of the cars in a time freight train from point to point. As the telegrams come in the pegs are moved from hole to hole. If you started a carload of varnish from Chicago to Omaha last night you can come in today and see just where that car is. You can watch it all the way to Omaha on the board.

It is a cruel humiliation for the freight car. It used to be a wild stray animal, but now it is tamed and domesticated. Just as we now have municipal lodging houses for tramps, so we have telegraph record boards for freight cars. Pretty soon nobody will be able to escape from the authorities. It is only occasionally under modern methods a freight car tracer has to go out and bring it home by force.

Origin of Hobson's Choice.

"It is a case of Hobson's choice," is a phrase that is used by many people without knowing exactly what it means, says a writer in Strand. As a matter of fact, this adage has been handed down to us from the 17th century and had its origin in the eccentricities of one Tobias Hobson. This worthy was a carrier of Cambridge, who died in the year 1630. In addition to his ordinary business he kept a stable and let out horses to the students of university. He made it an unalterable rule, however, that each animal should have an equal period of work and rest, and would never let one out of its turn. Consequently, instead of being allowed to select the steed they most fancied, his customers had to take the one that stood next to the door. If it did not meet with their approval they had to do without a ride. Hence, the proverbial expression, "Hobson's choice," used to signify a choice without an alternative.

Daily Intelligencer.

Sir Wilfrid at Duck Lake.

Sir Wilfrid, in his tour West, has visited the scene of the Riel revolt. At Duck Lake he addressed the school children and others who were present; and at Rostheron, a few miles from Batoche, he told the people that "the rebellion of 1885 was not, perhaps, without excuse, and might have been prevented by the government of the day." No one knows better than does Sir Wilfrid that nothing existed at that time to justify the murdering of priests of his own Church and innocent men and women. At that period of our history he appealed to race and creed to arouse the passions of his French fellow-subjects, and now he is playing the same game to capture the half-breed vote in and about the scene of the Duck Lake and Batoche fighting. It is a marvel that he did not repeat his former declaration, that had he been on the Saskatchewan at the time he would have shouldered his musket and fought with Riel. The Globe's report says that "while the Premier uttered these sentiments amid cheers there floated from the masthead over him the bullet-pierced flag which was carried by the Canadian troops at Batoche. A little Indian girl, a second generation relative of Riel, lifted in the arms of her mother, threw a kiss to the Premier." It was a fitting sequel to the demonstration that a connection of Riel should salute Sir Wilfrid.

Loyal men and the descendants of those who were murdered by the Riel contingent, should not forget the sympathiser with the man who paid the penalty of his crimes on the gallows.

Current Comment

Speaking of extreme Sunday laws the richest we have heard is where a Franklin, Penn., woman was arrested and fined for washing dishes on Sunday. At this rate, it will soon be dangerous to take a bath or clean one's teeth on the Sabbath.—Kingston Standard.

Enough money has been lost in Kingston by the prolonged quarrel this year between the contractors and carpenters without the stone masons and stone cutters adding to the confusion. Unless harmony is restored unionism must suffer in the city.—Kingston Whig.

The word "typist" apparently crossed the ocean with Miss Leneve. Heretofore Canadians had called them stenographers. But it will take more than a Dr. Crippen crime to induce people on this side of the Atlantic to speak of an elevator as a "lift," or a street car as a "tram," though in both cases the Old Land expression has the advantage of brevity.—Toronto Star.

A telegram from London, England says: "Sir Wilfrid Laurier's speeches to the farmers of the West have been fully reported. His reference to his Free Trade principles, and his idea of bringing the Canadian policy into conformity with the policy which had resulted in the prosperity of Great Britain, have given great satisfaction to the Free Trade party in this country." It is evident free traders in England know nothing of Sir Wilfrid's Sunny Smile promises. They are worth just the breath wasted in their utterances. Nothing more. If it suits his political ends he will keep his promises, not otherwise.

Upon offering to return to work, the strikers made unreasonable conditions and the answer of the company was that the men must come back as new employees, and that all of them could not be guaranteed work, as their places had been filled. It would be gross ingratitude if the company dismissed the men who came to its rescue when in trouble, and give their places to strikers.

Even labor union men can't agree as to how the time, and money of their employers should be divided among themselves. Here is a specimen. On the 28th of July "stonemasons and stonecutters of Kingston, quit work owing to troubles between themselves. They are asking rearrangement of each others' constitutions. The cutters claim that masons are doing work they should not do and the masons say that their constitution gives them the right to do all that they are doing on various buildings on which they are working. In the meantime building trade is suffering through disagreement, for no masons or stonecutters are at work." Of course those who employ these gents are ignored; all they are looked upon to do is to furnish the work, pay union wages, and look pleasant.

A lamp adapted for places where it is liable to be struck by other objects is made with a semi-globular base.

The damage and waste caused by smoke in the larger cities of the United States each year is estimated at $500,000,000 by an official of the Geological Survey, who says his figures are conservative.

SHE HAD THE ROCKS.

There was a pretty Mrs. Blank,
Who had a profile sweet.
Her figure, too, was up to date.
Indeed, she was elite.

She had a way of making friends
That capped the climax too.
Indeed, all fell in love with her.
They simply just had to.

And scandal never had a word
To say about her life,
While Mr. Blank and Mrs. Blank
Seemed model man and wife.

But what surprised the ladies most
Was how this woman dressed.
Indeed, she led the whole parade,
'Twas candidly confessed.

Why, when she came into the church
The choir all went flat,
The women felt so out of style
When they saw her swell hat.

Now, all these anxious women knew
Her husband wasn't rich.
They all were puzzled how she could
Dress at such a high pitch.

So a committee went around
To call on Mrs. Blank
To get from her a tip or two
How to attain such rank.

She led them to her chicken coop
And showed them her fine flocks.
The mystery there at once lay bare—
She had fine Golden Rocks.

O Rocks, O Rocks, that fill egg crocks,
You beat the band, you do,
To pay Mariar's hats and frocks
And Bill's Havanas too!

C. M. BARNITZ.

KURIOS FROM KORRESPONDENTS

Q. I had so many chicks dead in the shell last season and wish to ask which part of the hatch the germ is most liable to injury from shock—too much heat or cold?

A. The first week, especially for shock, eighth to twelfth day for extremes of heat and cold.

Q. Does it injure a show bird to let her hatch?

A. No. After such a rest a hen is healthier, a better layer, breeder, molts and lays sooner and is in better shape for show.

Q. Do you help little chicks out of the shell?

A. Very seldom and only when we see that dryness prevents chick from escaping. The chicks that can't get out are generally upside down, monstrosities or very weak and amount to nil.

Q. After a chick picks the egg how soon should it come out?

A. In five to ten hours; quickest under hens.

Q. I recently set an incubator with 150 eggs and got twenty-two chicks. There were sixty infertiles and sixty-two rotten eggs, and six eggs were broken during hatch. How many of the eggs were fertile?

A. Eighty-four. Infertile eggs are never rotten during a hatch. The sixty-two eggs may have been chilled. It's a wonder you got any chicks with that many spoiled eggs unless you tested them out as the hatch progressed.

Q. I understand some fanciers bleach cream and brassiness from their show birds' plumage with hydrogen peroxide. How do they apply it? Does it cause injury?

A. This is a faker's trick. You must buy from venders of "poultry secrets," so slick. Peroxide does not bleach out brass, but it bleaches the yellow from beak and legs and makes the feathers so brittle that any judge may discover the trick by simply rubbing and bending the feathers. It also causes temporary suffering.

Q. I set an incubator and hen on the same date. The hen hatched her chicks in twenty-one days, and the machine hatched in nineteen days. Will you explain?

A. The hen hatched O. K., but you ran your incubator too hot, and its forced chicks will likely be weaklings.

Q. How do you get broody hens to adopt incubator chicks? I fail in nearly every instance.

A. The hen must have been broody for a week or so. In the afternoon put chicks under her on nest and make it dark. Thus they will get acquainted, and the next morning take them off and feed, giving the hen whole corn and chick feed together. By this plan we have had hens take chicks a week old.

DON'TS.

Don't try to hurry prosperity by any method that will make what you gain a source of pain or permit others to remark, "There goes a human shark."

Don't ridicule the farmer as a "punkinhead." He looks from nature unto nature's God as he plows up the sweet green sod. He turns that furrow in the field that earth may for you sweet bread yield.

Don't look upon the city man as a stuck up fop. Those folk amid the dust and noise oft wish for quiet country joys and look upon the husbandman as brother in the one great clan.

Don't stir up prejudice against yourself by running down another's product. If his stock is nit folks will see it. If his eggs are bad they need no ad.

A familiar shaving paste known as cream of almonds is made by melting one part of caustic potash into three parts of lard with enough essence of almonds added to give it a flavor.

THE MUSCOVY DUCK.

"John, John," yelled Mariar, "the old duck's pitching her ducklings into the creek, and they'll all get drowned!"

Sure enough, when John got there the old Muscovy grabbed the last little quack by the neck and fired him over the bank.

Gentle reader, if your old quack does the same stunt don't risk your life to save the little rubbernecks. Mamma Muscovy is just giving them their first swimming lesson. And don't be surprised if she flies to the housetop and, storklike, builds her nest on the chimney. In South America, where they are wild, they nest in the highest trees.

MUSCOVY DRAKE.

They lay fifty greenish eggs a season, incubation requiring about five weeks.

Drakes weigh from ten to twelve pounds and ducks from six to eight.

They are pure white or glossy blue black and white.

They have caruncles on their face, like a turkey, and often molt bare, so that hunters may pick them right up.

The drakes are great fighters. When angry they raise their crest, wiggle their tails, hiss and charge.

They are the oddest, most ornamental and finest table ducks.

"Not fit to eat," replies Mrs. Know-it-all. "Our first Muscovy duck was our last. It was too strong. We threw it to the pigs."

MUSCOVY NESTING.

But listen, lady. Never get too old to learn. Muscovy isn't from Moscow, but from musk.

This funny duck has musk glands in its rump, and to keep this musk from spoiling the flesh it must be killed at both ends.

First cut off the head, then the rump, roast it well and it's a trump.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

If you have duck eggs for sale there is a market for them among the Hebrew population in the cities. They bring more than hen eggs, and a card to a reliable egg firm will bring information as to prices and shipping.

As a proof that it pays to feed green food we need only state that in a year's test with 200 hens at the West Virginia experiment station 100 hens fed greens with their grain and meat ration laid 11,452 eggs and the other 100 on an exclusive grain and meat ration laid 9,039.

An egg eater will pick at a china egg for awhile, roll it, tramp on it, squint at it, swear at it and walk away in disgust. After that she'll likely not bother real eggs. Just like the time when a boy, slick, in a bag hid a brick and you gave it a good kick.

Blackhead has not only destroyed nearly all the turkeys in New England, but a similar disease has spread to quail, and the Massachusetts fish and game commission is investigating the matter, as are Dr. Theobald Smith and Dr. E. E. Tyzzer of Harvard medical school and Dr. Philip Hadley of the Rhode Island experiment station.

When you are sure your fowls have cholera and you wish to kill the bacteria that gets into the drinking water, use stone fountains, in which you put corrosive sublimate, 1 part to 1,500 parts water.

In England the "Chantecler" craze has so caught the women that "barnyard bonnets," in the shape of big roosters with red combs, are worn for hats. If it just reaches this side and our girls buy our big roosters at an Easter bonnet price, oh, how nice!

The duty on hen's eggs is 5 cents, but bird's eggs come in free. A fancier importing eggs requested a decision from Washington as to whether a hen is a bird or what. After long and tedious deliberation it was decided that a hen is a bird, but as she is a hen also the duty must be paid. The fellow who made that decision is a bird also, maybe a cro-cus.

When Antoinette Miller, a girl of Ithaca, N. Y., drank bichloride of mercury in mistake her mother gave her a quart of warm water and then, rushing to the street, held up a grocer wagon and secured five dozens of eggs. She gave the whites of these eggs to the girl and saved her life. Just twenty minutes later and her daughter would have been dead. Better cut this out and keep eggs handy.

THEIR MISTAKE.

Some Very Strange Oversights by the Home Officials.

The fact that the words "and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas" were omitted from the printed copy of King George's proclamation is, by no means, the only remarkable instance of official oversight. In fact, only a few days later King Edward was described, on the breast-plate of his coffin, as having departed this life in the ninth, instead of tenth, year of his reign.

This curious instance of oversight reminds one that when peace was proclaimed after the late Boer War the Plymouth folk were so enthusiastically engaging themselves in celebrating the occasion that they forgot to send word about the notable event to the lighthouse-keepers at the Eddystone! And for eleven days those quiet men, guarding the lonely lighthouse, wondered what all the display of rockets, colored lights, etc., they saw night after night might mean.

Even more extraordinary was an oversight of the Foreign Office many years ago. The inhabitants of one of the Palmerston Islands, in the Pacific, under British rule, were dependent for much of their food—apart from what their own island produced—on the shipping supplies arranged for them by the Foreign Office in Whitehall. But for nine months not a ship came to the islands, and as the extreme heat was killing the cocoanut trees and every other eatable fruit, the plight of the islanders was desperate. The people were without food, and the actual owner of the islands died from want; whilst most of the residents were perishing, and many had actually died, when at last a vessel named The Empire, chanced to call, and thus enabled them to get some food. Then it was discovered that the Whitehall [illegible] tirely forgotten to arrange for the usual supplies during that year!

Australian officials have similarly forgotten their duty before to-day. The food supply of the lighthouse men on Percy Island, off the coast of Queensland, is supposed to be delivered once each quarter. But after June, 1900, no food arrived there at all until a British vessel, happening to pass the island in October, landed a boat crew by chance at the lighthouse. Then the sailors were astounded to find there some twenty men, nearly all insane for want of food!

Once, the British House of Commons surprised the inhabitants of Chelmsford by passing a bill which provided in one clause for the rebuilding of a new goal there, and then went on to order, in a subsequent clause, that the new gaol should be erected on the site of the old one, and that as much of the old material as possible should be used in building the new place.

So far, so good. But when Parliament, in its wisdom, added yet another clause, directing that the old gaol should be allowed to remain, and still do duty until the new one was ready for use, things began to get a trifle complicated.

To Get Household Statistics.

A novel method has been adopted to ascertain the cost of living in various parts of Australia. To this end the Commonwealth statistician is getting into communication with persons willing to keep a record of their household expenses from July 1 next to June 30, 1911, the year of the census. Persons who forward their names are to be supplied with a suitably prepared book in which to keep the record, which when completed, is to be placed in the envelope provided, and posted to the Commonwealth Statistician.

Despair and Despondency

No one but a woman can tell the story of the suffering, the despair, and the despondency endured by women who carry a daily burden of ill-health and pain because of disorders and derangements of the delicate and important organs that are distinctly feminine. The tortures so bravely endured completely upset the nerves if long continued.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive cure for weakness and disease of the feminine organism.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG,
SICK WOMEN WELL.

It allays inflammation, heals ulceration and soothes pain. It tones and builds up the nerves. It fits for wifehood and motherhood. Honest medicine dealers sell it, and have nothing to urge upon you as "just as good." It is non-secret, non-alcoholic and has a record of forty years of cures. ASK YOUR NEIGHBORS. They probably know of some of its many cures.

If you want a book that tells all about woman's diseases, and how to cure them at home, send 31 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce to pay cost of mailing only, and he will send you a free copy of his great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser—revised, up-to date edition, in paper covers. In handsome cloth-binding, 50 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.

Could it be possible he had carried this, the warrant of his doom, with him over the seas — that he had placed it carefully away with other papers — little dreaming that it should one day rise in judgment against him? If he could have but known, how easy to have destroyed it! Had that been destroyed the words of men against him would have availed little.

"As your confession is full and open," again said Captain Chandos, "so shall the mercy meted out to you be liberal."

Standing there before the men whom he had treated as his inferiors, with bowed head and white lips, he told the story of his sin and his betrayal.

"I did not mean it," he said. "I had no intention when Alan Wayne trusted me, of betraying him. The temptation came afterward, and it was strong — too strong for me. I tried to believe there was little harm in taking another's place. I gave up something, too. And now I have lost all."

Word for word he told his infamous story, never seeking to screen or save himself. He told the story of Esther's love, her devotion, her fidelity under the most cruel wrong that man could inflict on woman. He told of the deadly shock that came to him when Edith's calm eyes rested upon him and her clear, pitiless voice said: "This is not Alan Wayne." He told of his great, passionate love for Lady Blanche — but Lord Damar rose with dignity new to him.

"You must not sully my daughter's name by the mention of anything so utterly odious as your love," he said.

Paul Lynne raised his eyes and looked at his adversary calmly. This was the man to whom he had lent countless thousands, whom he had loaded with benefits, who had been content to live at his expense, and to use the revenues of Carsdale freely, as though they had been his own.

"I have a right to give my opinion," continued the earl, "and it is this: that mercy shown such a man is utterly out of place. What mercy has he shown? You may thank him, Chandos, for the loss of everything you valued; I, for having dragged my daughter's name through the mire. Justice, and not mercy, should be dealt out to him.'

"Lord Damar," said Paul Lynne, "I have befriended you, I have saved you from the rage of angry creditors your name from the bankrupts' list; you have no compassion for me?"

"None," said the old man. "The greatest stain of my not over-clean hand is that it has never touched gold from yours."

"I have been most deeply injured," said Captain Chandos, "and I must remember Alan Wayne's words—'Every act of kindness you show to him is shown to me.' Let us forego all vengeance; let the man who has injured both living and dead go forth free and uninjured. He is punished bitterly enough."

"I am of the same opinion," said Paul Westerne, gravely.

"I go still further," said Mr. Grey. "Alan Wayne bids me give this man a fair start in life. I am an old man now, but I have seen many things.

SOUTH AFRICA'S CHAMPION.

All Round Athlete of the New Dominion Is a Versatile Man.

It must be admitted that the winning of over 600 prizes in the athletic field by a man who is not yet twenty-eight years of age is in itself a wonderful record. When it is mentioned, however, that these prizes have been won in such a variety of sports as long-distance running, jumping, wrestling, boxing, cycling, football, roller-skating, throwing the cricket-ball and hammer, and putting the shot, the record becomes even more astonishing.

Mr. W. W. J. Ewins, however, the all-round athlete of South Africa, who holds this record, and is at present contemplating a walking tour round the entire coast of Great Britain, regards it very lightly. "Nature," he said to an interviewer recently, "was very kind in providing me with a fine frame and a particularly healthy body. And being imbued with a spirit of athleticism, what was more natural than that I should have tried to excel in sport?"

"But, then, Mr. Ewins, a great deal is due to your own training?"

"That is quite true; but I seemed to take to athletics like a duck takes to water. I specialized to a certain extent in running and walking, but I was always very fond of a change, and that, I suppose, is why I developed certain all-round skill. As a matter of fact, I could not even remain true to athletics, for in my early days I became a jockey and won a good many races, not only on the flat, but over the sticks, until increased weight made me give it up.

"My most successful seasons in the athletic field? Well, it is difficult for me to say. I should think, however, that my best three years were in 1897, 1898, and 1899. In the first year I was presented with a gold medal and a gold watch by the late President Kruger for winning most events at an athletic gathering, while in 1898 Lady Hutchinson presented me with a diamond medal. According to a little memo book I have, I find that I won seven open boxing and four wrestling competitions, got three firsts in sculling races, and won three road cycling races. I finished up the year by breaking my ankle through giving exhibitions of high jumping on roller-skates. It was shortly after this that I gave up jockeying owing to increase of weight.

"In 1899 I devoted myself entirely to athletics, and gave many boxing and wrestling exhibitions, being presented with a gold medal by Lord Milner, and then I met with another accident, being foolish enough to try and loop the loop on a bicycle, the result being two broken ribs and two smashed fingers."

At one time Mr. Ewins was champion cyclist of South Africa, and considerable interest was aroused when, in 1902, he started the National Sporting Club in Johannesburg. He himself entered all the principal events; and it was about this time that he distinguished himself by winning a forty-five mile race, and came in third in a sixty-four mile race.

Mr. Ewins was entered for the second Marathon race of 1908. A fortnight previous to the race he was unfortunately bitten on the leg by a dog. In spite of this, however, he was amongst those to finish the race, although not amongst the first arrivals.

Lotteries.

Lotteries are almost as old as history itself. It is certain that they were known to the Greeks and Romans, and the custom descended, through Italy, to modern times. In the Italian republics of the sixteenth century the lottery principle was applied to encourage the sale of merchandise, the lotto of Florence and that of Venice being well known. The first lotteries in France were licensed in 1656 by Francis I. In England the earliest lotteries sanctioned by the Government were for such purposes as the repair of harbors and docks, about 1569.

SCOTT AND HIS SHIP.

Antarctic Explorer Has the Best Expedition Ever Sent Out.

The Terra Nova is bound for the Antarctic. She carries the majority of those who are to accompany Capt. Scott in his endeavor to reach the South Pole. Capt. Scott rightly counts himself leader of the most thoroughly organized expedition in the history of Polar exploration. Given the man, the expedition will not only be the most thoroughly organized but also the most determined that has ever set out.

Capt. Robert Falson Scott is a man of keen sentiment and enormous enthusiasms, but they are hidden below the surface of a very placid and unconcerned demeanor. The traditions of the naval service on the one hand and of the great explorers on the other inspire him. Clean-shaven, with a strong and determined face, tight, firm lips, and keen but kindly light-blue eyes, he is just forty-two years of age, his birthday being on June 6th. He was thirty-three when he first set out towards the South Pole in the wonderful but too expensive and not over-satisfactory Discovery, in which he made the great expedition which penetrated farthest south for the time being.

As a good captain he liked the Discovery, despite her faults, and if sentiment had been given full opportunity he might have taken her with him this time. By a curious coincidence she lies in the docks, and was almost within hailing distance of the Terra Nova before she sailed. The Discovery is in the service of the Hudson Bay Co, to whom she was sold when she had done her work in the Antarctic. But now the commander is quite in love with his Terra Nova, which he thinks the best ship in the world for her purpose.

The first time he ever saw her he resented her appearance. He was out in the lonely Antarctic then, cut off from the world. It was on a sunny morning in January six years ago, the Discovery was fast in the ice, and her situation, and indeed that of the whole expedition, was a little serious. The Government had guessed this, and had sent this old but carefully chosen whaling vessel racing through the Mediterranean and Suez Canal, tugged along at top speed by cruisers and more cruisers until, with the other relief ship, the Morning, she came up to the edge of the Antarctic ice pack. Capt. Scott and some of his companions were discussing after breakfast their plans for the day, when suddenly they saw a ship. Then Wilson exclaimed, "Why, there's another!" and there was the Terra Nova. The sight meant safety and home again, but there were considerations which made the reflection not completely delightful. The Antarctic has its claims and its hold, and the explorer has a very sensitive pride; and so, before he turned in that night, Capt. Scott wrote in his diary, "In spite of the good home news and the pleasure of seeing old friends again, I was happier last night than I am to-night."

However, he marked the Terra Nova for her sterling worth, and he paid $60,000 for her when he determined on this new expedition. In the meantime she had gone back to her whaling and he had returned to the navy to command battleships and cruisers. A fair amount of money has now been spent on her — most carefully spent—and she has become a ship of good looks and some excellent conveniences. She has to accommodate nearly sixty officers, scientists, and crew, and with the three years' provisions that she takes with her—all selected this time with the most exceptional thoroughness and packed in special cases so that no case is too heavy for one man to carry—there is no room to spare for anyone or anything. And yet the scientists' laboratories and special departments which have been constructed in her are big enough and well fitted and complete. There is nothing wanting.

SPORT IN ENGLAND.

A Pheasant Run Is Not a Branch of the Poultry Business.

"A Plain American In England," by Charles T. Whitefield, is a highly amusing diatribe on the gentle art of British entertainment. It appears in the American Magazine, and in the course of some descriptions of English customs the author relates the following incident, which happened at a pheasant run:

"A friend for whom I have a great admiration took me to see a pheasant run. The place looked just like a big chicken yard such as we have at home. There were hundreds of the birds feeding on scraps and grain thrown to them by the keeper. I had seen strings of these birds hanging up in the markets for sale at low prices, had bought their eggs in the swell restaurants at high prices, and I naturally supposed that this trade was conducted like any other branch of the poultry business. When you have been in England a short time you realize that you must approach the subject of trade or business with some delicacy, but I longed to know the modus operandi of poultry packing among the swells. I wondered if they could teach our Chicago stockyards anything. So I asked the keeper in my broadest English:

"'How do you collect and ship these birds?'

"'Collect 'em, sir?'

"'Yes,' I said, 'how do you kill them and get them to market?'

"'We don't kill 'em. We send in beaters and shoot 'em. It's great sport, sir!'

"That seemed to me a disgusting proposition—to beat a flock of tame, harmless pets to death and shoot them besides—and I remonstrate:

"'Why don't you simply wring their necks with a quick twist of the wrist, insuring a rapid and painless death, and then'—

"But my friend grasped me violently by the arm and drew men abruptly away. I felt badly about it, because this good and valuable host said it would be at least twenty years before he could look that gamekeeper in the face with tranquillity."

TOO GOOD A SHAVE.

It Lulled Budd to Sleep While the Price of Stocks Tumbled.

One of the anecdotes in Joseph L. King's "History of the San Francisco Stock Exchange Board" is as follows:

While stocks were quite low during a spell in 1873 a discovery of ore was made in Ophir, the stock advancing in price. It was the policy of those in control of a Comstock mine to keep secret any improvement until they could secure for themselves a good quantity of the stock.

Budd heard of this Ophir discovery and bought some stock, and as the price advanced from $16 to $85 the profits on his purchases at low figures enabled him to buy more stocks. Being quite a plunger, he purchased in all 2,500 shares. As the stock still advanced to higher figures he sold about 1,500 shares, leaving him a balance of 1,000 shares when the stock reached $82, which would have given him quite a large profit if all were sold at that figure.

During the recess that day he determined to sell the remainder, which would give him quite a profit. The afternoon session was devoted to the calling of outside stocks, occupying half an hour, after which the members would call up, through the chairman, any of the Comstock shares. Budd, thinking he had time sufficient during that first half hour to get shaved, sat down in a barber's chair and, being quite flush, gave the barber $5, directing him to give him a good shave. It turned out to be too good a shave, as Budd went to sleep, and the barber, being well paid, devoted quite a time in making his customer appear respectable. Budd woke up, looked at his watch and made a rush for the board. He ascertained that Ophir had been called and had broken so badly that when his stock was sold he only obtained $10 a share for it.

He always claimed that that share cost him just $10,000.

Getting Into a Life Buoy.

The average person in danger of drowning usually attempts to lift a life buoy over his head, with the result that he is immediately plunged deeper into the water. A good swimmer can do this with a sudden upward jerk, but with the nonswimmer it is almost an impossible feat. What he should do when he has seized the buoy is to place both hands, palms downward, on the buoy on the part nearest the body, pressing it downward and slightly away, when the farther part of the buoy will rise out of the water and actually fall over the head. The arms can then be put through easily, "and there you are."

Just the Same.

"Try one of these light biscuits," the bride suggested. "I thought they might be a welcome change from bread."

"Fine!" exclaimed the young husband. "Just like those we got at the bakery when I was living at home."

"That's where I got them," she said. —Buffalo Express.

A Softened Expression.

"Father," said the small boy, "what is a 'euphemism?'"

"It is something, my son, that enables a man to say he is a free lance instead of admitting that he is out of a job."—Washington Star.

A cruel story runs on wheels, and every hand oils the wheels as they run.—Eliot.

MISS HALLOWAY OF CHICAGO

And the Way She Became Mrs. Parker of New York.

By MARY WOOD.

She was so decidedly petite that even when she drew her figure to its greatest height the assumption of dignity was laughable. But her eyes sparkled dangerously as she faced the bellboy.

The bellboy was impressed. He eyed the door as if meditating escape before she proceeded to stronger methods.

"Now, see here," she exclaimed belligerently, "this is the third note I have written to the office, and I want a reply this time."

"If you would go down to the desk," the bellboy insinuated apologetically, "Mr. Parker"—

"No; I will not go down to the desk," Miss Halloway interrupted decidedly. "That head clerk Parker, or whatever name he answers to, shall come up here or I will know the reason why."

The bellboy departed promptly. "And, by the way," she called after him, "just hustle along some telegraph blanks on your way back. I have a few things to say to my father and some of his friends concerning the lack of accommodations at the Great Eastern."

"Oh, Belle, Belle," wailed Mrs. Halloway, whose ample form had collapsed in one corner of a red plush sofa, "how can you make such a disturbance? Now, if your father was only here. But the two of us alone, without a protector!" And she rolled her eyes distractedly.

"Protector fiddlesticks!" said the energetic Miss Halloway. "Have you no spirit, mother?" She began to pace the floor excitedly. "Would you be treated as a nobody—you, the wife of Thomas P. Halloway? Consider your position."

Mrs. Halloway doubtless considered her position. She was absolutely at the mercy of her daughter's scathing tongue; therefore she maintained a discreet silence.

"They must be taught the deference due to us, the Halloways of Chicago," said the girl. She was very young and possessed of the follies as well as the graces of youth.

The bellboy now reappeared, holding out a handful of telegraph blanks like a yellow flag of truce. "Mr. Parker," he averred, "he says—he's coming."

Miss Halloway seized upon the blanks and flung herself into a chair beside the writing table. "There will probably be ample time to get off the telegrams before he comes. Things don't quickstep at the Great Eastern."

"But, Belle," Mrs. Halloway protested after the bellboy had closed the door in reverential fashion, "had you not better slip on another waist, Mr. Parker"—

"Mr. Parker," her daughter interrupted superciliously, "is a hotel clerk, a servant. This dressing sack is good enough for him."

She dashed off a telegram and read it aloud reflectively:

> Dear Dad—We are being shamefully treated at the Great Eastern. If things are not remedied we will change to the Grand tonight. But don't worry. I am running this affair, and you can bet on me. ARABELLA HALLOWAY.

"I think that will make things hot for the Great Eastern," she said triumphantly. She did not hear the knock at the door nor its noiseless opening. Her mother's voice startled her. "Belle, here is Mr. Parker, but remember"—

Mrs. Halloway's voice trailed off into a deprecating silence. Miss Halloway straightened up in her chair with the laudable pride of a judge about to confer sentence.

"Mr. Parker," she said impressively, "I have called you here to complain of the treatment to which we have been subjected by this hotel." She began deliberately enough, but the words soon tumbled over each other in her vehemence. "How dare you," she cried—"how dare you put us into this stuffy back room, an eight dollar a day room, when we have always been accustomed to an eighteen dollar suit? Do you know who we are—the Halloways of Chicago? Is not our money as good as or better than other people's?"

The clerk remained silent. And now for the first time Miss Holloway looked up—far up—and encountered the serene gaze of his brown eyes.

Mr. Parker, the clerk, was tall—unusually tall. But it was not merely his inches which gave authority of bearing; it was his self confidence, his mental poise. Intuitively Miss Halloway of Chicago realized that here was a man who would always be the master of circumstances, no matter how adverse the contrivings of fate. Her judicial complacency vanished, and shame, hot cheeked and defiant, stood as a culprit at the bar, for a twinkle lurked in the cool depths of the brown eyes as he said easily:

"I can agree with you, Miss Halloway of Chicago, but only in part. Your money is as good as that of other people, but no better. At the Great Eastern first come must be first served, and that," with a half bow, "is why we have been forced to give this room to Miss Halloway of Chicago."

His tone was courteous, but the girl felt the sting of underlying reproof. It was a new experience for her. All her twenty years had not discovered a person who should dare to cross her. The great T. P. Halloway himself lacked the necessary courage, or, rather, he openly encouraged her willfulness as a reincarnation of his own indomitable spirit. As for Mrs. Halloway, she was always a minus quantity on such occasions as demanded firmness. She preferred to be comfortably seated and wring her hands gently. Tears came easily and in nowise interfered with her heart action or gradual increase of avoirdupois.

Now she looked entreatingly at her daughter and murmured, "Oh, Belle, don't, don't!"

Miss Halloway did not hear. Her world seemed falling about her ears. For the first time the shameful helplessness of her sex overcame her. But woman's wit came to her aid. Her lips trembled piteously, and two large tears ran down her cheeks.

This was a new method of warfare. The redoubtable Mr. Parker stood aghast, then, as became a prudent general, threw out scout lines.

"Really, Miss Halloway," he said soothingly, "the whole thing is a trifle which we have foolishly exaggerated. In the morning you will laugh at your fancied grievances."

But still the girl's head was hidden in her folded arms, and her shoulders heaved. Mrs. Halloway sobbed, swaying comfortably back and forth. "If your father were only here!" she wailed.

Mr. Parker looked from one to the other despairingly. He was a young man. A woman's tears are sacred—to the chivalry of youth. He cast discretion to the winds and capitulated.

"Don't cry, Miss Halloway," he implored; "please don't. I think that perhaps I can arrange the matter. A personal friend of mine has one of the suits. Perhaps for you—yes, I am sure I can arrange it."

"On your word and honor?" asked Miss Halloway of Chicago.

"On my word of honor," he promised recklessly.

The girl lifted her head and laughed. She had not been crying at all. "You can stop your crying, mother," she said cheerfully; "it is all over with." She turned to the astonished Mr. Parker and extended her hand frankly. "And since you have acceded to my request," she said sweetly, "let me apologize for having asked in—well, a rather peremptory fashion. It is a way I have, unfortunately. Of course your promise holds good?"

"Of course," replied Mr. Parker a trifle stiffly. He could not avoid taking her outstretched hand. "Of course," he repeated more heartily as some mesmeric influence radiated from her finger tips to his. There was added respect as well as admiration in the brown eyes. He recognized her powers as a strategist.

Miss Halloway laughed. "I won, but I would not have if you had not been a gentleman. Mamma and I are very pleased to meet you, even in this informal fashion."

Mrs. Halloway beamed upon them. Peace and harmony were essential in her scheme of things.

And peace and harmony—and Mr. Parker—attended her and her daughter for the next few weeks. Mrs. Halloway beamed. Miss Halloway was radiant. Mr. Parker was assiduous—so assiduous, in fact, that Thomas P. Halloway on his advent on the scene felt called upon to interfere.

He did not hesitate, but Mr. Parker spoke first. It is a way youth has. And he did not mince matters. He struck straight from the shoulder.

"Mr. Halloway, I love your daughter; she loves me. We are going to be married. Have we your approval?"

"The mischief!" ejaculated the astounded T. P. Halloway. "Why, you're nothing but a hotel clerk. My daughter"— Words failed him.

Mr. Parker was quite unmoved. "She does not object," he said easily. "Some day I shall own this hotel; then you will not object."

T. P. Halloway glared at him. "I will," he snorted. "And the sooner you take yourself off the better."

"There is Belle to be considered," Mr. Parker insinuated gently. "She usually has her own way."

T. P. Halloway weakened visibly. "Yes; she usually does," he repeated more calmly.

And the matter of her marriage Mr. Parker insinuated gently. She did. And that is how Miss Halloway of Chicago became Mrs. Parker of New York.

Strange Death of Rival Stags.

Many records exist of the way in which rival stags have met their death when fighting for supremacy. Probably none is more strange than that described by Herr C. Drathmore of Charlottenburg in the Deutsche Jager-Zeitung. In 1908 the keepers on the Gelbensand shooting in Mecklenburg-Schwerin found a fine twelve pointer lying dead, apparently from antler thrusts and with both beams close together. Not far off was a smaller stag, a ten pointer, still living, but as its back was broken it was put out of its misery. On examination it was found that the antlers of the larger stag were torn out of the skull and the frontal bone was broken. The back of the smaller stag must have been broken in the struggle.

One of Mark Twain's Jokes.

Mark Twain played a practical joke on the first audience he addressed in England. This was in 1872, when his reputation was already high in that country, and the announcement of his lecture filled St. George's hall, London, to overflowing. Few if any of those present had ever seen the humorist. He came on the platform in evening dress, with the crestfallen air of a manager announcing a disappointment. "Mr. Clemens had landed at Liverpool and had fully hoped to reach London in time, but unfortunately missed his train." The audience started booing, but the boos changed into cheers and laughter when he added that, fortunately, Mark Twain was present and would do his best to fill the place of the defaulting Clemens.

WANDERLUST.

I hear insistent singing in a corner of my brain.
It must
Be the gust
Of the waking wanderlust.
What glimpses it is bringing of the orient—and Spain!
I scan
Quaint Japan
And bejeweled Hindustan.
I sway to rhythmic measures of a melody unknown.
"Why thrall,"
Is its call,
"To one land, O lord of all?
You, who yet are straight and strong,
Foot the highway! Life's not long!
Throw away your shriveled crust!
Waken!" sings the wanderlust.

"See where waters lap the sky,
Slave of poisoned city dust?
Far beyond is bright romance
Where the languid houris sigh.
Spurn the job and lose the chance!
Would you rot?
Would you rust?
Chained and cobwebbed would you die?
Waken!" sings the wanderlust.

"Oh, the breakers now are pounding on a Polynesian shore
To the rip
Of a ship
Throttled in the tempest's grip,
And the booming conch is sounding in the temples of Lahore,
And the lead
Bloody red
Stretches desert bandits dead.
And the slender palms are sighing by a sea of rippled gold
Where guitars
Lift the bars
Of a love song to the stars.
Out—oh, you yet are hale!
Out—to battle with the gale!
Out—to parry foeman's thrust!
Waken!" sings the wanderlust.

See where scarlet sinks the sun,
Slave of poisoned city dust?
Far beyond is where there's life,
Where the reckless deeds are done.
Stolen kiss and gleaming knife—
(Would you rot?
Would you rust?)
Ha, the glint along the gun!
"Waken!" growls the wanderlust.

SWORDS OF JAPAN

Old Samurai Blades Are Looked Upon as Sacred.

HANDLED WITH REVERENCE.

A Curious Formula of Etiquette Follows When "the Steel Bible of Bushido" Is Drawn From Its Sheath by a Hand Which Grasps It In Peace.

If one were in a friend's house in Japan and should ask to examine one of the old samurai swords that rest in the lacquered sword rack in a place of honor there a curious formula of etiquette would be followed by the host.

He would go to a closet and return with a little square of silk in his hand. This he would wrap about the sharkskin handle of the sheathed sword before touching his bare hand to the sheath. Then, with his right hand grasping the silk covered handle and the fingers of his left gingerly raising the lacquered hilt from the rack, the Japanese host would lift the sword to the level of his forehead and bow to it.

All this in reverential spirit and with utmost gravity. The square of silk, preserved for no purpose but this and having its own name in the Japanese vocabulary, is to prevent the defilement of the handle by a hand which grasps it in peace. The bow is meant for the spirit of the swordsmith who forged this weapon. The reverence is for the sword itself, "soul of the samurai," in the Japanese poetical conception and aptly called by foreigners "the steel Bible of Bushido."

But this is only the beginning of the formality. When the Japanese host unsheaths the blade he does it with the edge toward his own body and the point directed away from his guest. When the guest receives the sword in his own hands he must be careful to keep the outer edge always away from the direction of his friend the host. If he wishes to examine both sides of the blade he must even turn his back so that never will the menace of the sharpened edge be directed toward his friend.

After the examination is completed the sword is returned to its scabbard, and the owner receives it with another bow and places it once more on its rack.

The etiquette of the sword is no empty thing. With the high spirited Japanese, who have not forgotten the many centuries of chivalry and of hand fighting behind them, the delicately curved and curiously welded sword of the samurai has a significance almost sacred. There is a philosophy of the sword no less stern than the use of the weapon.

In the old days when the Japanese fighters wore the war masks and the steel armor seen nowadays in the curiosity shops the boy was taught that as the shining blade must be kept free from spot and corruption, so must his soul be ever clean. Neglect of the blade brings rust; neglect of the soul an impure character.

Then the sharp edge was held not only as a constant guardian of personal safety and honor, but as a sacred disciplinarian to punish whenever its possessor stepped from the narrow path of the Yamato spirit of chivalry. Again, the sword was emblematical of true gentility, which is never overbearing or vulgar in deportment, but sternly self repressive.

No man knows when first the forge for fighting weapons was set up in the dawn of Japanese history nor who was the man who first replaced the rude bronze blades of a primitive folk by the tempered steel of the Yamato blade. There is in the imperial collection of swords at the castle of Nara the weapon worn by the Crown Prince Shotoku, who compiled the constitution of seventeen articles in A. D. 693, the oldest sword known in Japan. From that weapon, which was straight and not curved as all other swords of Nippon are, down to the fall of the Tokugawa shogunate in the middle of the last century there is an unbroken history of the art of the swordsmith. Twelve centuries of recorded art in swordmaking and the names of over 10,000 makers constitute the history of the sword in Japan.

The Japanese blade, placed almost on a par with the Damascus product in art and utility, differs from the Arabian weapon in one material detail of manufacture. Instead of having a uniform high temper, which gives the remarkable flexibility possessed by the Damascus blade, the Japanese sword has two tempers, a hard and a mild steel.

The edge of the blade is hard with the finest temper, the body and back of a milder temper, sufficient to give some elasticity. A Japanese sword cannot be bent half double with the pressure of a hand; it is nearly rigid.

Though sword manufacture has ceased to be in Japan today outside of the government arsenals, which turn out only the accepted military blade of the modern army, the country is filled with prized relics of the past art, and these are relics which the Japanese will not sell. A possessor of one of the old swords, keen and blue white in luster as the day it was forged, would sell his house, even himself maybe, before he would part with his Iron Bible of Bushido for money.—Japan Magazine.

ROSE TO THE OCCASION.

It Was the Chance of a Lifetime, and She Made the Most of It.

The burglar hesitated. Back of him was a sheer drop of twenty-five feet to the ground. In front of him was a determined woman, grasping in her hand a huge revolver. She covered him steadily.

"I won't shoot," she said, "if you will remain still."

She advanced upon him and, poking the muzzle of the gun in his face, reached into his pocket and pulled out his revolver.

"Come in."

The burglar obediently stepped inside the room. All his courage was gone.

"Sit down," said the woman.

He sat down.

She got a huge ball of heavy cord from her bureau and spent the next twenty minutes in tying him up.

Then she pointed out of the window. "Is that your wagon out there behind the barn?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Thought you would carry away my silver in it?"

"Yes, ma'am."

The woman called her husband, who had been hiding behind the baby's crib in the next room.

"Here, John," she said, "take some of this furniture out."

John came in and got to work. The burglar watched with curious eyes. Suddenly his face blanched. He looked out of the window and saw in the light of the moon what John was carrying.

"What are you doing to me?" he asked.

The woman began cutting his cords.

"I'm going to load you up with all of the old eyesores that we have had in the house for these many years," she said merrily—"all the furniture presented to us at Christmas by kind hearted relatives, all the prizes we have taken at card parties, all the family portraits—everything that we have been simply dying to get rid of."—Life.

CURE FOR LOSS OF MEMORY.

Case of an American Woman Married Abroad and an Accent.

"Nothing disgusts me more," said a woman who goes abroad every summer, "than to meet in Europe Americans who seem to be ashamed of their own language. I have often come across them, but a woman I met in Carlsbad last year took the palm.

"She was introduced to me as the Countess Komoffsky or some name that sounded like that. She married a Russian or a Pole about three years before, and so far as I can gather she had hardly been any nearer Europe than a New York table d'hote before that time. She looked American, but her English was all broken into bits. She did not even say 'the,' but pronounced it 'ze.' She had great difficulty in recollecting phrases, and the result at times was a lot of French.

"Next morning I was breakfasting in the Kaiserpark with a party of shawl wrapped Americans who had drunk the requisite number of glasses from the Sprudel or the Marktbrunnen and had walked out according to prescription. One of those at the table was a New York physician who is none the less popular because he is frank in speech almost to brutality and will not stand for affectation. The countess came along and was invited to join the party. The doctor, it turned out, had known her since she was a child.

"Somebody asked her a question, and she started to reply with that accent of hers. I saw the doctor fidget. Then she made another remark in half French. The doctor said something that sounded like a swear. Then he blurted out:

"'For heaven's sake, Maria Smith, you don't mean to say that three years in Europe have made you forget your native tongue?'

"There was a hush, and then some of the women in the party smiled, but when the countess next spoke it was in purest United States."—New York Sun.

Hard to Check.

It was the young hubby's first tour through the big department store.

"What room is that?" he asked innocently when they reached the second floor.

"Why, that is where they check babies," elucidated his wife.

And then young hubby looked at the struggling infant in his arms and the buttons and pins it had dislocated and said simply:

"I wish they'd try to check this one."—Chicago News.

A BROKEN DRIVING ROD.

The Disaster Most Dreaded by the Locomotive Engineer.

The close calls that whiten the engineer's hair are mostly due to some one else's error or oversight which he cannot foresee or prevent. That many of these close calls do not result fatally is due to the engineer's swift and skillful meeting of the emergency.

The great driving wheels on which most of the enormous weight on the locomotive rests are connected by massive jointed bars of forged steel. The ends of these are attached to the wheels about halfway between the axis and circumference. It is through these bars, called driving rods, that the wheels receive their impulse from the imprisoned steam. These rods weigh thousands of pounds each. Occasionally one of their fastenings will break, and then every revolution of the wheel to which the other end is attached will send the rod swinging like a titan's flail, beating down 300 strokes a minute. Nothing can withstand these awful blows. They tear up the track below and shatter the engine above, especially the cab where rides the engineer. No disaster comes so unexpectedly and is so much dreaded as this. Almost invariably it happens when the engine is running at high speed. When a driver breaks it is a miracle if the men in the cab escape with their lives. If they do survive and by their heroism succeed in stopping the train and avoiding a wreck despite the rain of blows from this huge flail of steel their act brings forth a greater measure of praise than almost any other form of bravery that the railroad knows.

Only the other day one of the driving rods of a fast passenger locomotive broke while the train was running more than sixty miles an hour down the steep grades of Pickerel mountain. In an instant the whirling bar of steel had smashed the cab and broken the controlling mechanism, so that it was impossible to bring the train to a stop by ordinary means. The great locomotive lunged forward like a runaway horse that had thrown its rider. In some way, however, Lutz, the engineer, had escaped injury. He crept to the opposite side of the cab and climbed out through the little window upon the boiler to try to reach some of the controlling apparatus from the outside. He was working himself astride along the scorching boiler when suddenly the engine struck a curve, which it took at terrific speed. The shock half threw the engineer from his perilous position, but he saved himself by grasping the bell rope. Then he worked himself down along the uninjured side of the swaying locomotive to where he could open one of the principal steam valves. A cloud of vapor rushed forth with a tremendous roar. Although robbed of its power, the locomotive did not slacken speed until it reached the bottom of the grade. Then little by little the thrashing of the great diving rod, which was pounding the upper part of the engine to pieces, grew slower, and finally it stopped. No one was killed or injured, and not a passenger in the long train knew until it was over of the danger that had been avoided so narrowly. — Thaddeus S. Dayton in Harper's Weekly.

A Rare Old Book.

The second book printed in the English language was "The Game and Playe of the Chess," which the title page says was "Fynyshid the last day of Marche, the yer of our lord god a thousand foure hondred and LXXIIIj." Only twelve copies of the work are now known to exist. In 1813 an Englishman of the name of Alchorne sold his copy for a sum equal to $270 in United States currency. Fifty-six years later, in 1869, the same volume (an imperfect copy) was sold for $2,150. The British museum has refused an offer of $10,000 for its copy, which is imperfect to the extent of having seven leaves missing.

The Making of Words.

Dean Swift protested against "speculations, operations, preliminaries, ambassadors, pallisadoes, communication, circumvallation, battalions," as newfangled expressions brought into common use by the war of his day. Today nearly all these are the most orthodox English. In his time "mob" seems commonly to have been written "mobb," and "phizz" also had the doubled consonant. Hence his complaint that "we cram one syllable and cut off the rest, as the owl fattened her mice after she had bit off their legs to prevent them from running away."

KING AS AN ANGLER.

His Majesty Is an Enthusiastic Wielder of the Rod.

If Izaak Walton could be re-incarnated it is quite certain that King George would have no greater admirer or more loyal subject than the genial "Father of Angling," who has never had a more enthusiastic disciple than His Majesty.

King Edward was an expert wielder of the rod, and caught many a fine salmon in the waters of the Dee and the Tweed; but, as old Donald Morgan used to say, His Majesty was "not awfu' enthusiastic," a description which, we may be sure, Donald Stewart, King George's devoted companion and henchman on many a fishing expedition, would never apply to the present occupant of the throne of England.

"I love a gun," King George confessed recently, "but I am never quite so happy as when I am fishing the pools of the Dee, with the long day before me." And it is while fishing these pools in the royal preserves of Abergeldie and Balmoral, remote from courts and the crowds of men, that His Majesty has spent some of the most delightful days of his life.

Every spring for many years past the King has spent several weeks at Abergeldie, indulging to the full in his favorite pastime. Usually with only one companion, Sir Charles Cust, he makes his headquarters at a small, two-storeyed house, Abergeldie Mains, a few yards distant from the ancient castle. Here he leads the simple, primitive life, rising early, faring plainly, and living entirely for his sport. He usually starts at about ten o'clock in the morning, with his companion and a couple of attendants—Donald Stewart, His Majesty's head gamekeeper, and Arthur Grant, the gillie, have mostly been his companions of the humbler sort—and he devotes the whole day to the rod, smoking mild cigarettes almost incessantly.

About noon a carriage brings luncheon to the pools where His Majesty is working, and after a smoke and rest on the bank fishing is resumed as long as the light lasts, when the return for dinner is made. A post-prandial cigar and a gossip over the day's sport follow, and then it is early to bed for a good night's rest before the next day's fishing.

It was at these waters of Abergeldie that the King first learnt the gentle art of wielding a rod, nearly forty years ago, with his father and John Brown as mentors, and he still recalls his delight at landing his first fish one spring day in the early 'sixties, and Brown's enthusiastic "Guid! Ye'll mak a braw feesher some day, Prince Geordie."

The King, we are told, uses an 18-foot, split-cane, steel-centred rod, in preference to the greenheart beloved of Dee fishermen, and most of his fish have been taken with the fly. As a caster he has few equals, and he is an expert in every form of tackle. Not long ago, it is said, so keen was he on testing a new form of tackle which had been sent to St. James's Palace for his inspection that he actually left a levee which was in progress in order to gratify his curiosity.

The weather has no terrors for His Majesty, and during one terrible week of blizzards, frosts, and howling gales he was out all day at Abergeldie, and counted himself amply rewarded when, at the end of the week, he creeled a beauty of 9lb. with the very last cast of the day.

The last named is now little more than a nominal sovereign, but he is still on the roll of reigning monarchs. Little Countrywoman Forged Two Cheques.

A BOLD PLAN TO BEAT THE BANK WHICH FOR A TIME SUCCEEDED —$1,400 INVOLVED—DETECTION OF ONE FORGERY LEADS TO ANOTHER.

The following interesting article appeared in the Smith's Falls Record:

It took a meek, innocent looking little woman from the country to stir up things in town yesterday and today, and this she certainly succeeded in doing. About 11.30 o'clock yesterday morning a woman stopped two young boys, Percy Banks and W. Hogan, on the street near the Bank of Ottawa, and showing them a cheque said she would give them each a dollar if they would go into the bank and get it cashed for her. Easy money like that did not often come their way and they closed the bargain by reaching for the cheque. It was made out payable to Oliver Coady, or bearer, was for five hundred dollars and was signed with the name of Theodore McKenny. Now Theodore McKenny lives about Lombardy and has a good sized bank account. Oliver Coady lives about two miles from him. When the little boy presented the cheque to the teller he promptly counted out fifty ten dollar bills and handed them out to him. The boys then went to the woman waiting outside and delivered the cash, getting in return one dollar each. Soon after the transaction the people in the bank began to think about it and decided, just to allay their suspicions, to telephone McKenny. This they did, but their suspicions were not allayed. On the contrary they were more aroused because they were informed by Mr. McKenny that he had not signed any such cheque. Then there was the search for the woman. She was found and the boys identified her, but she looked so innocently that she was allowed to go. She gave the name of Mrs. David McCall, and this is who she proved to be; the wife of David McCall, who lives next door to Theodore McKenny in the country beyond Lombardy. She is a woman of about 28 or 30 years of age and has three children. She started for home shortly afterwards on the Portland stage and on second thought the authorities in the bank decided that possibly she might know more than she seemed to, and not being able to find one of the town police force they sent Bailiff Polk after her in an automobile. The stage was overhauled on the Lombardy road and she was transferred to the automobile and brought back. She still protested her innocence and ignorance of the matter and looked the part. She spoke of a Coady girl who, she said, looked like her, and who was in town that day. The boys were again brought in and positively identified her as being the woman who had given them the cheque and to whom they had given the money. She was detained, but she looked so innocent and told so straight a story that notwithstanding what the boys said she seemed to have no connection whatever with the bold attempt to walk off with the bank's funds. After being cautioned she was given a chance yesterday afternoon to make a statement, but she steadfastly denied any knowledge of a cheque and insisted that the boys were mistaken. She was sent to Mr. Polk's house for safe keeping and orders given his women folk to search her thoroughly. This they soon after reported they had done but had found no trace of the money.

Meanwhile enquiry elicited the facts that she had spent about twenty dollars in a jewellery store and paid Dr. Anderson ten dollars, all the money being in Bank of Ottawa ten dollar bills. She also had three ten dollar bills in her hand bag of the same bank. There was also a new fountain pen and the jewelery she had bought in the bag. In addition there was a rather warm love letter expressing a great affection and an increasing longing for some one. The letter had never been mailed. She accounted for the money by saying that her husband had given it to her but when he was questioned last night he could not substantiate this.

She had stayed all night at Mr. Polk's house and this morning she showed signs of weakening. She asked that Dr. Anderson be sent for and when he arrived she confessed to him that she had got the money and still had it. He advised her to give it up and she said she would. He left the room for a minute and when he went back she had the money in her hand, fifty ten dollar bills with an elastic band around them. She was in the police court this morning on the charge of using a forged cheque knowing it to be forged, but was remanded until this evening until eight o'clock.

The investigation of this forgery has led to the discovery that about two weeks ago another cheque for nine hundred dollars, signed with Theodore McKenny's name, had been cashed at the same bank. This is also declared by Mr. McKenny to be a forgery, and now nobody can remember who drew the money on the other cheque. It is a clear nine hundred dollars that somebody has walked away with and now the question is what does the little woman now in custody know of the first forged cheque? Steps are being taken today to find out. Meantime there is much speculation as to how this unsophisticated country woman could of herself plan and carry out so bold a step as to forge a name to cheques for such large amounts and then negotiate them. She is the wife of a laboring man who has worked nearly all his life for Mr. McKenny. It is scarcely to be believed that she conceived the idea of depleting Mr. McKenny's bank account by means of forged cheques, and the suspicion is that she has been acting under instructions from others. There is a great mystery about it all but it will likely be uncovered now.

The article was taken from young Bly by the police. It is by no means a harmless weapon as it is capable of discharging a 22-calibre cartridge.

Mrs. Maybee Suicided With Paris Green.

UNFORTUNATE WOMAN, WHILE MENTALLY UNBALANCED, COMMITTED RASH ACT ON SATURDAY AFTERNOON.

On Saturday afternoon Mrs. King Maybee, an elderly lady who resided in Sidney Township, whilst suffering from mental aberration, took a dose of paris green, which caused her death a few hours after.

Deceased was, at the time, spending a few days with her sister, Mrs. Philip Denyes, Front of Sidney.

The condition of Mrs. Maybee was known to members of the family, and she was being watched for fear that she would commit a rash act. About 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon she went into the wood shed, and, in an incredibly short time, succeeded in mixing the poison in a cup and drank it. Medical aid from the city was secured as quckly as possible, but nothing could be done to save her life.

Mrs. Maybee, who was 62 years old, was born in the Township of Sidney, where she had resided all her life. Recently a barn, situated on Mr Maybee's farm, was destroyed by fire, which event seemed to have unbalanced his wife's mind.

She was a lady who was esteemed by all who knew her and her untimely demise is regretted by a large circle of relatives and friends. Besides the husband, one daughter, Mrs. A. Little, residing in Murray Township, survives.

A burly negro yesterday morning called at Mr. James McKee's residence on Bettes street, and asked for something to eat. Whilst a lunch was being prepared, the darkey left the premises suddenly, and with him went $2.50, which was lying on a table near the door. Are Auto Crazy.

New York can now easily claim the record as the greatest automobile using state, since its residents are purchasing machines at the rate of more than $1,500,000 worth a week, a figure which in a year amounts to considerably more than the interest on the whole national debt. According to the figures of registration in the office of the secretary of state at Albany, there are now more than 110,000 machines being operated in the state. The registration bureau has been literally swamped of late not only on account of the rate at which autos are being purchased, but also of the fact that the new automobile law goes into effect on the first of August, before which time every owner and operator must take out a new license.

Whole Crew Unconscious.

New York, Aug. 1.—Two days after leaving Barbados on July 28, the British steamer Ikalis sighted a sinking sloop flying signals of distress, and in a few minutes had come upon one of those mute histories that make the terror and the romance of the sea.

The sloop was the little Sunlight, a wandering cargo carrier between small ports of the Islands of Antigua and Barbados. Her master and crew of five on board, after on hour's work were revived. Then came the explanation. Capt. J. Frank, owner of the Sunlight, said that he had run into a fog a few hours out of Antigua, had lost his bearings, and for thirteen days he and his crew had been living on vinegar and sugar. How long they had been unconscious, before the Ikalis bore down on them, he did not know.

IT WAS DR. CRIPPEN

Fleeing Physician Arrested When the Montrose Arrived.

Inspector Dew and Two Canadian Officers Went Out to the Boat In a Tender—Were Disguised as Pilots—Crippen Was Standing at the Side of the Boat and Saw Them Coming —Locked In Staterooms.

Father Point, Que., Aug. 1.—Dr. Hawley Harvey Crippen and Ethel Clare Leneve, his stenographer, who fled from London after the disappearance of Belle Elmore, the doctor's wife, were arrested here yesterday aboard the Canadian Pacific liner Montrose, at the command of Inspector Dew of Scotland Yard.

The identification of the fugitives by the English detective marked the culmination of one of the most sensational flights in recent criminal records.

Accompanied by two Canadian officers he boarded the vessel at 8.30 o'clock yesterday morning, and fifteen minutes later both man and girl were locked in their state rooms, Crippen broken in spirit, but mentally relieved by the relaxed tension; the girl, garbed in boy's clothing, sobbing hysterically. They were no longer the "Rev. John Robinson and son," as booked from Antwerp on July 20.

After a brief delay, the Montrose continued her 160-mile journey up the river towards Quebec, where jail awaited the pair. Crippen is charged with the murder of an unknown woman. The girl is held as an accessory. They will be taken back to England on the steamship Royal George, leaving Quebec on Thursday.

The scene enacted near this little settlement was dramatic. Inspector Dew had spent a sleepless night at the Marconi operator's side, communicating through the fog with the Montrose.

At 4.30 a.m. the approaching ship's whistle was heard. It awakened the villagers and the newspaper men, who dressed hastily and waited in a drizzling rain for the liner's arrival.

Shortly after 7.30 o'clock the Montrose pushed her nose through the fog, and at 8.15 the pilot boat Eureka set out from shore. She carried a host of newspaper men and photographers, and as many townspeople as could crowd aboard. The inspector was not among them; he had embarked on the Eureka's small tender, accompanied by Chief McCarthy of the Quebec police and ex-Chief Denis of the same city.

All wore the garb of pilots, and over his florid face, Inspector Dew had pulled a pilot's visored cap. He did not wish Crippen to recognize him before he could approach and take advantage of the only avenue of escape—suicide. Four sailors quickly rowed the tender alongside the Montrose and Dew and his companions stepped aboard.

Crippen was standing near the rail talking with Dr. Stuart, the ship's surgeon. That he was nervous was indicative by his furtive glances and his remark to Dr. Stuart. "There are three pilots coming aboard," he said, nervously. "Is that not unusual?" The physician did not reply, but kept his eyes on the strangers, who walked rapidly toward them.

On nearing the Montrose Dew had spotted Crippen walking the deck and chatting to the ship's doctor, though the suspect had shaven. This was enough for the inspector, who, on boarding the Montrose, went straight for the deck on which his quarry was parading. He touched him on the shoulder with an invitation to visit the captain's cabin.

"Crippen, I want you," said Dew quietly. The dentist recoiled involuntarily as he recognized the man who addressed him, then the blood left his face, his breath came short and fast and he gurgled incoherently.

As he was being led away to the captain's cabin, from which he was transferred later to his own stateroom, he said gratefully, "Thank God, the suspense is over, and I am glad."

Crippen's arrest accomplished, Dew hurried to Miss Leneve's stateroom where he found her, still dressed as "John Robinson, jr.," on the verge of nervous breakdown. Her appearance when told that she was under arrest was pitiable. All control that she had fought so hard to retain throughout the voyage left her. She cried out hysterically and became so faint that restoratives were administered.

Shut in her room, and restored to woman's dress, she was closely guarded as the vessel continued its journey for fear that she would take her life or collapse utterly.

Crippen was attired in a traveling suit of blue serge and tweed overcoat. Gold-rimmed eyeglasses rested on his nose, and from them his eyes looked out dully. His face was pale and drawn.

With both under arrest the Montrose's whistle sounded a signal to the waiting Eureka that Dew's search was at an end. Immediately the pilot boat came alongside and the newspapermen and photographers swarmed aboard. Crippen they found handcuffed in his stateroom and Miss Leneve under the care of a physician in her room.

The news by this time had spread among the passengers, who had been duped throughout the voyage by the bogus clergyman and his effeminate son. Capt. Kendall had kept from them the identity of the two mysterious passengres, and although the recent bombardment of wireless messages had aroused their suspicions, none on board, besides Llewellyn Jones, the wireless operator, knew that the two were Dr. Crippen and his girl companion.

Doctors Talk Cancer.

New York, Aug. 1.—The British Medical Association's annual congress is in session. The usual deep interest is manifested in the addresses regarding the treatment of cancer. H. Gilbert Barling, professor of surgery at the University of Birmingham, and Prof. Louis Wickham, one of the greatest authorities on radium, were the chief speakers. Dr. Barling maintained that at present surgery alone could be relied on as the great remedy. He said that only one real opportunity to cure exists, viz., at the first operation, which should be pressed to the fullest extent.

He believed that if all the malignant growths could be excised at a certain stage of development all could be cured. He recognized the infrequency of recurrence after three years freedom following an operation, but he assigned five years as a safer period. He dismissed treatment by serum and drugs as futile. Regarding radium he said there was much that is promising but little that is conclusive. A profound impression was often produced. Malignant tumors of large extent might disappear or diminish, but improvement and apparent recovery were apt to be deceptive. Radium could give relief in inoperable cases, but he refused to take the responsibility of advancing its use as a substitute for excision in operable cases.

Prof. Wickham spoke more hopefully regarding radium, but he admitted that a complete cure could only be looked for in the case of small accessible cancers. He was emphatic in declaring that radium had a beneficent action, not merely caustic. The rays, apart from their caustic action, were particularly deadly to cancer cells, immediately picking them out by selective action.

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 1.—Dragged from beneath a sink in a Third street lodging house, where he had been hiding for twenty-four hours, Joseph A. A few hours after the arrest, Detective Captain Carney of Louisville, arrived to learn that his 11,000 miles search for Wendling had been crowned with success. It was the telegraphed tip from the Kentucky detective which led to the arrest.

RUPTURE

J. Y. EGAN, Specialist of Toronto

A WORD OF CAUTION.

Procrastination is the most common error of ruptured people. In most cases they do not realize the risk they are running. You may have been ruptured for some time and not noticed any change for better or worse. But, remember, no rupture stands still. Even if not getting larger the bowel is growing fast to the inside, and any day your ordinary truss is liable to slip while lifting or coughing and let more of the bowel escape. In such a case strangulated hernia may result in death. Many people come to me constipated, nervous, irritable, suffering from indigestion and constant colds. They seldom charge this to their rupture, but that is where their ill health originates. A rupture strains the whole physical organism and is a constant nerve irritant, a breeding place for the germs of typhoid, and frequently causes rheumatism, paralysis and sterility. Your rupture cured will make you feel like a new being; your nerves will recover their normal tone and your rundown condition replaced by vigorous, joyous health. Act at once and remove the daily danger of death which, like a threatening thundercloud, hangs over the head of every ruptured person. Don't delay, to suffer and die. Let me help you live and enjoy life. What I have done for thousands in the past fifty years I can do for you to-day. Awaken to the fact what a cure means to you—viz, immediate security, comfort and a perfect physical condition. This is all yours to-day for the asking. Out-of-town patients can consult me and return home same day relieved of all rupture trouble permanently. No operation, pain or loss of time. Tear off free coupon now.

KEEP UP STANDARD

Sir James Joins In Controversy Over Entrance Examination.

"It Is the Intention of the Department," He Says, "to Exact a Real Working Knowledge of the Elementary Subjects and Not to Keep Standard Low for Purpose of False Show of Efficiency.

Toronto, Aug. 1.—Sir James Whitney, in the course of an interview on Saturday made the following observations on the subject of the entrance examinations and examinations generally:

"The Government carefully considered the representations made regarding the entrance examination this year, and the modification already announced and sent out to the entrance boards goes as far, I think, as we ought to go in altering for the present year the standard now set.

"I want to speak quite frankly about this whole question of examinations. The danger of overdoing this phase of school work is great. Some parents seem more anxious to push the children on to the high schools than to see that their preparatory training is thorough and complete. Some teachers boast of the number of pupils who pass the entrance as if this test were the sole aim of the public school course.

"Originally intended as a test of the fitness of pupils to enter upon high school work, this examination has become a sort of fetish, and devotion to it has interfered in a very considerable degree with the efficiency of the public schools. The result has been bad all around. The thoroughness of the public school training has been impaired, and many ill-prepared pupils have been forced into the high schools.

"I see no reason to change the views I expressed several years ago regarding the importance of public school education to the great mass of the people. The percentage of children who go on to the high schools is a mere fraction of the whole. This being so, our public schools should be improved in every way possible. The Government has taken several steps to attain this end. We have established enough normal schools to provide better trained teachers, and we have new better and cheaper text books. The course of study for the public schools is being revised, and I am satisfied that a marked improvement will soon be observable in the efficiency of the training.

"But the cooperation of school boards is necessary if we are to keep efficient teachers in the profession, and the tendency to exaggerate the value of examinations, as the chief object of education, should be minimized. The high schools, I am glad to know, are generally in a good condition, but our educational system will not produce the results it should if the public schools continue to put their best efforts into the preparation of pupils to pass the entrance, rather than to strive to raise the general standard in those subjects which are essential to the child in after life.

"The complaint is often made—and the evidence shows that it is justly made—that pupils who leave school at 13 or 14 do not read, write or spell properly, cannot add up columns of figures correctly, and are imperfectly trained for ordinary business careers. Surely these are evils which will not be cured by a system of cramming for examinations, but by making public school instruction more thorough. Some people advocate keeping children out of the high school until they are over 14, but I doubt if public opinion would justify so drastic a measure, and besides, I believe we can accomplish the reform needed by concentrating attention on the public school course of study as an end in itself. The Minister of Education hopes to make such changes in the regulations as will in time secure this result.

"When the schools open again, teachers and pupils should act upon the idea that it is the intention of the Department to exact a real working knowledge of the elementary subjects, and not to keep the entrance standard low for the mere purpose of exhibiting a false show of efficiency by allowing large numbers to pass."

Made 295 Mile Trip.

Bayreuth, Aug. 1.—After a devious course in stormy weather the dirigible Parseval VI. landed safely here at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The Parseval ascended at midnight at Bitterfield to make the voyage to Munich, her commander hoping to cover the stretch of 295 miles without interruption. Owing to motor trouble, however, it became necessary to descend at Lobstadt, where repairs occupied nearly three hours. From here the Parseval will continue on to Munich in the morning.

Report Says That Miss Leneve May Take Stand Against Dr. Crippen and Tell All She Knows.

(Intelligencer Special.)

Quebec, August 2 — That Miss Leneve may take the stand against Dr. Crippen is the opinion of many who have been watching the case here.

The police, it is said, are using every means at hand to have the girl break down and tell all she knows of the crime. They are not forcing her, but have treated her with great kindness, which has made a great impression upon her.

She is being treated as a guest rather than a prisoner in Chief of Police McCarthy's house.

She has a room to herself and is not under immediate surveillance.

Cables from her father, urging her to tell all, are said to have influenced her greatly.

Last Word in the Grand Trunk Strike Situation.

Both Sides Agree to Arbitration, and Matter is In The Hands of the Government.

Montreal, August 2 — What is believed to be practically a settlement of the G. T. R. strike was effected this morning at a final conference between Manager Hays and Messrs. Lee and Garretson.

It is announced that the final settlement of the board of arbitration had been left to the Dominion Government.

Hon. Mackenzie King returned to Ottawa, and at a meeting of the Cabinet there a detailed proposal of the appointment of a Board of Arbitration will be drawn up.

The decision of the Cabinet will be wired to Montreal tonight, when, at another conference the matter will probably be settled.

C. M. Hays admitted that some matters had been left to arbitrators.

Mr. Lee said that the whole matter was in the hands of the Government and that both sides had practically agreed to arbitration.

HON. MACKENZIE KING STILL HOPEFUL.

Intelligencer Special.

Montreal, August 2 — Conferences between Grand Trunk officials and the heads of the strikers were continued this morning.

The statement that a settlement had been reached was denied by higher officials of the company.

Hon. Mackenzie King said that they would meet again and he was hopeful that the questions under dispute would be arbitrated.

CONDITIONS AT FORT ERIE.

Intelligencer Special.

Fort Erie, August 2 — With soldiers patroling the yard the G. T. R. is slowly relieving the freight jam in the Bridgeburg yards.

For the first time in fifteen days freight trains are being made up and are being placed around the International bridge because of the threat to blow it up. So far there has been no signs of disorder. Four freight trains were made up and started north to-day.

GRAND TRUNK GUARDS ASLEEP AT SWITCH.

SETTLEMENT REPORTED

Strikers, However, Say No Agreement Has Been Reached.

Conflicting Statements Made by Officials and Men Point to Fact That a Deadlock Still Exists In Conference at Montreal — Strike Leader Refuses to Say That Things Look Hopeful—Toronto Men Protest.

Montreal, Aug. 2.—As the result of the further conference between the representatives of the Grand Trunk trainmen and conductors and the Grand Trunk management, and Hon. Mackenzie King, Minister of Labor, it is believed that an agreement has been reached and that the strike will likely be called off to-day.

Grand Trunk officials stated last night that it was understood that a basis of agreement had been reached, but that the details were not ready.

The union officials, however, say that a settlement has not yet been reached, and that they will not call the strike off unless there is some definite announcement from the company.

However, one of the strike leaders in the negotiations at midnight was absolutely non-communicative, except in denying that any settlement had so far been arrived at. He would neither affirm nor deny that prospects were bright for an agreement during the next few hours.

Protest to Ottawa.

Toronto, Aug. 2.—The strikers yesterday decided to send notification to Hon. Frank Oliver, Minister of the Interior, complaining of breaches of the alien labor law by the G.T.R.; and to Chairman Mabee of the Dominion Railway Board, complaining of alleged inefficient train crews.

While the company officials insist that freight and passenger traffic is being satisfactorily handled, the fact remains that advices from outside towns shows no relief in the way of freight movement, while dozens of passengers say that they are riding free on the trains, there being no attempt at collection of tickets.

There are 135 militiamen and regulars on strike duty at Bridgeburg, with everything quiet.

HEARTS BROKEN; TOOK ACID.

Two Suicides Because of Love Occur In Toronto.

Toronto, Aug. 2.—Women were the cause of two suicides yesterday, both by carbolic acid. One, a youth, took acid because he could not get the girl's mother's consent to marriage; the other, a man with a prison record and no home, because the women he had lived with previous to his last term, refused to take him back.

Melancholia was the motive for the suicide of William Carlton, aged 20, of Parry Sound, in his room at 152 Victoria street, at about 7 o'clock last night.

The youth was smitten by the charms of a girl 16 years old. He wrote to her mother at Dwight, Ont. near Huntsville, asking permission to marry the girl and the refusal plunged him into a state of despondency.

Sunday night he attempted to take his life by drinking wood alcohol. After taking the poison, his heart failed him and he went to a doctor who administered an antidote.

Last night his landlady found Carlton in his room on the third floor with a vial which had contained acid beside him. Carlton was gasping for breath and shortly afterwards he expired.

Carlton did not mingle with the other residents of the house. They noticed that he was melancholy, but did not think it was serious. Coroner Pickering investigated the case last night, and will hold an inquest. The body is now at the morgue.

Jack Lyons, between 30 and 35 years of age, took acid in the presence of May Fitzsimmons at her house, 215 West Richmond street, late yesterday afternoon. When he got out of the Central Prison several weeks ago, he tried to persuade her to reinstate him in her affections. She refused. He called on her a number of times, but each time she repulsed him. About two weeks ago he tried to drink carbolic acid directly after she had refused him, but she interfered, spilling the fluid. Her arms were badly burned at the time. She did not inform on him or even take steps to have him kept away.

Yesterday he visited her for the last time. Almost immediately after she against refused he drank the acid, dying in a few minutes. The woman will pay the funeral expenses, as the body was not taken to the morgue.

Found Floating In River.

Prescott, Aug 2.—About 6.30 yesterday morning, when returning from his summer cottage at Blakey's Point in his motor boat, G. K. Henderson found a dead body floating in the St. Lawrence River about two miles above Prescott. The body was brought to Prescott, and identified as the body of Mr. Hunt, who was drowned near Brockville about a week ago while trying out a new motor boat, in company with an employe of the Gilbert Boat Works of Brockville.

Found Girl's Mutilated Body.

California, Pa., Aug. 2.—The body of a 12-year-old girl, horribly mutilated, was found Sunday evening in a berry patch near here, and the authorities yesterday threw out a dragnet for possible suspects. Two Italians picking berries reported the finding of the child's body, with the face battered shapeless. Torn clothing, broken twigs and trampled grass evidenced a terrible struggle.

Ditched by Wreckers.

Schenectady, N.Y., Aug. 2.—A delaware & Hudson passenger train containing between 300 and 400 persons, was ditched at about 9.30 p.m., about twelve miles north of this city by wreckers. The entire train consisting of four coaches and baggage left the tracks. The fireman was badly hurt.

Eight-Year-Old Drowned.

A Western Suicide.

Medicine Hat, Aug. 2.—Constable Smith of the N.W.M.P., discovered the body of a man in the bushes near the C.P.R. bridge over Seven Persons Creek, Sunday night. A discharged revolver by his side told the tale. There were no marks of identification on the clothing, but a note saying he was tired of life and signed "J.C." was found.

WONDER-SHINE

Cleans
Silver and Gold
Is making it Famous

When you use WONDER-SHINE, the dreaded half-day cleaning your silverware becomes but a pleasant half-hour.

Without any rubbing or scrubbing the tarnish disappears and the original brightness is restored, but neither your silver, your temper, nor your fingers will suffer as when you use "rub on" preparations of abrasive powder, or acid paste polishes.

WONDER-SHINE is not rubbed on, the silver is simply dipped in.

Like all great discoveries, the process is very simple.

CURRENT COMMENT.

It is evident that the special committee's policy of "making haste slowly" was a good one in regard to matters at the local pumphouse. If the new plan suggested will save money and add to efficiency, as alleged, it is a feather in the cap of the committee, and the thanks of our citizens are due them.

Joe Martin, who has been M. P. for the St. Pancras Division of London for some time, has been telling the people of Vancouver that politics in England is not like politics in Canada, as it is free from graft and corporation influences. Mr. Martin while professing love and affection for Canada, declared his intention to end his days in England. Well, Canada will not suffer a great deal.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier told the settlers in the Northwest, who had emigrated from the United States, and selected homes in Canada, that here, like in their own country, they would find no distinction in creed or race, that all were equal. Yet at the moment he was talking they (the Yankees) were shooting and murdering negroes. Had he told them that unlike their own country, in Canada all men, black, red or white, were free to live unmolested, so long as they kept within the law, it would have been nearer the truth.

Canada today has a mile of railway for every 300 head of her people, and is yearly increasing. This exceeds the record of any other country in the world.

It is quite evident that Spain does not intend longer to be dominated in her civil government by Rome. A telegram from Madrid, of August 1st, says: "Premier Canalejas, left in charge of the crisis with the Vatican by the departure for England of the King at noon today, has ordered the arrest of those priests who have attacked the Government and the King because of the rupture with the Vatican."

Commenting upon the difficulties now existing between Spain and the Vatican The Toronto Globe says:—

"There is a Liberal Administration in power at Madrid just now, and, according to the public statement of the Prime Minister, its policy is to liberalize Spain. The first step was to extend to Protestants the right to indicate to the public the character and use of their places of worship. The immediate result was a demand from the Vatican that this privilege should be cancelled, and when the demand was refused an ultimatum followed in the shape of an intimation that negotiations for a revision of the Concordat of 1851 would be discontinued. A Concordat is an agreement betwen the Papacy and a temporal power of such a character as would entitle it to be called a treaty if it were concluded between two national Governments."

Cigarette smokers are barred from leading city firemen in Canton, Ohio. One generally supposed the more smoke a fireman could inhale the better.

It was a great reception Dr. Crippen received at Father Point. It looks now as if Dew will help at least one man "to come back."

Things are surely moving some when one suffragette sues another and a woman barrister-at-law requests the Court to parole her client until the weather isn't so warm. The picture is spoiled a bit by the fact that the case is up before a male judge and the bond was furnished by a mere man.—New York Telegram.

A bulletin was received per C. P. R. wire this morning, to the effect that the G. T. R. strike had been settled. Local strikers, however, deny that such is the case. They say they have received no notification to that effect.

This strike settlement business reminds one of the story "Off again, on again," etc. The general public, which is getting most of the trouble, however, will fail to see the point of the joke.

Young Ladies And An Automobile.

Port Hope Guide: The daring venture of a party of young ladies to drive an automobile had surprising results, disconcerting not only to the would-be chauffeurs, but to a couple of onlookers who were nearly run over.

While the gentlemen accustomed to guiding the car were enquiring the direction to a nearby village, at the Lindsay garage, and had left the machine facing the river in the rear of the building at Kennedy's wharf, one young lady, thinking it would be interesting to turn the motor ready for departure, touched the button and started the engine.

Now, as is well known, every car has three, or at least two speed gears, the lower one being generally used for starting, and the engine gear happened to be put in mesh. So speeding up the engine to a modest roar, and clutching the steering wheel tightly, she dropped in the clutch. For an instant the wheels slipped, and then like a flash the auto sped for the river. Only a thin board partition barred the way. One lady jumped, the other clung to the car because she couldn't let go. But they didn't go into the river. Luckily the flooring of the coal bin, through which they were rushing to the river, was rotten and the wheels crashed through and could not climb the logs used for supporting it. Suddenly the car flung clouds of mud and dirt, but could go no farther. It was just two feet from the river. Nothing except a lamp glass was cracked, but it took six people to get it back when it had started. "Let George drive," said one of the ladies, as she sadly seated herself.

Newspaper Press as An Aid to Justice.

Ottawa Citizen: Scotland Yard, the great London police centre, is so conservative in its methods that it has never yet introduced the telephone. Why this should be so it would require a Britisher to explain. But the authorities there have at last awakened to the fact that the great organization of the newspaper press is one of the best aids to the police in securing the apprehension of criminals. In the Crippen case information has been given out freely and published all over the world, with the result that everybody is on the lookout for the fugitives. More than that, the newspaper reporters, who, in most cases, are far more capable than the average detective, are keenly on the watchout for a clue as to the whereabouts of the murderer. To the publicity given to this case is largely due to the fact that attention is now concentrated on the possibility of the fugitives being on board the Montrose. Several cases have already occurred where suspicious couples have been examined for the two fugitives, but this only bears out the widespread vigilance which has resulted from the publicity given the case. The same principle should be adopted by all police authorities. It is well known that the most successful chiefs of police are those who seek the cooperation of the newspapers. In many forces the reverse is the case. With such, the hallucination seems to prevail that if a crime is announced in the newspapers the criminal may discover that he has committed a crime, and is being sought for by the police; whereas if he had not read it in the newspapers he would not know that he had committed a crime nor suspect that the police wanted him. As a rule the real reason for suppressing the information to the newspapers is that the force is so incompetent that it has little hope of a successful capture, and does not want the public to be aware of its incapacity. Even in such cases the assistance of the press might make a difference between success and failure.

Trial Court—Before Teetzel, J.

Margaret Cain v. The Pearce Company; Thomas Cain v. The Pearce Company, Boulter v. The Pearce Company; McGrath v. The Pearce Company.—Four actions for damages for alleged flooding of plaintiffs' lands by the defendants, who are mill owners, owning and occupying mill privileges on Crow River, tried together at Belleville. The claims are that the defendants by the construction of a new dam in 1893, alleged to be four feet higher than the former dam, have increased their horsepower from one hundred horsepower to two hundred horsepower, thereby raising the water and injuriously affecting plaintiffs' lands. Judgment: After October 1 next let judgment be entered declaring that the defendants are liable to the plaintiffs for any damages which plaintiffs have suffered by reason of the defendants having caused plaintiffs' lands to be flooded beyond the extent and duration of such flooding enjoyed by the defendant's predecessors in title during the twenty years before the year 1893, and directing a reference to some person to be agreed on or hereafter named by the Judge to ascertain such damages. In ascertaining such damages the referee will not allow any damages which may have been caused by flooding done by defendants or others in driving logs under provisions of chapter 142 R. S. O. Defendants may amend defence by correctly pleading Statute of Limitations. Costs of action and reference reserved till after report.

VALUE OF WATER IN BUTTER

There must be a certain amount of water in butter to make it a perfect article—not that the per cent of water must come within certain fixed or narrow limits, but the amount that is present in butter made under normal conditions where quality is the main object.

To the average consumer the water content is not greatly noticeable unless there is a small quantity of free water left in the package in which the butter was originally packed. However, this free water bears no direct relation to the amount present in butter, but it is an indication of the plan followed in its manufacture.

Butter mechanically perfect may contain between 10 and 15 per cent of water. As a rule, this extreme difference cannot be detected except by men who have made the subject a study.

The value of butter is based on its quality and general makeup and not its natural composition, except in cases where it has been carried to an extreme.

The factors in composition that will affect its quality are the extremes in salt contents or whether the salt is all dissolved.

The limit which was placed upon the water to be incorporated into butter was in part to do away with the growing tendency on the part of some to make an article that should contain the lowest possible amount of butter fat and yet bear the name of butter. If this had not been checked there would have been danger of placing the ability of the buttermaker upon the question, "Can you get us the overrun?" in place of, "Can you make good butter?" It seems as if that idea is still encouraged in certain localities.

The overrun bears a certain relation to the compositon of the butter, but is not a sure indication that a high per cent of water means a correspondingly high overrun.

A buttermaker should have an overrun that checks fairly well with the fat in his butter, provided the loss of fat in the process of manufacture has been kept at its minimum. It cannot always be said that an overrun of only 10 per cent is an indication of butter having a high fat content any more than a high overrun indicates low fat content butter.

The greatest factor in overrun control is the accurate determination of the total butter fat delivered to the creamery. If more butter fat was delivered than was actually paid for it cannot help but increase the overrun, and vice versa.

Naturally the question arises, "Can butter be made to always contain less than the legal 16 per cent limit for water?" The answer is positively "Yes," with a fair margin for safety. In fact, butter can be made to not exceed even a 15 per cent limit. A good commercial product can contain 14 to 15 per cent of water. This, added to the 82.5 per cent standard for fat, makes a total of 96.5 to 97.5 per cent, leaving a balance of 2.5 to 3.5 per cent for salt, casein and ash.

Since the average casein and ash content need not exceed 1 per cent, this leaves 1.5 to 2.5 per cent for salt. This amount of salt is not sufficient for all grades of butter, nor will it meet the demand of all consumers. In order to increase the salt content there must be a decrease in the water. A commercial product will pass to certain consumers containing 3.5 per cent salt, but need not exceed 3 per cent.

It is not safe to work too close to any standard because of variation in composition due to sampling. One sample of butter taken to represent a churning may or may not be an accurate representation of the butter in question. An average variation of at least one-half per cent must be allowed with an extreme of at least 1 per cent.

Testing Cream.

The percentage of fat in milk will have some effect upon the percentage of fat in the cream delivered by the separator. For example, when whey containing 1 to 2 per cent of fat is separated, unless the cream screw is changed, it will deliver a cream, if it may be called such, that will have to pass through the separator again before it can be churned, but just how much two creams will vary in test, one made from 5 per cent milk and the other from 4 per cent milk without changing the cream screw, we are unable to say, and we can find no data that will help us to answer this question exactly. It would be a very easy matter to determine just how much the two creams would vary in test by running some 4 and 5 per cent milk through a separator under the same conditions, then testing the two resulting creams.

Rations For Colts.

An experienced horseman has found equal parts of corn and oats ground together to be one of the best grain rations for growing colts. It furnishes elements needed for the production of fat, bone and muscle. Adding bran or linseed meal to the ration aids very much in keeping the bowels regular and avoids constipation and in this way lessens the liability of disease.

Cooling the Cream.

To cool the cream quickly and thoroughly just as soon as the separating is finished is of more importance than anything else at that particular time. The pigs and calves can wait for their skimmilk, but bacteria in the cream wait for nothing until the temperature favorable to their growth is reduced.

How to Stop Drinking.

It was formerly customary for the habitual drinker to take the pledge regularly, sometimes once a year, and sometimes in every fit of remorse that followed his debauches, and then break it.

But now it is gradually dawning upon the world that pledges do not stop drunkenness. The nervous system of the habitual drinker is diseased and he must have treatment that will cure this condition. Orrine is sold under a positive guarantee to cure the drink habit or the money will be refunded. Can be given secretly.

ELEPHANTS AS LABORERS.

They Work In Forests and Mills Preparing Teakwood for Market.

In the lumber yards and saw mills of India, elephants are employed to aid in preparing teakwood for shipment. In the forests and at the ports also these big creatures handle the timber. They drag the logs to the streams and arrange the booms; they stack the planks, and they carry all sorts of lumber at the direction of their masters. Every saw mill has its elephants and there are some companies which employ several hundred. The average institution, however, can afford but few, for the animals are costly, a green one bringing $800 and a prize worker often as much as $2,000.

The elephants come from the forests of Upper Burma. The wild ones are all owned by the Government, which has an elephant department to catch and care for them. The elephant commissioner keeps track of the wild herds and annually sends out men to hunt them and catch the young bulls, which are trained and are finally disposed of to the lumbermen.

These huge beasts handle logs of great weight, writes F. G. Carpenter, writing of scenes he has visited. "An elephant would kneel down before the middle of a log, crowd his tusks under it and then, throwing his great trunk over the top, would raise it bodily and carry it to the truck upon which it was to be pushed to the buzz saw. If the log proved very heavy he would rest one end on the ground and drag it. An elephant piling lumber would lift the timbers up and lay them down on the others as evenly as though it had measured each piece. In some cases where it was necessary to carry two logs at a time the men tied a rope around them and the elephant would pick up the end of the rope with his trunk and place it over his tusk and then, raising his head, walk off with it. The elephants gather up the scraps of lumber and lay them so that the workmen can rope them into bundles. They also work at piling the boards and loading for the steamers.

At the lumber camps they not only carry the logs to the streams, but aid in forming the rafts and booms. They wade or swim about, according to the depth of the water, towing the logs this way and that. When the logs come to the ports they break the booms by pushing out the key log. They then take the timbers out of the water and put them on the cars, which carry them to the mill. In some places the elephants work together, and there are boss elephants who keep the others up to their work and pound them with their trunks when they lag. They have to be carefully fed, and each must have his bath twice a day. During this operation they sit down while buckets of water are thrown over them. After that their masters scrub them with rough brushes and curry them, as it were, all over. As the water is dashed upon them they wag their tails and flap their ears and grunt in joy.

Lord Rothschild's Influence.

A pleasing story is told apropos of the prestige of the great house of Rothschild and its influence in City circles of London. A young scion of a noble house was given a letter of introduction to Lord Rothschild. In this it was stated that the young man, though undoubtedly talented, had had the misfortune to be wholly thrown upon his beam-ends owing to the death of his father, who had succumbed to grief on account of his bankruptcy. The letter wound up asking Lord Rothschild to do his very utmost for a deserving case. After having read the note, Lord Rothschild took the young man by the arm, and walked with him from the Rothschilds' offices in St. Swithin's Lane, past the Bank of England, through Throgmorton street, and past the Stock Exchange, introducing him on the way to several well-known brokers and financiers. Then, shaking hands with him, he wished him "good-day" and "good luck." "But," said the young man in astonishment, "are you not going to do anything for me?" "My dear fellow," replied Lord Rothschild, "if you are one half as clever as I am assured you are, you yourself will know what to do." The young man was bright enough to take the hint, and not only obtained unlimited credit in the City through the prestige of the great financier's friendship, but soon made the headway which has since led to success.

Three Distinguished Brothers.

Although he probably had high hopes for his sons, it is doubtful if John Dewar, the Perth distiller, imagined for one moment that they would attain the high positions they at present occupy. One, Sir John, was made a baronet three years ago, Sir Thomas was knighted in 1902, and now Arthur Dewar, K.C. M.P., Solicitor-General for Scotland since 1909, has been appointed a Scottish judge. There are few more popular members of the House than Mr. Dewar, and it is interesting to note that when he first entered the field of politics as candidate for South Edinburgh in 1899 his opponent was the late Gen. Wauchope. The contest was a sharp and exciting one, and, notwithstanding the popularity of the general, Mr. Dewar was returned with a handsome majority of 881.

Wealthy Man, Unlucky Sportsman.

Though the world has treated him well enough in most respects, Lord Ellesmere has the reputation of being one of the unluckiest of sportsmen. It would be hard to count the number of times that he has just failed to bring off important events. His horses have come in second in the Derby, the Oaks, the Goodwood Cup, the One Thousand Guineas, and the Doncaster Cup, so that the superstitious might well see the interposition of some malignant destiny in his persistent ill-fortune.

An Invisible Item.

"Have you your expense account?" asked the junior member of the firm.

"No," answered the commercial traveler. "My expense account is in my new overcoat."

"That relieves my mind. My partner was trying to figure whether your new overcoat wasn't somewhere in your expense account."

The Tricky Fox.

A gentleman while hunting near a river one winter day saw a fox run out on the ice and make at full speed for an opening in the ice where the rushing water of the river could be plainly seen from the bank, says the Scotsman. At the edge he stopped, turned, followed his tracks back to the bank and then ran some distance down the stream and sat there. Soon a dog came crashing out of the woods, baying finely, hot on the fox's trail. Now, dogs when on a chase of this kind trust almost entirely to their noses. This one was no exception. He ran along the ice, head down, and when he reached the hole he could not stop, but plunged into the water and disappeared forever. Then the fox trotted away with every sign of satisfaction.

She sidled up to the counter like a rain cloud with white splashes where her big eyes rolled from side to side.

Strikes.

That every man should have the right to sell his labor at the highest price is unquestionable, but he has no right, either individually or collectively with others, to destroy property, maim his fellow men or commit murder, all of which lamentably occurs during every strike. The record of the short Grand Trunk strikers prove this fact, while the result of strikes in the United States are, if it were possible, of a more serious character.

During the past two weeks the criminal acts of strikers, or those in sympathy with them, are of such a serious character as to demand drastic action on the part of the Government, and those who administer the provisions of the law. Here are a few of them:

Near Ottawa, planks were laid across the track at night which, had not they been discovered by the engineers, no one can tell how many lives would have been lost.

A conductor, when leaving his car, was attacked and threatened to be shot if he dared to return to work.

Employees of the road were mobbed at Sherbrooke.

At Niagara Falls the same thing occurred.

Stones have been thrown through the windows of passenger cars.

Red pepper has been thrown into the eyes of officials.

Attempts have been made to blow up the railway station at Brockville, and men brutally maltreated because they dared to earn an honest living for themselves and families.

At Belleville men, when leaving work, were mobbed and brutally beaten.

At Bridgeburg, Ontario, on the 28th July a caboose and two or three freight cars belonging to the Grand Trunk were burned in the yard.

At Williamsburg, near New York, U. S., twelve persons were shot, two of them mortally, during a battle between policemen and strikers and their sympathizers in front of the American Sugar Refining Company's plant on Kent avenue, Williamsburg.

The police shot to kill, and it is said they had orders to do so. They opened fire after the strike sympathizers had hurled bricks and fired several shots when an attempt was made to send out non-union truck drivers from the sugar trust's plant.

These are but a few of the outrages which have disgraced the country during the past few weeks. Strikers deny that they are the guilty parties, and attribute them to their sympathizers. Be that as it may, all these and the result of many other outrages are the result of strikes.

In addition to these acts of violence, we read of threats by the Yankee Presidents of labor organizations, who are now in this country, that if the Grand Trunk officials do not surrender to their demands, they will bankrupt the country.

If there is no law giving power to deal with these incendiaries drastically, there ought to be.

Bread.

"Bread," says the Toronto Globe, "from Canadian flour continues much dearer in Toronto than in London, England, which is a lesson in tariff legislation rather than in the regulation of loaves."

What has "a lesson in tariff legislation" to do with the cheapness of bread in England, as compared with the price at which it is sold in Canada? Are the readers of the Globe to understand that if bread made from flour purchased in a protectionist country and exported to a free trade, enables the baker to manufacture the article cheaper. Such a position would be absurd.

There are other reasons than that of tariff. It may be said that wheat and flour are sold cheaper for export than if sold for home consumption, which is not at all likely, as the Liverpool market as a rule governs the price in Canada. Or it may be that food product purchased in Russia, the Argentine Republic, or other foreign markets, is cheaper than that bought in Canada. Or it may be that cheap labor in England enables the manufacturer to produce a cheaper article and put it upon the market at a less price, than can the Canadian baker. Can the Globe solve the question?

The Insurance List.

When the Revised and Consolidated Life Assurance Bill was before Parliament last session, the question was raised by a Quebec Judge as to the constitutional power of the Dominion Government to deal with the subject. In his opinion was, under the Confederation Act, exclusively vested in the local Governments. So serious was this matter considered that the Dominion Government has referred the question as to where the power lays, to the Supreme Court.

If the Supreme Court should confirm the Quebec Judges opinion, in what position will all the life companies in Canada be? Will it not be necessary for every local Legislature to confirm, ratify and legalize all that has been done by Life Companies in the past? Should such an event take place, no doubt the question will be referred to the final court of appeal in England.

OUR NEIGHBOR'S HEN.

What is this noise that I hear
Just at the dawn of day?
It cannot be a steam shovel
Tearing our yard away.
Oh, see the awful clouds of dust
Across the country going!
Is there a break in the earth's crust?
Is that a cyclone blowing?

Oh, no; that's just our neighbor's hen
Scratching the garden plot!
She's moved most of our real estate
Across to the next lot.
You better get your pants on quick.
Oh, spring from yo'ler bed!
That hen is digging toward the house!
'Twill fall down on your head!

C. M. BARNITZ.

LIFE'S TOO SHORT FOR STRIFE.

Wonderful what little things cause big heart stings!

A hen flies over a garden wall, digs up a few onions, that is all. A brick flies out of the back door, and Biddy's scratching stunts are o'er.

Then what a jaw wrangle and law tangle!

A cat pounces on a chick.

Then watch that broomstick and words fly thick! What a fussin' and mussin' and cussin! "And friendship, like a spider's web, one blast of wind and it's all fled."

But life's too short for strife.

The law says hens must stay at home and scratch in their own patch and their owners must see that they do so, and he who will not obey the law, but allows his hens to destroy his neighbor's flower beds and garden and lets his dogs run on their lawns and porches, should be notified by the cops to quit or git.

But that cat—

The Audubon society wants the 3,000,000 cats in the United States to be killed because they catch birds.

But they should count the birds on their hats, for it's woman that kills them and not pussy cats.

Some poultrymen say, "Kill the cats; they kill chicks."

Yes; poor starved cats get 'em once in awhile. Well fed cats don't.

There's poor old Tabby and her kittens. Her owner doesn't feed her. She catches a few rats and mice and then her babies go to starving.

She takes a chick, and some big hulk of a stingy man shoots her or sets poison and she dies a lingering death among her starving kittens.

The preachers discourse on "man's inhumanity to man." How about man's brutality to brutes or cruelty to cats?

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

My friend, if you did get licked at the show there are others, and all men should be brothers. To hold a grudge at a man who won a ribbon blue is to let the devil make a fool of you.

Now that chickens have more range and pick up a good bit in a day you should examine their crops at night, for sometimes they don't need the evening feed you throw down to them.

Five hundred dollars was paid for the turkey gobbler that won first at New York, Baltimore and Hagerstown, Md. It is the largest turkey in the United States, weighs fifty-two pounds and now belongs to E. H. Burns, Orient, S. D.

During the winter when egg prices at York, Pa., remained way up at a certain market it was discovered that a nearby storekeeper was regulating the price of eggs. Each market day he simply notified the farmers they should hold their eggs at a certain figure and, if not sold out at that price, he would take all the eggs unsold at a certain price. Oh, what hogs in the hen's nest!

Pity Ponce de Leon didn't hunt the spring of perpetual youth in these days. By going down into his jeans he could have got the tip from the cold storage experts who have discovered the secret of eternal youth for eggs.

A Philadelphia paper declares that any live boy who is smart enough to lace his own shoes can succeed in the poultry business. Don't forget when you read this that Philadelphia editors drink Schuylkill water.

Chopped dandelions are claimed to make dandy turkeys. A woman expert has a bed of them especially for her turkey poults and chops them with breadcrumbs and hard boiled eggs one day and uses onion tops for green the next. The dandelion keeps their blood pure and the onions kill intestinal worms.

When old hens rose to 18 cents at Chicago it was claimed they eclipsed the civil war price. But the old soldiers tell us all poultry flew higher when foraging parties were after them.

The American farmer's wife has the reputation of serving the best square meat on earth. May she always have plenty and to spare, but she should beware to pile up her little turkeys' plates as she does those of her guests. Thousands of turkeys die of overfeeding.

Young Leghorns get wing feathers so quickly that their wings grow at the expense of their bodies and become a drag. They should be cut back like plants.

A good compressed air sprayer is a necessity. Spray the hennery with lime, spray the roosts with coal oil, spray the trees for pests and spray roosting fowls with carbolic fumes when roup and cholera germs are around.

Keeping an incubator lamp in perfect condition takes but a little time each day, but the lives of your family and safety of your property depend on whether you are careless or careful in the matter.

Electric lamps are inserted in the floors of passenger elevators so a person entering a car at night will know just where he is to step. The light is switched on or off automatically as a car stops at or leaves a floor.

"RISE, SIR JOHN."

What It Costs to Become a Real Live Lord.

Finding one's name in the "Honors List" is not all "currant-cake and cockades."

Of course, it is a great thing to receive the recognition of one's country; but every time the state sees fit to confer titles wholesale upon gentlemen for "services rendered," it makes quite a pretty penny out of its beneficence—and this, be it added, not by the bald sale of favors, but by perfectly legitimate and recognized means.

Upon a number of gentlemen, for instance, was conferred the privilege of putting "Sir" before their names and "Bart." behind it. This is, of course, extremely pleasant. But another side of the case quickly presents itself when it is realized that every baronet has to pay nearly $1,500 for his title.

This is made up of the payment demanded for the grant of Letters Patent—that is, Stamp Duties — Crown Office swallows up just under half of the total payment, the Stamp Duties a trifle less, while the Home Office comes in with a modest little demand for the remainder.

Considering the difference in social standing of a baronet and a baron, $300 or so does not seem a great deal extra to pay for this latter most coveted title. Altogether, a baronage costs $1,800.

Proceeding up the social ladder, it costs $2,335 to be a belted earl, $3,455 to bear the distinguishing title of marquis, while the individual whose unhappy lot it is to be created a duke has to plank down no less than $4,045 in fees!

Of course, the big fees are the main items, but there are innumerable little expenses incurred in obtaining a handle to your name. Dukes, marquises, earls, viscounts—all have to purchase their robes and coronets. Then, there is $50 to be paid for the grant of armorial bearings, $5 every year for the license, $10 for the use of them upon your carriage, more if you want them on your notepaper.

The newly-dubbed knight or baronet will blossom out into a carriage, if he does not already possess one, which will cost two guineas annually if drawn by two horses, one guinea if drawn by one; while his new motorcar will be taxed anything from $10 to $200, according to its horse-power. Of course, he will employ male flunkeys in his household, which go cheap, however, at $4 a piece per annum.

Wonders In the Equine Foot.

The foot of a horse is one of the most ingenious and unexampled pieces of mechanism in the whole range of animal structure. The outside hoof is made up of a series of thin vertical laminae of horn, about 500 in number. Into this are fitted about 500 more thin laminae, which belong to the coffin bone, both sets being elastic and adherent. The edges of a quire of paper inserted leaf by leaf into another quire will furnish a good idea of the arrangement of the laminae in all the feet, amounting to about 4,000. These are distributed in the most secure manner and in a way that every spring is acted upon in an oblique direction. Verily there is a display of nature's wonder everywhere.

SAYS HE WILL GO BACK

Dr. Crippen Seems Unwilling to Fight Return to England.

Fugitives Caught on S. S. Montrose Are Arraigned In Court Simply to Make Sure of Their Identity—Crippen Has First Break-down and Admits Using Drugs—Crowds View the Steamer.

Quebec, Aug. 2.—Scotland Yard, represented by Inspector Dew, and the provincial police of Quebec, piloted the London murder suspect, Dr. Hawley Crippen, through a mass of excited humanity in staid old Quebec City yesterday morning, and arraigned him before Judges Angers and Langelier for preliminary examination in connection with the charge against him of having caused the death of an unknown woman in London.

Ultimately it was decided to proceed under the Fugitive Offenders Act, which entails considerable delay. Crippen was asked a few questions, and an adjournment was taken for eight days. As a matter of fact it will be fifteen days before legal technicalities will have worked their course. Dew was plainly disappointed at the delay.

Crippen showed the first sign of weakness last evening, when he practically collapsed in his cell, necessitating a hurried call for medical attendance. He admitted to the physician when he had revived that he was addicted to drugs.

The little doctor has been apparently entirely at his ease since he came into the charge of the officers. He was reading a novel when the Montrose poked her nose around the Isle of Orleans at one o'clock yesterday morning, and steamed into Quebec harbor. Later in the morning he took up the thread of the tale. While policemen, lawyers and pressmen tramped through the corridors of the lock-up, in the east wing of the Parliament Buildings, previous to the court hearing, he continued his reading. He slept soundly during the night, with two guards watching over him, and he had eaten a hearty breakfast. To the enquiry of the sergeant, Crippen said he felt all right, except that his head was aching a little.

"I guess it is the air in here. You see, I have never been in jail before," he replied.

Ethel Leneve, who purports to be Crippen's wife, was too ill to appear in court, and will be questioned by the judge at the residence of Chief Constable McCarthy, where she is in charge of a nurse. A story is being circulated that she attempted to commit suicide after the arrest Sunday, and this has been partly confirmed by Dr. Stewart of the Montrose. Interviewed yesterday morning, Dr. Stewart said that, as the officers entered the girl's cabin Sunday, after arresting Crippen, they found her with a powder in her hand, which she threw out of the port hole before they could intercept her. It is only surmised that the powder was a poison.

At 11 o'clock all was ready for the drive to the court house, and the murder suspect emerged from his cell between two officers, and wearing handcuffs. His face was as clean as a rough and ready shave could make it, plus 24 hours' growth, and he wore no spectacles. He was dressed in the night sack suit in which he made the sea trip, and he wore a wide-leafed fedora hat and white collar. The skin of his face is almost a dirty yellow and anything but prepossessing. A large crowd blocked the passage, but were pressed back by Detective Thorne, while Crippen hurried nimbly along towards the waiting rig.

In the court room sat a dozen reporters, while every foot of floor about was jammed with people. Crippen was taken into the court room. Judge Angers informed the prisoner that it was only for the purpose of identification that the proceedings were being taken. Crippen said he did not intend to fight against being taken back, but was willing to return to England with the inspector. As under the Fugitive Offenders' Act, 15 days are necessary before they can be taken back, the remand gives the prisoners an opportunity, if they so desire, to take out a writ of habeas corpus, or institute any other proceedings.

The authorities at Quebec consider this case one of the most complicated that has come within their ken. Crippen, an American citizen, is charged with murder in England, and escapes to a semi-independent state in the Empire, and he is caught while on the sea, but in the waters of that state, which makes its own laws. Now the question arises should Crippen, as an American citizen, claim extradition to the States, and it is understood, should he claim such protection, the American consul is bound to help him. There is a possibility, therefore, that the prisoner will yet decide to avail himself of the law's provisions in that respect.

The Montrose was curiously viewed yesterday by hundreds of persons. Though the steamer did not reach port until 1.30 yesterday morning, quite a large crowd was waiting to catch a glimpse of the notorious fugitives. The first to be brought from his cabin was Crippen. He was handcuffed and looked very dejected. When he was brought opposite Ethel Leneve's cabin he looked around with the expectation of being recognized by her, but the girl was too dejected to see anything or anybody, for a more forlorn-looking creature never dropped off the vessel. She was dressed in clothes belonging to the stewardess, and they were too big, and with hair cropped and her sobbing, it was a heart-rending sight. Captain Kendall, taking pity on her, took hold of one arm to help her down the gangway to the rig that was in waiting. They were taken to the provincial jail.

Dr. Stewart, the ship's doctor, who was speaking to Crippen at the time of his arrest, stated that though he strongly suspected the pair, he had no idea that the arrest would take place on board, and he was himself a surprised man when he saw what appeared to be four pilots coming in a small boat on the starboard side, instead of the regulation pilot boat. When he saw the captain go to meet them, he instinctively took Crippen over to the port side so as to allay his suspicions, and to be on hand in case the man attempted suicide.

The fourth officer said he suspected the pair almost from the first and he tells a little story of how Ethel gave her sex away. One stormy morning, while on his way to the wheel-house, he met her on deck. The officer commented on the weather. "Oh, it's simply awful!" answered the supposed boy, using her hands in a ladylike manner, and then, suddenly remembering her guise, she hardened her voice, saying, "Yes, it's damned rotten weather!"

When Crippen was told he was to be taken to England after an arraignment at Quebec, he made no objection, but said he was agreeable to get back as early as possible. He asked for a book to read and was supplied with brandy and cigars.

Captain Kendall had nothing to say, he being advised by Inspector Dew that, as he would be called as a witness, it was better to say nothing. The captain, who is only 35 years old, is popular amongst his officers and men, and when they heard that "the old man" would be able to claim the $1,250 offered by Scotland Yard, they all said that no man deserved it more. Kendall, indeed, is one of the youngest and smartest officers in the C.P.R. service. He is clean-shaven, with blonde hair, is a well-set-up man and certainly a bright man to meet. The Montrose is a continental boat, carrying freight and only second and third-class passengers on this trip. She carried 22 second and 216 third-class passengers, mostly foreigner. There were only five women, including Ethel Leneve, among the cabin passengers.

ANDREW GUNN DEAD.

President of Big Commission Firm Expires on Train.

Toronto, Aug. 2.—Suddenly yesterday morning, while returning from Port Dover, where he had been spending the week-end with his family, Andrew Gunn, president of the commission firm of Gunn's Limited, dropped dead on the train.

For some time he had not been in the very best of health, but complained little. It is thought that the end, which came when the train was about half-way between Hagersville and Caledonia, was due to heart trouble. Shortly after he had complained of feeling weak, he collapsed in the arms of Mr. Graham, also connected with Gunn's, Limited.

ANDREW GUNN.

Deceased was 63 years of age, and was born in Beaverton. He was a member of the I.O.O.F., of the Caledonian Society, of the Board of Trade, and an enthusiastic bowler and curler at the Granite Club. For several years he had been a member of St. James square Presbyterian Church. He was also a prominent Liberal and a member of the Ontario Reform Club. He leaves a wife, three boys and one girl. There are also surviving four brothers: Alex., of St. Pauls; Dr. John, of Ailsa Craig; Hector, of Albany avenue, Toronto; and Dr. William, of Clinton, Ont., and one sister, Mrs. (Dr.) John Ross of Glasgow.

It will be remembered that Donald Gunn, a brother of the deceased, was killed in a street car accident on Yonge street, this city, about seven months ago, at which time Andrew Gunn succeeded to the presidency of the firm.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, Aug. 1.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 72 carloads, consisting of 1368 cattle, 274 hogs, 364 sheep and lambs, and 79 calves.

Exporters.

Export cattle were in fairly good demand at about last Monday's quotations. Export steers sold from $5.75 to $6.90, but only two or three loads reached the latter figure, the next highest price being $6.75; export bulls $5 to $5.75; export heifers, $4.10.

Butchers.

Butchers' cattle were steady at last Monday's prices, as follows: Prime picked lots, $6.25 to $6.50; loads of good, $5.75 to $6; medium, $5.25 to $5.50; common, $4.75 to $5; cows, $3 to $4.75 per cwt.

Milkers and Springers.

A limited number of milkers and springers sold at $40 to $60 and one cow was reported at $85.

Veal Calves.

Seventy-nine calves sold at firm prices ranging from $4 to $7.75 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

There were 364 sheep and lambs sold as follows: Sheep, ewes, at $4 to $4.25 for light, and $3.75 to $4 for heavy, rams $3 to $3.25; lambs, at $6 to $6.75 per cwt.

Hogs.

Selects, fed and watered, were quoted at $9.25 and $9 to drovers, f.o.b., cars, at country points.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Aug. 1.—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market the offerings of live stock this morning amounted to 900 cattle, 750 sheep and lambs, 60 hogs and 50 calves. There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle since last Wednesday, except that probably the feeling was a trifle firmer for the best grades, owing to the fact that the supply of such was somewhat limited, but the lower grades were plentiful and values showed no improvement. The gathering of buyers was fairly large, and, as the weather was more favorable for keeping stock than it has been of late, the demand showed some improvement, and a rather more active trade was done, which resulted in a good clearance being made.

Choice steers sold at 6c to 6¼c; good at 5½c to 5¾c; fairly good at 5c to 5¼c; fair at 4½c to 4¾c, and common at 3½c to 4¼c per lb. Among the offerings there were no good bulls on the market, and in consequence the prices realized for the quality offered were low, sales being made at from 3c to 4c per lb.

A steady feeling prevailed in the market for hogs, on account of the fact that supplies were ample to fill all immediate requirements, and prices in consequence showed no actual change as compared with those paid last Wednesday. The demand from packers was good, and a fairly active trade was done, sales of selected lots being made at $10.25 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

Supplies of small meats were fair, for which the demand was good, and the undertone to the market was steady, with no change in prices. A feature of this trade was the demand for sheep for export account, and quite a few were picked up at 5¼c to 5¾c, while the culls sold at 3c to 3¾c per lb. Lambs brought from $3.50 to $5 each, and calves from $3 to $10 each, as to size and quality.

At the Canadian Pacific live stock market the receipts of live stock for the week ending July 30 were 2700 cattle, 2245 sheep and lambs, 2574 hogs, and 738 calves, besides 4197 cattle for export account, of which 727 went by way of Boston. The offerings on the market this morning consisted of 1200 cattle, 600 sheep and lambs, 12 hogs and 375 calves.

A feature of the trade was the stronger feeling in this market for steers, and prices show an advance of ¼c to ½c per lb. over what were realized last Wednesday, which was due to the fact that the supply of this class of cattle was rather limited, as the bulk of the offerings consisted of cows, heifers and bulls. The demand was good for local consumption, and some were also picked up for export account, and, if it had not been for the scarcity of ocean freight space from here this week, more would have been done in this direction than there was. However, on the whole, trade was active, and the market was cleaned up, with the exception of about 200 head. Choice steers sold at 6¼c to 6½c; good at 5¾c to 6c; fairly good at 5¼c to 5½c; fair at 4¾c to 5c, and common at 4c to 4½c per lb. Good to choice cows brought from 3c to 5c, and bulls from 3c to 5c per lb.

There were no new developments in the live hog situation, prices being steady at the recent decline, owing to the more liberal supplies coming forward. The demand from packers was good, and sales of selected lots were made at $10.25 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars, and mixed lots went at $9.75 to $10.

FIREMAN IS REVENGED

San Diego Man Slays Four to Vent His Spite.

Bert S. Durham Rings In a False Alarm, Kills Driver of Fire Wagon, Mortally Wounds a Second, Then Goes Home and Slays His Wife and Child—Is Relentlessly Followed—Takes His Own Life.

San Diego, Cal., Aug. 2.—Bert S. Durham, a former fireman, after shooting and killing one city fireman, mortally wounding a second and seriously wounding a third, near a firebox from which he had sent in a false alarm, in an effort for revenge, early yesterday, went to his home and with a bludgeon beat his wife and little children to death. He made his escape, but afterwards shot himself.

Nursing an old grudge against Fire Captain Sampsell, under whom he had worked as engine driver, and on whose complaint he had been discharged from the services for insubordination, Durham early yesterday sent in a false alarm from the outskirts of the city. When Capt. Sampsell and his crew came up, Durham opened fire on his former workmates with a revolver.

At the first shot, Driver Don Grant fell from his seat dead with a bullet in his head. At his second shot, Hoseman Guy Elliott pitched to the ground with a bullet through his stomach.

Durham then leveled his revolver at Sampsell and fired twice, both bullets percing Sampsell's lungs. Two more shots fired at the other members of the crew went wild.

Durham drew another revolver and covered his retreat as he started to run. As he disappeared in the darkness, Durham shouted back to the chief: "Tell my wife I am going to kill myself."

The victims of the shooting were rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital in one of the hose wagons. Operations were performed on Sampsell and Elliott.

Within half an hour after the shooting a score of police officers and deputy sheriffs were on the scene in autos and had begun a man hunt. Owing to the darkness, Durham reached home and slew his family and then fled again.

Durham, who was hunted relentlessly for hours, dodged his pursuers, leaving them without a clue, boarded a car in the residential district, and rode quickly to the plaza in the centre of the business section, where he put a bullet into his brain. He recovered consciousness later, but the coroner says he will die.

Mrs. Durham and her child were beaten to death with a steel bar, while they lay asleep in their rooms in a downtown lodging house.

Drowned In Muskoka.

Gravenhurst, Aug. 2.—A very sad drowning accident occurred here Saturday afternoon about three o'clock on Muskoka Bay, in which two young ladies lost their lives. J. E. Mark, formerly a patient at the Free Sanitarium, took two young ladies of Toronto, the Misses Jewesson, out for a sail in a canoe. The lake was very rough, and, while passing the Muskoka Navigation Co.'s steamer Nipissing, the swells from the steamer combined with the strong waves, upset the canoe.

Mr. Mark and one of the Misses Jewesson were picked up, but although every effort was made by the doctors, the girl could not be restored to consciousness. Mr. Mark soon came around and is not much the worse from the effects of the accident. The body of the other Miss Jewesson was not recovered until Sunday afternoon.

N.Y.C. Engineer Killed.

Rome, N.Y., Aug. 2.—At 2.20 a.m. yesterday a westbound light engine on the New York Central Railway, running on track two, about half a mile west of Oriskany, became disabled and the engineer, Bertram L. West of Rovenna, N.P., stopped to make repairs.

The fireman went back with a lantern to warn approaching trains. He had gone only a short distance when a fast passenger train westbound, running on track two, came along. The engineer was unable to check his speed in time to avoid a collision with the light engine. Engineer West, who was evidently under his engine making repairs, was killed.

The accident occurred about 1,000 feet west of a signal tower. Not much damage was done to either engine.

Drowned In the Canal.

Kingston, Aug. 2.—The steamer North King on arrival here reported the drowning of William Dunn, watchman on the steamer for twenty years, in the Murray Canal, while the boat was coming east during the night. The body was recovered. It is not known how the accident happened. Dunn belonged to Kingston.

First Sample of 1910 Crop.

Winnipeg, Aug. 2.—A sample of the first delivery of wheat from the 1910 crop in Manitoba has been received. It was marketed at Rosenfeld on Saturday, graded No. 1 northern and sold at $1.01 per bushel. This is believed to be a record date for delivery of new spring wheat in Western Canada.

Mother Drowns Four Babies.

Antioch, Cal., Aug. 2.—One after another four little children were drowned in a tub near here by their mother. The woman, Mrs. Joseph Mello, walked away from her dead babies quietly and calmly submitted to arrest. She had become suddenly demented. The eldest child was four years old.

Quarryman Killed.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Aug. 2.—Dominic Piemond was struck by a falling stone, while working at the Queenston Quarry Co.'s quarry yesterday, and instantly killed. The stone struck his leg, bowling him over, and his neck was broken by the fall.

A mummy found in Egypt [illegible] presented to the English Royal College of Surgeons in 1892 recently was decided by experts to be the oldest known, dating from about 3000 B. C.

Farm and Garden

AUTOMOBILE AS FARM HAND.

Many Uses For the Motorcar as an Adjunct to Farm Work.

The automobile is rapidly becoming the most useful and popular farm hand that can be employed by the enterprising agriculturist. Its variety of uses is great. A man who has a large farm to look after finds that he can get around much more swiftly and comfortably in an auto runabout than by horse, buggy or Shanks' mare. Some farmers use the auto in peddling chickens about town, while others fire up their motorcars early in the morning and speed away to town and deliver milk from door to door. For hauling light produce to market the automobile is unexcelled. When the children have a considerable distance to go to reach the country schoolhouse they are happy if "pop" or the hired man can crank up the auto and speed them on their way.

PEDDLING CHICKENS IN AUTO.

Charles P. Cushing, a writer in Leslie's Weekly, has some interesting things to say about the use of the automobile on farms—for instance:

David Rankin, owner of a system of farms comprising 25,640 acres near Tarkio, Mo., has some philosophy on this subject. He likes to feel the pull of reins and sticks to the old fashioned buggy himself, but he gives his foremen automobiles. This is simply part of his business policy: "Get the best and latest farming implements. They are the cheapest in the end."

To say, as writers for certain automobile journals do, that the farmers are hostile to automobiles is rank nonsense. The greatest difference of opinion on motorcars may be found among the farmers in the same state or even in the same county. As correspondent for the Kansas City Star I toured Missouri with Governor Joseph W. Folk when he was campaigning for the senatorship in the fall of 1908. In the more progressive towns the farmers had their motorcars waiting at the hitching posts around the courthouse square as evidence of the progressive spirit and the prosperity of the community more patent than fat sheep or bulging corncribs.

In Kansas hundreds of farmers have bought automobiles. That is not a newspaper "feature story" for the delectation of the gullible and the amusement of editorial satirists. It is plain fact.

Do not jump to the conclusion from this, however, that many farmers have bought blindly. The farmer's familiarity with tools and farm machinery and gasoline engines is a far better preparation for intelligent selection of a car and intelligent care of it afterward than the ordinary city man's superficial knowledge gained from catalogues and gossip or from watching a thousand "makes" whir past him on the streets.

At a motorcar show in Kansas City there was an example of this point. Isaac Page of Dickinson county, Kan., had just traded his runabout for a touring car. The deal was finished as quickly and as calmly as the purchase of a washing machine. Mr. Page's manner was that of a city business man, though he wore a black felt cheese box hat with a huge brim, a white hickory shirt without a necktie, and his suit was the plainest of "store clothes."

UP TO DATE AUTO MILKMAN.

"Don't get it into your head that I'm old. I'm only fifty-seven," he warned when I introduced myself as a reporter. "And don't think that there's anything unusual in a farmer from Dickinson county, Kan., buying a new motorcar. I always say we older people can't afford to get into ruts. Things change, and we've got to keep up. There are a dozen other farmers in my neighborhood who own cars. We need 'em. Now, I live eight miles out of Abilene. With a car I can run in in twenty-two minutes. See?"

If Distilleries Should Close.

The secretary of agriculture is authoritatively quoted as saying that if every distillery and brewery in the United States was to close and never use another bushel of grain in the manufacture of intoxicating liquors the American farmers, as a class, would not know it as far as the effect would show itself on the markets for grain.

The time is past when the scoffer can sit in the rear and say it is not a part of modern progress to advertise.

So perfect an insulator is dry air that it takes 10,000 volts of electricity to leap a gap of an inch.

SALVE FOR HIS WOUND.

A Strenuous Scene That Was Not on the Bill of the Play.

Giovanni Grasso, a Sicilian actor of unusual dramatic energy, was playing in Florence in one of his fiercest parts, where he had to stab his enemy with a dagger. Suddenly, in the heat of his passion, Grasso let the weapon slip out of his hand. It alighted in the pit on a man's head, cutting it slightly.

An indignant member of the audience flung the knife back to the stage, where it was dexterously caught by Grasso. Raising it aloft in his hand and as if it were accursed, Grasso smashed it in two and then stamped upon it.

Then, with a swift bound, Grasso was in the pit beside the injured man. The next minute he had climbed back to the boards, with the victim in his arms.

After settling him in a chair Grasso threw himself on his knees and began a long entreaty for forgiveness. This was rapidly granted by the much embarrassed playgoer, who on his side begged to be allowed to return to his seat.

But this was not to be until Grasso, weeping copiously, had bestowed no fewer than fifty resounding kisses on the man's blushing cheeks.

The action was greeted with loud cheers, and after Grasso had gracefully bowed his thanks the play was resumed and successfully concluded.—London Express.

Perils of the Hair Cut.

"Ouch!" cried the barber and something besides. He stuck the end of his thumb in his mouth and began sucking it.

"Cut yourself?" asked the man in the chair.

"No; it's an ingrowing hair," replied the barber—"an ingrowing hair under my thumb nail."

The man in the chair laughed.

"Fact," said the barber. "It isn't an uncommon thing either. In giving a customer a hair cut a bit of hair often lodges under the finger nail, and if it isn't removed it is apt to fester and get sore. Sometimes we don't even know it's there until it begins to get in its fine work. It hurts like the dickens sometimes. If you don't believe me, ask any barber and he'll tell you the same thing."—New York Times.

A Gun Club's Treasure.

Thirteen million cartridge shells, the result of eleven years of shooting by the members of a gun club, have been gathered into a huge pile by one of the leading sporting organizations of England. Eleven years ago one of the members conceived the idea of having the members save all their shells and deposit them on the pile. The shell bank is now the club's most prized possession. If a single man were to shoot one cartridge a second day and night it would take him about twenty-five years to discharge 13,000,000. The club maintains a vigilant guard over its precious shell pile.

Filial Repartee.

Richard Brinsley Sheridan, who was always distressed for money, was one day hacking his face with a dull razor when he turned to his eldest son and said:

"Tom, if you open any more oysters with my razor I'll cut you off with a shilling."

"Very well, father," said Tom, "but where will you get the shilling?"

The Prize Holder.

"I understand you have a fine track team here," said the visitor to the man who was showing him over the college campus. "What individual holds most of the medals?"

"The town pawnbroker," answered his guide after due deliberation.—New York Journal.

SINGS ITS DEATH SONG.

A Peculiar Bird Found In the Jungles of South America.

There is a queer bird in the jungles of northern South America which is called the "pauji" by the natives, but is known to science as the galeated curassow. It is chiefly remarkable because it sings its own death song.

It does not really sing, but makes a deep humming noise which sounds very much like the Spanish words "El muerto esta aqui" (the corpse lies here).

"It is while uttering this lugubrious chant," said a South American traveler, "that the pauji usually meets its death, for the hunter can then easily track it to its retreat, and it falls a victim, as the Indians say, to its own death song."

If the pauji gets suspicious it immediately ceases humming, and that is a sure indication to the hunter that the bird has seen him or scents danger. In such a case the only thing for the sportsman to do is to remain perfectly still. The bird may become reassured after waiting awhile and again begin to call, "The corpse lies here." It can then be cautiously approached and killed.

If it is only wounded the pauji usually escapes, though it cannot fly much better than the ordinary domestic fowl. It is very fleet of foot and will outrun the hunter until it is lost in the dense undergrowth of the jungle.

In the mating season the male pauji is the most pugnacious of birds and will fight its own kind whenever it meets them. Often the fight ends in the annihilation of both combatants.

OILING THE ATLANTIC.

Proposed Plan to Smooth the Passage to Europe.

Pouring oil on the troubled waters will be much more than a metaphor if a plan offered by the United States hydographic office is carried out. Its serious proposal is to keep the path between New York and the northern European ports well oiled so that the waves may be kept down and passengers may cross in perfect comfort.

The hydrographic office knows a lot about waves and claims that nothing is so bad for 'em as oil. Moreover, oil spreads quickly and thinly over the water, and hence the calming can be done at small expense. A quart of cheap petroleum an hour for each ship would, they say, do the work in decent weather, and $25 per trip ought to cover it easily. With the big liners constantly passing the part carried away by the ocean currents would be restored without delay.

Maybe some day we shall have a wrecking crew to repair midocean washouts in the oil track. Meanwhile the hydrographic office will need more than crude oil to calm the storm of ridicule which this plan of theirs has awakened. Veteran sea captains claim that they have never yet seen an ocean that would hold still long enough to be oiled.—Success Magazine.

THE STOMACH.

Its Power to Resist Its Own Gastric Juices Is a Puzzle.

One of the greatest questions disturbing the minds of physiologists both past and present is that of the stomach's digesting powers. It is asked why the stomach does not digest itself. It is well known that gastric juices have the power to digest the tissue of which the stomach is made. One of the things actually manufactured by the body, secreted in the glands near the stomach and poured into it, is hydrochloric acid, a powerful agent that will eat up almost anything. Why it does not eat the stomach up is problematical.

It is known that a stomach from a dead animal or man can be digested by a living man. It has been found out also that when a man is killed accidentally and his stomach is in the process of digesting, if the body be kept warm, his whole stomach will be digested and possibly, too, adjacent organs, as liver, pancreas, etc. From this it was argued that the "principle of life" kept the process from going on in a living being. Subsequently, however, this was proved to be untrue. A living frog was put in an unconscious condition and his leg inserted through a small hole in a dog's stomach, the dog being alive and well. It was found that the frog's leg was wholly digested in the process, although living. So the last reason conceivable was proved incapable of explaining the phenomenon.

About the only conclusion left is that the stomach does gradually actually eat itself up, but that it is being constantly rebuilt. However, as this experiment is hard to perform and as no results have so far been announced in this direction, we are left in a state of absolute ignorance, and all we can do is to be devoutly thankful to Providence that our stomachs do not digest themselves except in the ordinary course of human events.—Lawrence Hodges in New York Tribune.

A Lesson In Anatomy.

A professor at one of our universities is very witty upon occasion.

An Ancient Pension.

A curious revelation regarding the origin of a $1,500 pension which falls to the Lord Mayor of Dublin was made in reply to a question asked in the House of Commons the other day. It was explained that the pension was granted in consideration of services rendered to Charles II. The sum in question is a perpetual annuity granted by the Merry Monarch to the mayor of the day and his successors, for eminent services rendered at the time of the Restoration. For many years it carried with it the rank of captain in the army, with its corresponding privileges regarding command and so forth. The latter privileges have become obsolete, and the Lord Mayor of Dublin performs no military service; but the annuity is still paid out of the Consolidated Fund.

Judges' Gowns.

The London Law Times points out that the silk gown of the bench and bar owes its original use to its having been adopted as a form of mourning at the death of an English sovereign. On the death of Queen Mary in 1694 the present silk gown was introduced as mourning and, having been found more convenient and less troublesome than the regular dress then worn, has since been continued. The late Sir Frederick Pollock is said to have expressed an opinion in reference to the ordinary costume of the bar that the bench and bar went into mourning at the death of Queen Anne and have so remained ever since. American courts adopted the gown along with the English common law.

SPROUTED OATS DANDY FOR POULTRY.

A friend whose husband was forever teasing her because she got no eggs in winter quietly came to us for a tip.

She wanted winter eggs, but she wished to have one on John more.

She had been feeding cut bone and mixed grains, but no greens, and the solid ration made her hens too fat to lay.

We furnished her enough sprouted oats till what she soaked should sprout and advised her to give her hens less grain and to make them scratch hard for that for antifat and blood circulator.

Pretty soon the eggs began to come, and instead of accepting it all as bona fide John accused her of feeding egg dopes.

She showed him a long box of sprouted green oats which had been kept covered behind the kitchen stove, and the laugh was on John.

SPROUTED OATS.

This oats was sprouted in cheese box lids fourteen inches in diameter, kept warm beside our hot water heater in the cellar in January.

Two quarts of heavy oats when soaked are enough for a lid and make a good meal of green feed for forty to fifty hens.

A sprouting space 3 by 3 feet will give a plentiful day's feed for 600 hens.

All that is necessary are a box with a rim, good heavy oats, plenty of water and a temperature of 60 degrees or more.

Soak the oats for twenty-four hours, then spread them no deeper than two inches in the receptacle and water well every day.

Bore a few holes in the box for drainage, set it level and do not stir the oats or allow them to get dry.

For a continuous supply you must put oats to soak right along to take the place of what you feed.

The oats soon begin to grow, the sprouts coming to four to six inches in from ten to fifteen days. All poultry like sprouted oats. Pheasants and Belgian hares run for it. Feed it when tender as lettuce, feed it regularly and watch the eggs pile up.

DON'TS.

Don't imagine crows are just pest exterminators. They are great chick perambulators.

Don't let the babes alone in the house where they can get at the incubator. Oh, no; you're not such a careless mater.

Don't let the chickens track the back porch. Such a man any wife should scorch.

Don't put that brooder too near the road. Some thief may haul it off all in one load.

Don't bed small chicks on sawdust. It brings ills and kills.

A LIGHT ATMOSPHERE.

Why Smoke "Beats Down" When It Leaves a Chimney.

"It's getting ready for a storm. See how the smoke beats down just as soon as it comes out of the chimney? That's because the air is so heavy it pushes the smoke down before it has time to rise."

One often hears this stated as fact concerning that most generally talked of subject on earth, the weather. The speaker was probably right under those conditions in prophesying a storm, but he was scarcely right in assigning as a reason that "the air is so heavy it pushes the smoke down."

Nearly everybody knows it is easier to swim in salt water than in fresh water. As salt water is heavier than fresh water it is evident that the heavier the liquid the greater the buoyant force.

The atmosphere exerts a buoyant force upon the smoke from chimneys in exactly the same way that water exerts a buoyant force upon a swimmer. Therefore when the smoke "beats down" as soon as it leaves a chimney it must be concluded that the buoyant force exerted upon it is relatively small and that the air is not heavy, but light.

A light atmosphere, or, rather, a sudden lessening of the pressure of the atmosphere generally, takes place before a storm. Therefore the smoke from chimneys, if observed intelligently, furnishes a pretty good weather indicator.—Chicago Record-Herald.

VEGETABLE FOODS.

Spinach Rich In Sulphur and Iron, Pumpkin In Phosphorus.

The French have a saying that "parsley is a broom to sweep the stomach." Lettuce is a nerve food. Radishes build tissue and are rich in phosphorus and in iron.

Horseradish contains a higher percentage of sulphur than all the other vegetable roots, spinach ranking next in value. Spinach also contains a large proportion of iron.

A mayonnaise dressing with lettuce is especially desirable for thin people, but for the overplump French dressing is to be recommended. The action of vinegar on the digestive organs, however, is not to be considered. The acid of lemon juice is preferable.

While apples are a most excellent fruit for brain building, which phosphorus aids in, the humble pumpkin, desecrated to the uses of pie and jack o' lanterns, holds the prize. Pumpkin rates 2.79 in phosphorus, while apple is but .45.

When in search for this special element take up a pumpkin diet. But as winter squash would stand the same analysis it can be used as a vegetable in many varieties and thus the needed phosphorus supplied. Cucumbers rank next in phosphorus value to pumpkin, being 2.08.—Vegetarian Magazine.

THE CLEVEREST FAMILY.

Many Notable Lives Compete For the Honor In Great Britain.

Although he would be a bold man who would attempt to decide which are the cleverest families in England, it is a safe and easy matter to point out a dozen families which, in brainpower, stand head and shoulders above all rivals; and high on the list one would certainly put the Pollocks, one of whom has recently been appointed Bishop of Norwich.

When David Pollock, the Strand saddler, led his bride to the altar while the third George was King, he littl dreamt that he was to become the founder of one of the ablest families in Europe. Of David's sons, the eldest became Sir David, Chief Justice of Bombay; the second, Sir Jonathan, graduated as chief baron of the Exchequer and a baronet; while George, his third son died a field-marshall, a baronet, and a G.C.B.

In the next generation one Pollock, Sir Charles, was a baron of Exchequer; and another, Sir William, was senior master of the Supreme Court; while the third generation of the saddler's descendants includes Sir Frederick Pollock, one of the greatest jurists in Europe, and Walter Herries Pollock, the well-known lawyer and man of letters.

In addition to these men of mark, each generation has produced men who have or are brilliant ornaments of the law, the army, and medicine; and to-day no fewer than fifteen Pollocks figure in "Who's Who," of whom eight are clever lawyers, three are clergymen (one a bishop), two are soldiers, four are authors, three are baronets, and two are M.P.'s.

For centuries, ever since the great Lord Burleigh's day, the Cecil family has produced an almost unbroken sequence of clever men, not the least notable of whom have flourished in our own time—the late Marquess of Salisbury, Mr. A. J. Balfour (Premiers both), Lords Hugh and Robert Cecil, and others of great ability if of less fame.

The obscure vicarage of Ottery St. Mary, Devonshire, was the nursery of another clever family—the Coleridges. Among its most distinguished members have been Samuel, the poet, and his two brilliant children, Hartley and Sara. Sir John, the poet's nephew, was a judge of the High Court; his son was Lord Coleridge, Lord Chief Justice of England; and his grandson is to-day an ornament of our judicial bench; while of other Coleridges who have won fame in various fields the name is legion.

In three generations the Wordsworth family has produced a great poet and three bishops (of St. Andrews, Lincoln and Salisbury), in addition to many learned authors and ecclesiastics, several of whom are living to-day.

Among other families which have maintained a high standard of ability for many generations down to our own time are the Lytteltons, Churchills, Greys, and Robinson (the Marquess of Ripon's family). Of the Lytteltons of to-day, all brothers, one is an ex-Cabinet Minister, another is a general of distinction, and the third is head master of Eton; while every generation of Churchills has produced able men, from the time of the great Duke of Marlborough to Lord Randolph and his clever son, Winston Churchill.

At present there are few more able families than that of Ridgeway. Of the three sons of a late Tunbridge Wells vicar, two are now bishops (of Kensington and Chichester), while one is the Right Hon. Sir Joseph West Ridgeway, who has won many laurels abroad. The Kiplings are another conspicuously clever family, from Mr. John L. Kipling, C.I.E., and his wife, to their children, Rudyard and his sister.

And there is the family of Sir Lawrence Alma-Tadema, whose wife and two daughters are almost as capable as himself, for two of them have won distinction with their brushes; while Miss Laurence Alma-Tadema is a novelist of repute.

Died Before Suicide.

A peculiar case of failure to commit suicide through the intervention of legitimate death, occurred in the Islington district of London recently. At the inquest on the death of Chas. Humblin, glass merchant, it was stated that deceased was left at his workshop, and when his son returned in the afternoon he could not gain admission. Forcing an entry, he found his father lying dead on the floor with a loose cord round his neck. There was a piece of rope hanging from a beam over the place where he lay. Medical evidence showed that death was due to hear failure in consequence of the shock caused by the fall through the breaking of the rope when deceased tried to hang himself

Dislikes Happy Endings.

A remarkable fact concerning "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," which Mr. Thomas Hardy, the famous novelist, who recently celebrated his seventieth birthday, wrote twenty years ago, is that many people sent him letters imploring him to reconstruct the story, so as to make the ending a happy one. But Mr. Hardy was never a believer in the "living-happily-ever-after" ending to a novel. He says that the unreality of such methods irritates him, and he refused to alter his story one iota. Mr. Hardy still works diligently, and spends all the morning writing in his room. No man dislikes social prominence more, and he is inaccessible to any but his most intimate friends. Mr. Hardy considers that for a writer to enter into a constantly increasing round of social pleasures and gaieties is fatal. He should be content with the life which he was leading when he first made his mark.

An Unassuming Lord.

What people like about Lord Selborne, the late High Commissioner of South Africa, who has lately returned to this country, is his total lack of "side." In his early days Lord Selborne did a great deal of work amongst the East end poor. "The first time I ever saw Lord Selborne," said a well-known personage, "I took him for an East end curate in a billycock hat." His father, the first Lord Selborne, who was one of the greatest lawyers of the Victorian age, once wrote of his son, "He has not hitherto been wanting, and I trust never will be, in pluck and resolution to do his duty according to his lights." The father's words have been more than justified.

Defining an Art Patron.

"Is your husband so very fond of art?"

"Art! He doesn't know a Raphael from a haircut."

"Why, I understood him to say that he was an art patron."

"Patron! That man wouldn't trade a club sandwich for a Bouguereau! What does he mean by calling himself an art patron?"

"Why, it says it costs him ten thousand a year to pay for the bogus masters the smooth dealers coax you to buy—and that makes him an art patron."

Special Committee Has New Scheme

MAY RECOMMEND ONE BIG ELECTRIC PUMP AT PUMP HOUSE INSTEAD OF TWO.

The special committee of the City Council which has under consideration the installing of an electric plant at the pump house, held another lengthy session last night. Nothing of a definite nature was accomplished, and the committee adjourned to meet again on Thursday evening.

At last night's session a new scheme was proposed and discussed. It was that, instead of installing, as was at first proposed, two electric pumps of 85 horse power, only one electric pump of 110 horse power should be installed, and the two present pumps be kept intact in case of necessity. This idea is considered by a number of the members to be not only the better plan, but the more economical, and, at the same time, just as effective The pumps now in use would remain where they are and an addition to the pump house be made for the proposed new electric pump. The scheme appears to be a most feasible one and will probably be the one recommended to the Council.

Money Flowed into The Civic Coffers.

TAXPAYERS YESTERDAY TOOK ADVANTAGE OF LAST DAY FOR PAR PAYMENTS.

The taxpayers of the city yesterday took advantage of it being the last day that taxes for 1910 could be paid at par. The amount paid in, upwards of $35,000, was the largest collection for one day in the history of the city As a consequence the Tax Collector was kept busy making out receipts.

Trenton Had Big Day Yesterday.

Yesterday was civic holiday in Trenton, and the Firemen's tournament and sports was the attraction which caused many Bellevillians to attend. There was a fair-sized crowd in town, though the G. T. R. strike kept many away. The sports were good, but were somewhat marred by rain which fell. The Park Nine and Stations, of this city, played a game of baseball the former winning by 7 to 4.

Sports and hose reel races took place in Firemen's Park. The cup presented by E. Weddell, of Trenton, was won by the Napanee fire brigade in 39 1-5 seconds, as against Deseronto, 41 4-5 seconds. Port Hope fire brigade lost through failure to make hose connection.

Rolling Mills Were Closed by Strike.

The local rolling mills, owing to lack of material, caused by the G. T. R. strike, have been forced to close down. It is to be hoped that the strike will soon be settled, that material may soon arrive and the plant soon run as heretofore.

Talked to Grand Trunk Employes.

Last evening a meeting was held in the city hall which was fairly well attended by Grand Trunk employees It was in the interest of those who are on strike, and the speaker was Mr. Todd, of Toronto, a conductor on the western division of the road, who is a most fluent speaker. The trend of his address was the grievance which the strikers had against the company. Mr. McKenna, of this city, presided over the gathering.

Bogus Cheque Man Was in Kingston.

ALMOST DID UP TWO PARTIES BUT THEY WERE WISE TO HIS LITTLE GAME.

Kingston, August 1.—A slick bogus cheque expert, who is employed with a transportation company which passes through this city, recently "almost" did a local merchant for $5 and a local hotel keeper for $20 with cheques for which there were no funds in the bank.

The manner in which the merchant was temporarily "done up" reads like a dime novel. The man entered his establishment about three weeks ago and purchased goods amounting to $2, for which he gave an I.O.U. The man left the city, and the merchant believing he was "stung," tore up the I.O.U. To his surprise the customer turned up a few days later and asked for his I.O.U., which he paid by a cheque for $5 on the Bank of Ottawa, after having purchased some other goods and receiving change for the balance. This bank has no branch in this city, and the cheque required to be sent to Ottawa to be cashed, giving the man ample time to clear out. The merchant discovered the trick a few days later.

By a stroke of fortune the merchant went travelling about a week ago on the transportation company with which the thief is employed. He recognized the man and by threats of arrest secured his money.

When the merchant returned to the city he found out that the hotelkeeper had suffered in a similar manner, the man having given a $20 cheque on the same bank in payment of a bill. He told the hotel man where the swindler was employed. Last night the hotelman in company with a friend interviewed the issuer of the cheques. The friend posed as a detective, and through threats of arrest they secured the money.

It is understood that a warrant for his arrest has been issued in Ottawa for similar offences.

CANADIAN NAVAL SERVICE DEPARTMENT HAS NUMEROUS APPLICATIONS.

Halifax, July 30.—Deputy Minister Desbarats, director of the naval service, who has arrived here, says the cruiser Niobe has been delayed owing to the necessity of drafting men for the naval manoeuvres.

The vessel will sail for Halifax about the middle of September and the naval college at Halifax will be opened the first of the year. A large number of applications have already been received, and it is expected that the new college will start with a promising class of cadets.

The department is now looking for competent instructors. It is intended eventually to have the college manned by Canadians but in the meantime it will probably be necessary to get the heads of the staff from the Old Country.

How King George Is Guarded.

There are few more interesting branches of the detective service than guarding royalty, although the responsibilities of such work are tremendous.

Inspector Spencer, who follows King George, must be ready to appear in frock-coat or lounge-suit, shooting jack or evening dress, as the occasion demands, and he is never far from his royal master's side. He must know how to deal with a thousand and one emergencies, must be the essence of diplomacy, and must prevent the innumerable cranks from worrying royalty when it travels by the train, or other means. One harmless lunatic, with plenty of money, was in the habit of traveling wherever King Edward went, and it was Mr. Spencer's duty to keep this gentleman from seeing his Majesty, except from a distance.

Royal personages, in the majority of cases, communicate their plans to their detectives beforehand, and they have a written program to guide them in making the necessary arrangements for safety. King Alfonso, however, is a notable exception; and on one occasion he dropped through a window, and went off on a shopping expedition, completely outwitting his protectors.

The Discovery of Blotting-Paper.

Blotting-paper was discovered purely by accident. Some ordinary paper was being made one day at a mill in Berkshire, when a careless workman forgot to put in the sizing material. The whole of the paper made was regarded as being useless. The proprietor of the mill desired to write a note shortly afterwards, and he took a piece of waste paper, thinking it was good enough for the purpose. To his intense annoyance the ink spread all over the paper. Suddenly there flashed over his mind the thought that this paper would do instead of sand for drying ink, and he at once advertised his waste paper as "blotting." There was such a big demand that the mill ceased to make ordinary paper and was soon occupied in making blotting only, the use of which spread to all countries.

Finds Mammoth's Tooth.

A strange find was made on the Yorkshire coast the other day. As a man was walking over Filey Cliff he saw a piece of ivory projecting from the cliff face. He worked at the object with his walking-stick, and disclosed the tooth of a mammoth in perfect state of preservation. It is that of a large ruminant, and weighs 12 pounds 13 ounces. Along the gum line it measured a shade over twelve inches, whilst it stands eight inches in height and is close upon four inches thick. The ivory is as fresh as when the huge animal died. Mammoth remains have been previously found along the Yorkshire coast at long intervals, but nothing approaching a tooth of such giant dimensions as this one has ever been discovered.

His Own Case.

"Pa," said Willie, "what does it mean to say a man is 'one of nature's noblemen?'"

"'One of nature's noblemen,' my son," replied the old gentleman, with a significent look at his better half, "is a man who smiles when he gets some ridiculous cheap gift for his birthday and exclaims: 'How nice! Just what I wanted!'"

Force of Habit.

"Why did you break your engagement with that schoolteacher?" asked the friend.

"If I failed to show up at her house every evening she expected me to bring a written excuse signed by my mother."

THE INTELLIGENCER is printed and published for The Intelligencer Printing and Publishing House (Limited) by CHARLES JAMES BOWELL, of the City of Belleville in the County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, at their offices, No. 403 Front Street, Belleville.

From Hastings to Trenton

Few people have any idea of the extent of the work that is at present under way on the various contracts on the construction of the Trent Canal between Rice Lake and Trenton. A trip from the village of Hastings following the Trent River closely to the Bay of Quinte, is one of the most delightful and at the same time one of the most interesting trips imaginable. The writer had an opportunity one day recently of going over the work, which is rapidly being pushed to completion and an inspection of the many new locks, bridges and dams is conclusive evidence that a great deal of work has already been accomplished, and that before many years, navigation will be possible to Lake Ontario and to the outside world generally.

At Hastings which is known for construction purposes, as contract No. 7 of the Ontario-Rice Lake Division of the Canal, the work is being hustled along in a highly satisfactory manner. This section extends from Healey's Falls Bridge to Rice Lake a distance of 19 1-4 miles. The principal works consist of considerable rock and earth dredging in the river, a new lock and dam at Hastings and a new swing bridge at Trent Bridge.

The Randolph Macdonald Company, Limited, has this contract. Of course there was navigation right through to Healey's Falls before the contract was let, but with the new and much improved lock at Hastings, and the channel straightened and deepened navigation will be vastly improved. The Randolph MacDonald Company has been working on this contract for over a year. They have built a splendid plant, including dredge, scows and tug and have done a considerable amount of drilling and blasting. A splendid concrete dock has been erected to the west of the highway bridge at Hastings, and the work of constructing the new lock is now in progress. It is expected that this lock will be finished this year and the contractors will then commence the construction of the new dam. The work of building the new highway bridge at Trent Bridge is being rushed forward. A very substantial and in fact artistic temporary structure has been built by the contractors to accommodate the traffic across the river at this point, until such time as the new bridge is completed. It is anticipated that the new bridge will be completed this fall. Trent Bridge, it might be mentioned is a growing summer resort, there having been six new cottages erected there this season, in addition to a number of pretty summer houses that have been occupied each summer for some years past. These cottages are owned by Toronto, Campbellford and Havelock people. The fishing at Trent Bridge cannot be surpassed on these waters, and many excellent catches are each day reported. Trent Bridge is very easily reached from Havelock on the C. P. R. being a drive of only three miles.

Following on down the Trent River one comes to the next important point of interest, Healey's Falls, the water of which when developed will constitute one of the largest and finest power stations in Ontario. The drop at Healey's Falls is 76 feet, and today at a period of the year when water is generally scarce, there is abundance of water flowing over the Falls at this point—good and valuable power going to waste. However, a strong company has been organized to develop this power and before many years, the counties of Hastings, Northumberland, Peterborough and Durham will be reaping the benefits of the natural resources of the district that has been lying in its undeveloped state. Section No. 6, it may be stated, extends from the lower end of Crow Bay to a point 1,000 feet west of Healey's Falls Bridge, a distance of only 3.1 miles. The contract for the construction of this section has just recently been let to Messrs. Haney, Robertson and Quinlan, of Toronto, and they are already on the ground with a view to getting the work as far advanced as possible this fall. The work will consist of three locks and a new dam. A great deal of rock cutting will be required at this point, but with the reputation that this well known firm of contractors has for rushing work to completion, there is reason to believe that navigation over Healey's Falls will be an accomplished fact in a year or two at least.

Healey's Falls is already assuming a busy appearance, offices, boarding houses and shacks of various kinds for the housing and accommodation of the men generally, are being erected. The contractors are building a new scow at Hastings, which will be used for the freighting of supplies and materials to Healey's Falls.

Contract No. 5.

Following closely around Crow's Bay one soon reaches Contract No. 5, that several years ago was awarded to Messrs. Brown and Aylmer. This contract extended from the Highway Bridge across the river in the town of Campbellford, to the lower end of Crow Bay, a distance of three miles. The contract for the construction of this section was entered into in September, 1907, and it will likely be completed this year. This contract calls for two locks, two dams and considerable dredging. The two dams and one of the locks have already been completed and are splendid samples of concrete work. The second lock is well under way and will most likely be completed this fall. At what is known as Middle Falls a power house has been erected by the municipality of the town of Campbellford and power is at present being developed at that point.

At what was formerly called Stephens' dam, where the Seymour-Northumberland Power Company, have a splendid power house and are transmitting electrical energy to the Deloro mines, the village of Stirling and various other towns, villages and other municipalities in the district. They have a splendid power house and are finding a ready market for their power. The head at Middle Falls is 25 feet, while the head of Stephen's dam where the Seymour-Northumberland Power Company's plant is situated is 23 feet.

Messrs. Brown and Aylmer, the contractors, have done considerable dredging and a feature of their plant is a Lobnitz rock breaker, which does the work otherwise carried on by the use of drill scows and dynamite. Altogether the work at this point may be said to be well advanced and this fall should see the last of the concreting.

Section No. 4.

This is the heaviest and most expensive section on the whole division from Rice Lake to Trenton. The contract for this section has only recently been let to Messrs. Haney Robertson and Quinlan, who have also the contract for the Healey's Falls section. Section No. 4 extends from the town of Campbellford, the moving of dwellings and other buildings, the erection of concrete retaining walls and the construction of five locks and three dams. Although this is the heaviest contract it was the last one let, the delay being due to the uncertainty of the route to be adopted at this point. It was thought that a better route might be secured by cutting across country for a few miles and entering Bradley Bay some distance below the town of Campbellford. However, the route through the town has been chosen, and while it is certain that this contract will delay for some time, through navigation to Trenton, at the same time, the contractors are starting in at the work in real earnest. Steam shovels, and donkey engines of standard gauge and other equipments are being rushed to this section and several hundred men will, before long, be engaged on the contract. Some splendid water power will be available for development when these new dams are completed.

Below the town of Campbellford there is a fine stretch of water extending to Glen Ross, or which is more commonly known as Chisholm's Rapids. Years ago, when the Imperial Government conceived the idea of building a canal from the Bay of Quinte to Georgian Bay, Chisholm's Rapids was the point at which operations was first commenced. That was in the year 1835. A lock of 8 foot lift was constructed of nicely cut limestone, but, so the story goes, the Rebellion of 1837 broke out and the money that had been voted for the Canal had to be diverted towards the suppression of the Mackenzie uprising, and no further work on the Trent Canal was at that time attempted. The lock at Chisholm's was never used—its modest gates never opened to receive the gunwale-laden vessels that it was hoped would pass through its well laid walls and it soon fell into dilapidation. To-day piles of trimmed limestone lying on the banks of the Canal at Glen Ross are all that is to be seen of the work performed by the Old Imperial government. The former lock has been completely demolished and in its stead is a handsome new and modern lock of concrete, awaiting, like its predecessor, the commerce of the west. Chisholm's Rapids is known for construction purposes as contract No. 3. This contract extends from a point three miles above Chisholm's Rapid to the village of Frankford, a distance of 7 1-2 miles. The contract was awarded to the Canadian General Development Company, Limited, in April 1908, and the work, with the exception of some dredging, is completed. The work consisted of a new concrete dam and a lock of 9 feet lift, a highway swing bridge across the head of the lock and a swing in the Central Ontario Railroad. The lock is now ready to receive the gates, the highway bridge is complete and the swing in the railway bridge is ready for the passing of vessels. The company has moved its plant away and will finish the dredging portion of their contract, when the locks are finished and a dredge can be taken up to Glen Ross.

Proceeding further down the majestic Trent one comes to Frankford, the headquarters of the next contract, known as No. 2. This contract extends from Frankford to Glen Miller, a distance of four miles, the contractors being Messrs. Dennon and Rogers, who entered upon the work in March, 1908. The work consists of three locks and three dams, considerable rock cutting and a highway swing bridge across the canal at Frankford. The dam above Frankford, known as Dam No. 6, is finished as well. A great deal of excavation and the building of big concrete retaining walls to connect dam No. 6 with the lock is necessary at this point, and a considerable amount of the work has been already done. The swing bridge has been erected and ready for use. Messrs. Denyon and Rogers have done considerable work on their second dam and lock, and should have these finished this fall. There will then be one more dam and lock to build further down the river, towards Glen Miller. There is considerable rock cutting to be done below Lock No. 5.

A very pretty drive brings one over the last section and right to the town of Trenton, so prettily situated on the Bay of Quinte. When one refers to this as the last section, he is strictly speaking not correct, as the sections are numbered from Trenton up, and the section extending from the Bay up to Glen Miller, a distance of three miles, is known as section No. 1. The contractors are Messrs. Larkin and Sangster and they were not unfamiliar to Trent Canal construction, having had a contract some years ago on one of the northern divisions. The present contract was awarded to them in March, 1908, and they have certainly hustled the work since that time. They should at the rate they have carried on the work thus far, be finished by this time next year.

Some very pretty concrete work has been done on this section, including the construction of two dams, two locks, a swing in the highway at Glen Miller, and a concrete retaining wall below Lock 3. The work presents a fine appearance. The contractors are now at their last lock, Lock No. 1, which is immediately north of the Grand Trunk Railway track at Trenton. This lock will be finished this fall and then there is only a dam to be built at this point.

The new overhead bridge in the Grand Trunk Railway tracks is in place, and there will be no delay in this respect. Below the Grand Trunk Railway tracks, a dredge and drill scow are at work getting the channel in shape, and the river banks here are a perfect hive of industry. This, then, furnishes a rough description of the various sections that in a few years will be completed and will provide through navigation from Trenton to Orillia.

The contract for the six highway bridges and one railway swing bridge was awarded to the Hamilton Bridge Works Company. The contract for the construction of the lock gates has not been let as yet. It is understood that the gates with the exception of the gates at Hastings, will be built by contract. The gates at Hastings are now under construction by the Government. The general appearance of the canal between Hastings and Trenton has within the past few years been greatly changed. Roads have been built up to avoid the flooding by the raising of dams, large tracts of land have been acquired for right of way purposes and have been fenced, and substantial rip-rapping is much in evidence in the channels leading to the various locks. The lock houses have as yet not been erected. There is time enough for this work when the completion of the Campbellford section is in sight, but, in the meantime the good effects of the canal construction are being felt. Power is being developed at the various new dams, and that should do for this district what the great Niagara has done for the country around Welland. But the main feature of the work must not be lost sight of, that is to say, the fact that before many summers pass by, the waterway that was projected about 80 years ago, and that possesses an interesting career, will be carrying to the ocean ports of Canada, the grain and commerce generally of the Last Great West.

Strike Settled—G. T. R. Trainmen Go Back—Will Get Standard in 18 Months—Go Back as New Employees and Lose Pension Rights

Montreal, Aug. 3.—The strike of the Grand Trunk Railway trainmen and conductors, which was launched at 9.30 p.m. on Monday night, July 18, was officially declared off at 6 o'clock last night.

The effect of the G.T.R. strike settlement is a compromise. Whereas the company was willing that the standard rates should go into force in 1913, they have agreed that they shall go into force in 1912. Also, the rules which have gone into force on the C.P.R. have been agreed upon. They are particularly favorable to the men. The terms of the settlement of the difficulties are as follows:

1. The company will put back as soon as possible the men, other than those who have been, or may be found, guilty of acts of violence or disorderly conduct, the understanding being that there is to be no coercion or intimidation used towards the new men.

2. The company will put into effect, from May 1, 1910, the rates named in schedule of rates dated July 18, 1910, those rates to be embodied in the present schedules now in effect on this line, it being understood that those rates shall in no instance effect a reduction in any existing rate.

3. The company will, on Jan. 1, 1912, make effective in train and yard service on the G.T.R. the rates of pay and the rules contained in the schedule or agreement on that date in effect on the lines of the Canadian Pacific Railway east of Fort William.

The three above propositions shall apply also to the Central Vermont Railroad Co., the said railroad to be substituted for the Grand Trunk Railway, and the Rutland Railroad to be substituted for the Canadian Pacific Railway, wherever the same are used in the above.

In the case of the Central Vermont, by the "schedule of rates dated July 18, 1910," is meant the schedule issued by the management of that company since July 1.

Signed by Charles M. Hays,
President G.T.R. System.

Attested: A. B. Garretson, pres. O.R.C.; W. G. Lee, pres. B. of R.T.

For the O.R.C.: Robert Kelley, N. Foy, Ed. Z. Sinclair, J. E. Mann. Approved by S. N. Berry, V.P.

For the B.R.T.: John Maloney, J. A. Conner, W. E. Berry, P. A. Hebert. Approved by James Murdock, V.P.

It was stated by President Garretson of the O.R.C., last night, that the company and brotherhood officials parted on the most friendly terms.

The following general order was sent out by Vice-President Jas. Murdock, B.R.T., and Vice-President Sam Berry, O.R.C., to the strikers' committees:

Advise all men to report for duty at once.

Instruct to carefully avoid any mistreatment of strikebreakers until they are all eliminated from the service. All men will be returned to the service as soon as possible.

The printed wage schedule issued by company becomes effective May 1. Canadian Pacific rates and rules become effective Dec. 31, 1911.

On the afternoon the strike was called, Mr. Hays offered to standardize the rate of wages on January 1, 1913, and he now makes the date Dec. 31, 1911, or a gain of a year for the men. The wage offer of Mr. Hays now in force is accepted by the men till the standard rates are adopted.

The increased rates of pay are made retroactive dating from May 1, 1910.

The standardization on the Central Vermont also is made Dec. 31, 1911, but the same to equal the Rutland, rather than the C.P.R., as in the Grand Trunk system.

As to the question of having restored to the strikers the pension privileges lost by the strike, Mr. Murdock said that had not been discussed in the conferences. He explained why.

"We have always taken the position that pensions are an unknown quantity," he said, "that they are placed into effect on many systems only for the purpose of testing the loyalty of the men to their organization in the time of trouble.

"If the men employed in train service get the wage rates and conditions of employment to which they are entitled during the years they are able to give loyal and useful service to their employers, they will probably be able to place themselves in a position whereby they are not of necessity dependent in their advanced years on the pension fund.

"We presume the company is in the same position to do just as it pleases about the question of pensions as it was before the strike. It was not a factor in the negotiating."

The local committee of 42 men from Chicago to Portland, will gather here as soon as possible with Mr. Murdock to frame the conditions, etc., which go with the settlement, and arrange for the payment of the strike benefits to the 3,000 or 4,000 men affected.

Gives Credit to Borden.

Ottawa, Aug. 3.—At 7.20 o'clock last night Hon. Mackenzie King, Minister of Labor, announced that the G.T.R. strike had been settled, as a result of Government intervention.

He stated that the successful issue of the negotiations was due mainly to Sir Frederick Borden.

Indeed, he remarked, that had it not been for the services of the Minister of Militia, he did not believe that the strike would now be ended.

Angry With G.T.R.

North Bay, Aug. 3.—Citizens of North Bay, and members of the Northern Volunteer Firemen's Association, are saying some very uncomplimentary things about the Grand Trunk Railway Co. to-day, as a result of the company's action in cancelling all excursion trains to North Bay for Wednesday, the occasion of the annual tournament of the association, which embraces ten towns, including Penetang, Orillia, Barrie, Parry Sound, Midland, Bracebridge, Huntsville, Burk's Falls, Gravenhurst and North Bay. Excursions had been arranged from all these points, and special trains contracted for.

On account of the strike negotiations were opened with the executive more than a week ago as to the advisability of a postponement, but assurances were received that trains would be furnished. Yesterday word was received that the company had cancelled all excursion trains for the tournament, thus keeping several thousand people away from the celebrations.

Considerable expense was gone to by the North Bay committee for the two days' celebration, including a firemen's tournament, band competition, field sports and horse races, and the cancellation of the Grand Trunk excursion trains at the last moment has aroused intense indignation. The citizens decided to go ahead with the celebration and make the best of a bad situation.

CRICKET CAMP FOLLOWERS.

Men Who Fatten on the "Flannelled Fools."

It is impossible to be among the crowd at a great cricket match without being struck by the number of persons unofficially connected with the game who appear to be reaping a rich harvest out of it. Vendors of sweets sandwiches, and cheap literature are most frequently met with; but one well-dressed gentleman used to frequent Lord's with a huge bag crammed with field-glasses, which he let out at sixpence each for the game.

Craig, "the Surrey Poet," is said to have made as much by the sale of his tropical doggerel during the season as many a novelist does by his books; and a London artist found a way to popular notice in his young days by doing lightning caricatures of famous players in characteristic attitudes on the ground, and then putting them up for auction during the luncheon interval. More curious was an old soldier's device for earning money during the cricket season on one of the Midland grounds. To a considerable section of the crowd the scoring-board is invisible, and he therefore took up a post where he could view every detail of the game, which he announced in a loud voice to the crowd in return for any trifle they cared to drop into his hat on the conclusion of the game.

Other ruses are to take camp-stools, which are readily hired to stand upon by those forming the outer fringe at a big match; to bowl to gentlemen cricketers at the nets, the latter often placing coins on the stumps, to go to the bowler clever enough to beat the bat; to obtain and sell to enthusiasts the autographs of famous players; and to beg for the return passes of gentlemen leaving early in the day, and dispose of them to later arrivals.

A shrewd Yorkshireman used to make money on the northern grounds by exhibiting a very clever parrot, that not only knew the names of the principal players, but would cry, at appropriate times: "Well fielded, sir!" "Bang it over the grand stand!" and "Bowl the beggar out!" A Lancashire enthusiast had a pet canary, whose prophecies as to the number of runs a batsman would make—the bird picking numbered cards out of a rack with its bill—were so frequently near the mark that its owner made a good deal by means of bets and little exhibitions.

The Woolsack of Cricket.

The Earl of Londesborough, who has just been elected to the presidency of the Marylebone Cricket Club—a post which may be described as the Woolsack of Cricket—succeeds a famous line of aristocratic sportsmen. His lordship is patron of the Scarborough Cricket Week, and is Hereditary High Admiral of the Yorkshire Coast. At Blankney, his Lincolnshire seat, a large ship of sugar is annually sent to keep this quaint office in remembrance. Lord Londesborough is rightly described as "an all-round man." Besides being captain of his own fire-brigade, he is a good judge of horses, a distinguished amateur actor, fond of cricket and football, and always ready to lend his patronage in the interests of sport. It was whilst the guest of Lord Londesborough's father that the late King, then Prince of Wales, was attacked by typhoid fever in 1871.

FIGHT IN COUNCIL.

Ald. Kelly and Commissioner Drew of Guelph Come to Blows.

Guelph, Aug. 3.—The most sensational session that the City Council of Guelph ever held was their meeting last night, when Ald. C. W. Kelly and Commissioner J. J. Drew, K.C., came to blows over an animated discussion that arose over the question of whether or not the radial railway commissioners, Drew and Ryan, and their chairman, J. W. Lyon, be permitted to take seats at the board, to discuss with the aldermen a question relative to the People's Railway.

There is a railing about four feet high, dividing the council chamber proper from the space provided for spectators, and over this obstacle the scrap between Commissioner Drew and Ald. Kelly began. It seems the commissioner made some remark to the alderman that caused him to lose his temper, and the latter, reaching over the railing, struck Mr. Drew a resounding smack. Mr. Drew had his hat in one hand and a light walking cane in the other. The aggressive alderman in the next instant received two or three smart raps of the cane over his head and knuckles. Ald. Kelly tried to vault over the railing, but was held back by the aldermen sitting next to him. On the other side, it took several of the commissioners to hold Mr. Drew, who, in a tone of indignation declared, "Let me alone. I must defend myself against this man." Breaking away from his fellows, Ald. Kelly ran around the partition, determined to have it out with his opponent, but just as he had about made his way, Ald. Carter forced him on to a bench and held there, bringing the scrap to an end.

The Hague Arbitration.

London, Aug. 3.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—At The Hague fisheries dispute, Counsel Robson for England entered upon the sixth day of his speech, and continued his argument on the fifth question before the tribunal, and claimed exclusive jurisdiction for Great Britain in the North Atlantic fisheries in all bays and three miles beyond. In support of his claim he quoted largely from official documents, some of which were of much historical interest.

He argued that in the American interpretation of the renunciary clause of the treaty of 1818, the word "bays" became superfluous, because the United States wished to trace the line of demarcation in territorial waters everywhere three miles from the shore. In point of fact, he said, the United States in 1818 had renounced precisely the same right which it received in 1783 to fish in territorial waters three miles from the coasts and in bays, which then were considered the property of the coastal states. This contention was confirmed by the Delaware Bay incident of 1793, he said. If large bays only are to be considered territorial waters, when other nations consented, and the tribunal endorsed this erroneous opinion, Great Britain would withdraw her consent to territoriality in the Delaware and Chesapeake Bays.

Killed by Deadly Acid.

Philadelphia, Aug. 3.—Two children were fatally injured and eight other children and four men were seriously burned as the result of a peculiar accident here yesterday afternoon.

A fire department supply wagon carrying four 15-gallon carboys of vitriolic acid, and on which ten children were riding, broke an axle as it was turning out of a street car track. The breaking of the axle upset the vehicle, spilling out the children and the carboys. The carboys broke, and in an instant the ten youngsters were covered with the deadly acid. Men trying to rescue the children were also burned.

Expand Your Manly Chest.

Chicago, Aug. 3.—Well-tailored men of the coming fall will be narrow of shoulder and broad of chest, and the present type of wide-shouldered, but anaemic "clothing store athlete," will have vanished from the realm of the elite.

The overcoat of "the man who knows" will be loose and baggy. The latest thing in keep-warm clothing is called a "great-coat." Any size will fit any one fairly well, but is guaranteed not to fit any individual perfectly. The coat will bear the ulster collar of last winter, only more so.

No Presents In Future.

Ottawa, Aug. 3.—Hon. Charles Murphy, Secretary of State, has written to each of the Cabinet Ministers, suggesting that the custom of making presents of knives, etc., at Christmas time to members of the civil service, shall be stopped. He has had replies from some of the Ministers, and it is understood that these have concurred with his view that the practice should be abolished.

Twice Tried to Die.

Detroit, Aug. 3.—Despondent because he had taken drink for the first time in his life and had been robbed of nearly all his money, Edward Matthews, aged 20, of Toronto, made two attempts late Monday night to commit suicide. He first jumped into an excavation, and was dragged out by the police. He then threw himself on the street car tracks.

Want to Move to Ontario.

Chatham, Aug. 3.—Forty Illinois farmers have sent a deputation to Kent County to see what farms they can buy up at $40 an acre. The American farmers are trying to sell their holdings in Illinois with a view to moving to a more fertile country.

Is making it Famous

When you use WONDER-SHINE, the dreaded half-day cleaning your silverware becomes but a pleasant half-hour.

Without any rubbing or scrubbing the tarnish disappears and the original brightness is restored, but neither your silver, your temper, nor your fingers will suffer as when you use "rub on" preparations of abrasive powder, or acid paste polishes.

WONDER-SHINE is not rubbed on, the silver is simply dipped in.

Like all great discoveries, the process is very simple.

CURRENT COMMENT.

"The strike is over"—This was the good news flashed over the wires to us last night. Our manufacturers, business men, and the travelling public will be pleased. From now on let us have harmony and peace.

"Strike is settled." Sing the Doxology.

Let us hope we may not see another until Halley's comet plays a return date.

The settlement of the strike is a matter for congratulation to all concerned. First, to the company, which can now put a stop to its enormous daily losses; Second, to the men who can now get back to work and provide for their families, and last, to the general public, which has been hard hit, has suffered an immense amount of loss and inconvenience, and which must have felt like the innocent bystander who has been hit with the bricks thrown by the parties in a street fight.

And let us hope now that this expensive and ugly incident is a thing of the past, that the Government may, before long, find means to prevent railway strikes in the future. If no law can be framed which will prevent the long-suffering public from being tortured, impoverished and crippled by parties who themselves live off it, then, indeed, is "civilization a failure."

The C. P. R. has let contracts approximating a million and a quarter dollars for the construction of an annex to their Windsor street station in Montreal.

Ottawa, August 1.—Hon. L. Brodeur, Minister of Marine and Fisheries and of the Navy, has been appointed by the French Government an officer of the Legion of Honor, one of the highest distinctions in the power of France to grant. No doubt he values this foreign title more than he would an English title.

London, August 1.—The accession declaration bill passed its second reading in the House of Lords without a division, being approved on all sides. The Archbishop of Canterbury admitted that he shared the crafting of the new form of oath.

Eighteen negroes have been killed in a race conflict in Texas. Johnson, the negro, thrashed Jeffries, a white man in a fair fight, and in return the Yankee whites murder 18 negroes.

The best and most profitable way for the Ontario farmer to market his corn and coarse grain is to feed it to his hogs.

At the beginning of 1910 there were 5,142,692 Bell Telephone stations in America, being an increase of 778,063 over 1909. The total daily "toll" or trunk connections were about 571,000, and of local connections 19,925,000 — a total daily average number of calls of 20,442,000. The total number of telephones in the Bell system is 8 1-2 times greater than in the British system. The entire group of twenty European countries with an aggregate population of 405 millions can only muster 2,583,000 as against the 5,142,692 telephones of a single organization in America, serving a population of between 80 and 90 millions. The telephone development in proportion to population is therefore ten times higher in America than it is throughout Europe.

A New York exchange says: "Did it ever occur to you what a different place this world would be if every one who could possibly afford to do so would adopt a child—how many thousands of 'moral lives' of restless women and little, starved, pinched babies would be saved if only people would just open their doors and take into their homes a little child?"

Dr. Lindsey Wynekoop, of Chicago, brought home the thought clearly enough when she made the suggestion that everybody with an income of $25 a week or over should adopt a child.

"He who adopts a 'child,'" said Dr. Wynekoop, "does more good than Rockefeller, Carnegie or even Florence Nightingale. I had four children. Still I questioned myself closely and I knew I had the time and the money for another child, so I adopted one, little Mary Louise, a year ago. She was then three weeks old. I think it was my duty toward the human race for me to do so.

When the finders of Dr. Crippen get wrangling about who is entitled to the $1,250 reward they might take into consideration the individual who invented wireless telegraphy.

Leaning Tower Nearing a Fall.

PISA'S FAMOUS STRUCTURE IS IN BAD SHAPE — FOUNDATION IS GIVING WAY.

London, July 26.—The Leaning Tower of Pisa, with its eight tiers of marble colonades, is threatened with the same fate that overtook St. Mark's Campanile in Venice. A royal commission of experts as the result of a thorough investigation reports that instead of being a massive, spacious base, as it was generally believed to be, the foundation consists simply of a ring of masonry exactly corresponding to the huge cylindrical mass superposed thereon.

The diameter of the inner ring of the foundation is precisely the same (a little over eight feet) as that of the inside of the tower. This fact and the discovery that the foundations are merely nine feet, nine inches beneath the surface have convinced the commission that the tower was originally built perpendicularly and that its leaning propensities, which are becoming more and more accentuated, are not due to any intention on the part of its constructors.

In 1829 the tower was nearly fourteen and a half feet out of the vertical and since then the commission believes that the increase has been nearly a foot. The causes for this condition are principally that the base of the tower has always been immersed in water, and a deep cistern dug seventy years ago in an unsuccessful attempt at drainage has only made matters worse. A severe earthquake shock in 1834 gave the tower an additional inclination of five inches.

As the oscillation caused by the ringing of its magnificent peal of seven bells is believed to be another source of danger, Cardinal Maggi, Archbishop of Pisa, has suspended the ringing of the two biggest, which together weigh over six tons, and has ordered that the smaller bells shall be simply beaten with the hammer henceforth.

The commission reports that the greatest danger arises from underground springs that are undermining the adjacent soil. The Leaning Tower of Pisa was begun in 1170 and not completed for nearly 200 years.

Peterboro Youth Stole an Engine.

Peterboro, August 2 — At the police court this morning Edward Carpenter pleaded guilty to the charge of having unlawfully carried away the gasoline engine, valued at two hundred dollars, the property of the informant, Egerton Roland Wilson, on September 11th, 1909. It appears that the accused stole the engine and sunk the hull of the launch from which the engine was taken at the end of Sherbrooke street near the boat houses.

Yesterday P. C. Newhall's work was brought to a climax when he arrested Carpenter at his home on the above mentioned charge. P. C. Newhall has been working on this case since last September and has searched Carpenter's house on two occasions. On one occasion he discovered launch fittings which was the property of Allen Jackson and Clarence Wilson. Crime will not go on in Peterboro undetected as long as the officers keep up the good work.

City Clerk Armstrong, who occupied the bench in the absence of Magistrate Dumble remanded Carpenter for several days.

OBITUARY,

REV. GEORGE YOUNG.

The Rev. George Young, a former pastor of the Methodist church in this city, passed away at his home on Hazleton avenue, Toronto, in his 89th year. The Rev. gentleman was well known and much respected in Belleville. He was one of the first pioneers of Methodist mission work in the Northwest. He was the first man to be sent as far as Winnipeg and has the honor to be the founder of the Methodist church in the West.

Fort Garry in 1868 was not a very large place, but its fame was beginning to become widespread and it was there that Dr. Young was sent by the Ontario Conference. Churches were not known there at that date, but the earnest missionary had one organized before he had been there long and from a small congregation he has seen the Church in the West grow to be a great missionary force in itself. Indeed Dr. Young was himself the first Secretary of Missions of the church in the West. He was also the first president of the Manitoba and Northwestern Conference, before the days of Union. He remained in Winnipeg until 1884, when his health gave out and he returned to Toronto on superannuation.

Dr. Young played a prominent part in history during the Riel rebellion He exerted his great influence towards securing from Riel a pardon for the unfortunate Thomas Scott, and proving unsuccessful he administered spiritual rites to the man before he was executed. By a curious coincidence his son, Captain Scott, was in charge of the escort that conveyed Riel from where he was captured to, and subsequently to the gallows where he was hanged

Dr. Young is a Canadian-born, of United Empire Loyalist parentage, in the County of Prince Edward. He was, before he went West, pastor of many of the leading Methodist churches in this province and in Quebec. Montreal, Brantford, Hamilton Bellveille, Kingston, and of the Berkeley street and Richmond street Churches in Toronto, which church has since then had a new front built and has been remodeled as an office building, namely, the Wesley Building, where the Methodist Book Room now is.

Dr. Young, was, before his death living with the widow of the late Rev. J. F. Maxwell, a member of the Metropolitan church. He has held all the honors that the Methodist church can confer, namely, President of Annual Conference, Chairman of District Member of General Conference, Superintendent of Missions, and many other offices.

Local Baseball Notes

The City League is a great success, and the interest in the game is a great boom to the old town.

The Coleman's Flats and Park Nine play Saturday. It will be a great game.

Phil. Flagler, of the Grand Trunks, says his team will be there or thereabouts right to the finish.

The Flats are playing good ball under Manager Gillespie. Bobby is the greatest ball enthusiast in town.

The T. A. S. showed some new faces in their last game. As they are at present they are as strong as any team in the League, and will look good for the future.

Pepper, of the Grand Trunks, is out after his severe accident.

Billy Thompson, who is now manager of the Ontarios, is an old ball player and will get the best out of his team all the time. He has a great bunch of boys who are game and play good, clean ball.

Gerow, of the Park Nine, besides being a star first baseman, is a twirler of much ability.

Eddie O'Flynn wears a sunny smile, his team having a nice lead.

A baseball game took place on Coleman's Flats diamond Tuesday afternoon between the Shamrocks and the Junior Coleman Flats. The score stood a tie for eight innings, 3 all. The Flats in the last of the ninth, batted in 3 runs, winning by 6-3. The umpire was T. Woodley, and he was fine. The battery for the winners was R. Loucks, of Napanee, and K. Hay; for the losers L. Wims and G. Hay.

KING GEORGE'S REIGN.

Astrologer Daoud Says It Will Be Short and Stormy.

A short and stormy reign for George V. is predicted by S. Daoud, the Washington astrologer. Two years ago, it is said, Daoud foretold the death of King Edward and described the circumstances accurately. Among the things which he foresees in the new king's horoscope is that his reign will last but six and a half years.

"The first five years," Daoud says, "will be among the stormiest in England's history. The last eighteen months, however, will be comparatively fortunate. The coming reign will be terminated by the king's death, which will be a natural one. He will more than once be the object of attempted assassination, but would be murderers will be powerless to harm him.

"There will be trouble in all the British possessions during the second year, especially in India.

"In the third year of his reign there will be a conflict between England and another European power ruled by a kinsman of King George, which will precipitate a great war. England will on her own part wage war with this European country. The war will be short and decisive and will result in England's being obliged to make concessions which will deprive her of much of her power.

"Egypt will give King George decided trouble, but will not be able to free herself from English rule during his reign."—New York World.

A Curious Will.

Countess Anna Maria Helena de Noailles, a member of one of the historic families of France, has made a curious will which has just been proved. She left her estate at Meads, Eastbourne, England, to found "St. Mary's orphanage," laying down the following rules for the education of the girls: No competitive examinations, no study before breakfast, no study after 6 p. m., all lessons to be learned in the morning, no girl to work more than four and a half hours daily. No arithmetic, except the multiplication tables for children under ten. No child with curvature of the spine to write more than five minutes a day until thirteen. Each girl must be certified by two phrenologists as not deficient in conscientiousness and firmness. No child to be vaccinated.

A Machine to Measure Love.

Science is slowly killing romance. The latest invention is an instrument called a plethysmograph for scientifically testing the warmth of lovers' affections. The person whose feelings are to be weighed in the balance puts his or her arm into a rubber bag, which is then drawn tight and filled with water. Names of young men or young women, as the case may be, are introduced, and if the name stirs the heart the pulse rises and the indicator mounts up. If the name leaves the subject unmoved, the pulse remains stationary.—London Gentlewoman.

Quaint Sewing Implements.

An interesting find is reported to have been made by Professor Mestorf, director of the Museum Schleswiger Alters Tumer at Kiel. In the grave of a Germanic woman dating from the pre-Christian era was found a stone box containing a set of sewing utensils, a pair of scissors of considerable weight, a horn knife with an iron blade, a stiletto and several thorns, which were used as needles. There was also a stone resembling the so called "Gehidelstein," which was still in use as a flatiron as late as the seventeenth century.

Blanche—I'm why, dad!—Puck.

Three Kitchen Mades.

Plain Sally Lunn is simple,
But good for every day;
Brown Betty, more pretentious,
Has crisp and spicy way.
But Charlotte Russe is flippant.
In gayeties she'll plunge.
She goes to balls and parties
And quite inclines to sponge.

Anatomical Ironies.

Though a roll of college parchment
Is a thing to be desired
And a graduate is happy
O'er the knowledge he's acquired,
Yet the gulf is earning power,
He observes with some alarm,
'Twixt the brain he brought from college
And a baseball expert's arm.

SHERIDAN'S RUSE.

It Settled the Dramatist's Account With His Wine Merchant.

It is related of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, the dramatist and statesman, that, always in debt, he had among his creditors the brothers Challe, who were the partners in a wine firm in 1775.

One day when he was giving a dinner party to some distinguished people Sheridan sent for one of the brothers, told him he was now able to settle his account and invited him to the dinner party, asking him to come before the hour for some private conversation.

Challe arrived early, and he was no sooner in the house than Sheridan sent off a servant with a note to the clerk, desiring him, as Mr. Challe was favoring him with his company, to send as soon as possible three dozen of burgundy, two dozen of claret and two dozen of port, with a dozen of old hock.

The unsuspecting clerk sent the wine, with which the guests were so pleased that they asked where it came from. Sheridan, turning toward Challe, said, "I am indebted to my friend here for all the wine you have tasted and am always proud to recommend him."

It was not until the following morning that Challe realized the double meaning in Sheridan's words. The debt was canceled.

A Queer Fish.

A male fish which hatches the young of its mate is the Chromis paterfamilias. It is found in the Lake of Tiberias, Palestine. Strange to say, this industrious fish hatches its young in its mouth. When the female has spawned in the sand, the male approaches and draws the eggs into his gills, where they remain until hatched, when they struggle out of their confinement into the parent's mouth. As many as 200 perfect young are sometimes found in the mouth of an adult male. How the fish manages to feed itself without swallowing the young is a mystery. The grown fish is about seven inches long and one and three-quarters wide. Its back is olive green, shot with blue, and the belly is silver white, marked with green and blue. Near ancient Capernaum some hot springs form a small stream which runs into the lake, and it is in these warm waters that the chromis abounds.

No Common Dog.

Gentleman (to dog dealer)—I gave you a high price for this dog last week because you warranted it to be a good house dog. My house was broken into last night, and the dog never even barked.

Dog Dealer—No, sir; I quite believes yer. He was too busy lookin' for the burglars, so as to be able to identify 'em, to even think of barkin'. If you was out with this 'ere dog and was to meet 'em burglars he'd know 'em in a minute. He ain't no common barkin' dog; he's a reg'ler 'tective an' worth 'is weight in gold, he is.—London

POWDER AND GUNS.

Evidence That They Were Used Long Before the Christian Era.

There is abundant evidence that the origin of gunpowder and artillery goes far back in the dim ages of the past.

The Hindoo code, compiled long before the Christian era, prohibited the making of war with cannon and guns or any kind of firearms. Quintus Curtius informs us that Alexander the Great met with fire weapons in Asia, and Philostratus says that Alexander's conquests were arrested by the use of gunpowder. It is also written that those wise men who lived in the cities of the Ganges "overthrew their enemies with tempests and thunderbolts shot from the walls." Julius Africanus mentions shooting powder in the year 275. It was used in the siege of Constantinople in 668, by the Arabs in 690, at Thessalonica in 904, at the siege of Belgrade in 1073, by the Greeks in naval battle in 1098, by the Arabs against the Iberians in 1147 and at Toulouse in 1218.

It appears to have been generally known throughout civilized Europe as early as 1300, and soon thereafter it made its way into England, where it was manufactured during the reign of Elizabeth, and we learn that a few arms were possessed by the English in 1310 and that they were used at the battle of Crecy in 1346.—Cassier's Magazine.

Daily Intelligencer.

Spain and the Church Of Rome.

A telegram from London, England, of the 28th July, says:

A despatch from Madrid to the Central News says the negotiations between Spain and the Vatican in reference to a modification of the Concordat are in such a shape that a rupture between the Holy See and King Alfonso's Government may be regarded as certain.

El Liberal says that it has information to the effect that the Vatican has addressed a curt note to Spain breaking off all negotiations. The Vatican note practically amounts to an ultimatum. El Liberal understands that the Spanish Ambassador to the Vatican will be immediately recalled and that his passports will be handed to the Papal Nuncio at Madrid.

Prime Minister Canalejas virtually admitted tonight the accuracy of the statement that the Vatican had broken off the negotiations. He said the Vatican's note intimated that the negotiations could not be continued unless the Government suspended the recent edicts.

Senor Canalejas said that he would do his utmost to maintain the negotiations within the limits of prudence, but added that under all circumstances he was resolved to fulfill his promises to the nation.

A telegram from Rome of the 31st of July, says:

Notwithstanding the already extremely strained relations between the Vatican and the Spanish Government, the recall of Marquis de Ojeda, the Spanish Ambassador to the Vatican, has produced a great sensation here. The Vatican in a semi-official letter regarding the recall of the Ambassador asserts that the Government of Premier Canalejas was not arranged with the hope of accord, but with a desire for fight, and, the communication adds, he will have it.

Laurier in the West

Sir Wilfrid Laurier is having a lively time in the Northwest. It has not been all sunshine. He has found in the breezy West honest Liberals, who, having the courage of their convictions, have pointed out to him and his camp followers how flagrantly former pledges have been sifted and violated in the interest of those whom they used to revile and condemn in unmeasured terms. It is well there are still, in what is known as the Liberal party, a few who have some regard for honesty in public men.

At a Laurier gathering in Saskatoon, the other day, there was some plain talking which was not relished by the Laurier party, as they had not, during their tour, been bombarded with criticisms and charges of failure to carry out their promises. Here are a few titbits which the Premier did not relish, for he lost his temper:

President John Evans, a Liberal of the Gladstone school, who voted for Sir Wilfrid in 1896, reminded the Premier of former strong opposition to protection, and called it "legalized robbery" and "cause of graft." "It is particularly hard on homesteaders whom your Government, for the sake of a few, has seen fit to exploit," said Mr. Evans. He referred to the protected manufacturers as a "mushroom aristocracy," "these monsters of greed and graft that have grown since your Government, sir, came into power."

"Manufacturers," continued this disgusted Liberal, "found the Government an easy mark, as it had departed from all principles of Liberalism, till it has become the most Conservative Government in the civilized world. You are further away from free trade than you were in 1896. You said you would skin the Tory bear of protection, but we would like to know what you have done with the hide."

This plain speaking ruffled the temper of Sir Wilfrid, and he snappily retorted,

"You had better beware of your statements."

And the non-partisan (?) E. M. Macdonald, M. P. for Pictou, asked, "Are you making a political speech?"

"No," replied Mr. Evans. "I am speaking for the farmers of this district." (Applause and no dissent.)

Other blasts from the Liberal ranks followed.

Mr. Cameron, Floral, said he had supported the Liberal party, but he wanted his party to keep its obligations. In asking for a lower tariff they were not asking for privilege, but for pure justice.

W. Roland, Aberdeen, said he was "as good a Liberal as stands in this house, but he did not want a tariff that made the farmer pay $265 more to stock his farm with machinery.

Another old Liberal standing on a chair back in the audience said: "The way we understand your promises they have never been fulfilled."

"I'm as good a supporter as you have got, but we want you to keep your promise," said T. Lawrence Hanley.

"The farmers of the West are thousands of miles away, but manufacturers come buzzing around," said one.

Sir Wilfrid, not being over charmed with these criticisms, forgot for the moment his sunny-smiles, and retorted:

"In at least one of the speeches there was more of Tory politics than of grain-growing."

In this reply Sir Wilfrid stumbled, no doubt unintentionally, upon the truth. Yes. Tory politics is what these Liberals uttered when they condemned the unfaithfulness of the present Government in violating every promise they ever made. He had, however, to appease the free trade grumblers, and gave utterance to the following:

On the tariff, he said: "I am a free trader like most of you. I have given freer trade. I am not a protectionist. We don't want anything but a revenue tariff."

How do Liberal Protectionists like this?

A little more plain talking may do some good. Turn the violators out of office, and much more good will be accomplished.

Messrs. Henry Pringle and F. D. Diamond, representing King Baldwin Preceptory, of this city, left for London to attend the 27th annual assembly of the Sovereign Great Priory, of Canada of Knights Templars.

Melodramatic Suicide.

Pericles Ianopoulos, a Greek poet, compared by Mme. Leblanc-Maeterlinck to Hermes for his personal beauty, has committed suicide in melodramatic fashion at Athens.

At a banquet to which he had summoned all his friends he showed them a trunkful of manuscripts that were to be destroyed. "To-morrow I am going on a journey," he said, as they left him. The next morning each of them received by post an exquisite statuette of a horse.

At the same time Ianopoulos rode out of the city to Mount Aegaleos, gathered a garland of flowers, and then made a dash for the sea. At the time a violent storm was raging. Ianopoulos, driving his spurs into the horse's flanks, urged the maddened beast into the foaming waters of the bay, and shot himself through the heart.

Curiosities In Bookbinding.

Extravagance in binding has frequently furnished an opening for the display of fantastic tricks and fads. In an old bookseller's catalogue was seen an advertisement of a Latin copy of Apulein's "Golden Ass," bound in the skin of a Jerusalem ass, the leather being still unhaired. A book by Jeffery Hudson, the noted dwarf, was bound in the silk waistcoat of Charles I., the dwarf's patron saint. A de luxe edition of Fox's historical works, specially fitted up for Edwards, the philosopher, was bound throughout in foxskin, forty-seven pelts of these little animals being required to complete the job. O'Connell, who so delighted in the possession of a first edition of Bacon's works, had the entire set rebound again in pigskin and always lovingly referred to them as his "Baconrind" books.

A Chance to Dry.

Lord Dufferin always said that the happiest years of his long official life were those spent in Calcutta. He reveled in the sunshine. A friend one day expostulated with him for his reckless exposure of himself to the weather. "Well, you see," said the viceroy, "they have always sent me to cold places. They sent me as viceroy to Canada, where one must live a third of the year in buffalo furs. They sent me to St. Petersburg, where one has to hibernate like a bear. So when they ordered me to India I rubbed my hands and said to myself, 'Now I can hang myself up to dry.'"

The damage and waste caused by smoke in the larger cities of the United States each year is estimated at $500,000,000 by an official of the Geological Survey, who says his figures are conservative.

Water may be heated in a wooden barrel out of doors by inserting the ends of a pipe coil through one side of the barrel from the outside and maintaining a fire under the coil.

EDWARD AS MOTORIST.

He Was an Enthusiast and Patron of the Toot-Toot Art.

By the death of King Edward, motoring in common with many other forms of sport has lost a munificent patron. His Majesty was the proud possessor of a baker's dozen of motor-cars, most of which represent the last word in the automobile world.

The King was immune from the tyranny of the number-plate, and his cars were therefore innocent of the symbolism which appeals so strongly to the executive of the police-trap.

A detailed description of all the King's cars was issued to the police throughout the Kingdom together with instructions that "all facilities" were to be given for their progress on the road. But this concern at headquarters was not sufficient to prevent mistakes. More than once the royal cars were held up owing to the interference of some officious constable, who was disappointed in his search for a number, and a considerable amount of time and breath has been wasted before he has been convinced that "the King can do no wrong."

Unlike his brother, the Duke of Connaught, the King was remarkably free from anything in the nature of a serious accident. He had breakdowns in legion—no motorist is free from these little unpreventable inconveniences — but he always proved himself equal to the emergency by availing himself of the first handy vehicle and so avoiding becoming an object of interest to all and sundry.

A short while ago his car came to a sudden stop in Richmond Park. In a moment a vast crowd appeared, apparently from nowhere, and enjoyed the spectacle of the King of England instructing his chauffeur in the true inwardness of the breakdown, showing him the best method of remedying the fault, and exhibiting in a number of ways his intimate knowledge of motor-car mechanism. He owed this knowledge to Mr. Oliver Stanton, who, years ago, taught His Majesty cycling, and more recently made him a thorough master of the automobile.

King Edward's chauffeurs were all picked men. Most of them served in Scotland Yard, and have, at some time or other, driven the official motor-cars of the police. How this idea of the King's was carried out is interesting. One day a chauffeur in the employ of the Commissioner of Police was told off to perform some service for the King, and the fine physique and bearing of the man attracted His Majesty's attention. While this man was in attendance at Buckingham Palace something went wrong with a royal motor-car, which seemed to puzzle the King's own chauffeur, and resist all his attempts at remedy.

At last the man from Scotland Yard stepped forward, and in a few minutes found a remedy. The King was so pleased that he asked the man to take service with him, and, the permission of the Commissioner being secured, the corps of policemen-chauffeurs was inaugurated. As it was necessary for policemen to accompany the King almost everywhere he went, the men performed dual service.

Although the King was extremely free from accidents, he had foresight enough to know that he was not infallible, so he had a complete first-aid outfit attached to each of his cars. This miniature surgery weighs about six pounds, and includes an India rubber tourniquet to stop bleeding, several pairs of scissors and forceps, antiseptic swabs, gauze, bandages, a variety of unguents and dressings, a selection of stimulative drugs, and a bottle of brandy. These contents are arranged in the order of their use in the eight different compartments of a silver box which fits into a royal blue morocco case.

On the lid of each case are detailed instructions, while on the front of each silver box is the inscription: "A Friend in Need is a Friend Indeed."

The Names of the Mighty.

Talking of family names, the new issue of the London directory provides some curiosities. Sebastian Bach is a horse dealer, Robert Bruce and John Bunyan are green grocers, John Milton is a chandler and James Boswell a mason.

William Shakespeare is the name of a barrister, tailor and a van builder. There is a Crusoe and also a Gulliver. Julius Caesar is a chemist; Livy keeps apartments. Homer is a lighterman, Pindar an electrical engineer, Mars, retails beer, and Venus, not inappropriately, sugars, candles. Frances Bacon is an architect and Bayard a dairyman. And what could be better for the name of a saddler than Whippy?

From Sailor to Royal Academician.

Mr. C. Napier Hemy, one of the newly-elected Royal Academicians, has had an extremely eventful career. Born at Newcastle-on-Tyne, he was taken by his parents to Australia, where in his early days he worked hard as a miner in the bush. The call of art was strong upon him, however, and he abandoned everything to study painting in Antwerp. Returning to England in 1870 his success with the brush was soon assured, and, elected an Associate in 1898, he has now deservedly achieved the highest honor the art world has to offer.

Healy on Redmond.

The Irish politician takes his business seriously and when he strikes an opponent he strikes to kill. The other day at a mass meeting in Cork, Mr. M. Healy, M.P., said that Mr. John Redmond and his party, in voting for the Budget, had committed the greatest act of betrayal of Irish interests since that memorable act of treachery in Ireland's history when, 110 years ago, other Irishmen put their hand and seal to the Act of Union.

Exporting Cabinet Ministers.

In proposing "Scotland and her Industries" at a Glasgow corporation dinner recently an Englishman remarked that the two chief industries of the northern land were the manufacture of marmalade and Cabinet Ministers. Sir Samuel Chisholm, who replied, suggested that they had a good-going business in the output of Prime Ministers—for export as well as for home consumption.

Tenor Gets Funny.

Slezak, who was one of the new bunch of talent at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York—just closed for the season—is a practical joker. All the company were his victims. His favorite was Schmedes, the Vienna tenor. One morning about 2 o'clock Slezak stirred up Schmedes.

"Are you Herr Schmedes?" Slezak called through the telephone in broken German, fitting the character.

"Yes," came in sleepy impatience—"Herr Schmedes, the tenor."

Yes, of course, the tenor. What other would at that hour have stickled for complete identification?

"How fortunate!" was the ambiguous rejoinder. "I am Lord Morley, at the Hotel Bristol."

"Delighted, I am sure."

The voice sounded now quite awake. A distinguished foreigner of a nation not noted for its impulsiveness could not sleep without a word with him!

Defended a Little Boy.

Nine-year-old Robert came home from school one day with a dirty face and a torn stocking and a generally disheveled appearance. There was a bump on his forehead which he was manfully trying to conceal by pulling his cap down over his face.

"Why, Robert, what have you been doing? How did you get so dirty? And what has happened to your face?" asked his mother.

Robert looked mysterious.

"Oh, I've been tryin' to keep a little boy from bein' licked," he replied, with an offhand air of accustomed virtue.

His mother was delighted.

"How fine and brave of you, dear," she cried. "That is what you must always do. You must always stand up for the little boys. I am sure you are going to grow up to be a hero. You are a splendid little man, and mother is proud of you. Who was the little boy?"

"Me," replied Robert. "I broke Jimmy Andrews' pencil box, and he tried to wollop me. It was an awful fight. He won."—Philadelphia Times.

The Tenderfoot Farmer

It was one of these experimental farmers, who put green spectacles on his cow and fed her shavings. His theory was that it didn't matter what the cow ate so long as she was fed. The questions of digestion and nourishment had not entered into his calculations.

It's only a "tenderfoot" farmer that would try such an experiment with a cow. But many a farmer feeds himself regardless of digestion and nutrition. He might almost as well eat shavings for all the good he gets out of his food. The result is that the stomach grows "weak" the action of the organs of digestion and nutrition are impaired and the man suffers the miseries of dyspepsia and the agonies of nervousness.

To strengthen the stomach, restore the activity of the organs of digestion and nutrition and brace up the nerves, use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is an unfailing remedy, and has the confidence of physicians as well as the praise of thousands healed by its use.

In the strictest sense "Golden Medical Discovery" is a temperance medicine. It contains neither intoxicants nor narcotics, and is as free from alcohol as from opium, cocaine and other dangerous drugs. All ingredients printed on its outside wrapper.

Don't let a dealer delude you for his own profit. There is no medicine for stomach, liver and blood "just as good" as "Golden Medical Discovery."

Engineer's Mishap.

A painful and somewhat sensational adventure befell Mr. Boyd, an engineer, of Didsbury, Manchester, the other Sunday, while he was exploring a "pot-hole" in the limestone district near Ingleborough. He was climbing by means of a rope from the subterranean chamber, when the rope broke, and he fell thirty feet, breaking his thigh. A local doctor spent the night with him, and did what he could to relieve him, and his friends strapped him to a plank, hoisted him a hundred feet to the roof of the cave, then carried him a quarter of a mile through a tortuous passage to the outer world, the task occupying fifteen hours. It was not till four o'clock on the Monday afternoon that Mr. Boyd was safely deposited at the nearest inn.

Hears Own Death Announced.

To be informed that they were dead would shock most people, and it made a Tipperary man lose his temper. At a meeting of Thurles Urban Council a letter was read stating that one of the members, Mr. John Bolton,—who, as a matter of fact was present at the meeting—had been killed in his motor car while attending the demonstrations in connection with the reinterment of the brothers McCormick at Nevagh. The councillors treated the matter as a joke, and laughed heartily. But Mr. Bolton objected to being declared a corpse and made a laughing-stock of. Hot words followed, and he angrily snatched the letter which had been read from the official's hands, and tore it into fragments.

SEVEN AGES OF BASEBALL.

All the world's a ball field
And all the men upon it merely players.
They have their innings and their goings out.
And one man in his time makes many plays
At bat and on the diamond. At first the kiddie
Biffing the ball about the vacant lots,
And then the "semi-pro" with fierce ambition
Some day to be as great as Honus Wagner
And draw big coin, and then the minor—
The minor leaguer—soon by scout discovered,
Bought and given a tryout; then the major—
The major leaguer—idol of the bleachers,
Quick on bases, snappy and sure in fielding,
Seeking the slugger's reputation
E'en against "Three Fingered" Brown; then—pouf—bench warming!
His leg goes bad, his arm or eye or something.
He bats 'em out before the game and coaches,
In sweater clad, at first or third. The papers
All fear he "can't come back." The sixth age shifts
To minor leagues again, and there he is.
He says he's just as good as e'er he was,
But even here too fast's the company
For his bad leg or arm. His manly voice,
Turning again toward childish treble, blames
It on the umpire. Last scene of all,
That ends his strange, eventful history,
Is bush league hopelessness and sure oblivion,
Sans speed, sans arm, sans eye, sans everything!

The King's Powers And Limitations.

(Mail and Empire.)

Some old prerogatives as well as a great responsibility have descended upon King George, and will, in turn, be passed down to his successor in that, we hope, far distant day when his course as King is run. For instance the King has the sole right to print the Bible, the Book of Common Prayer, and all Acts of Parliament in the United Kingdom If he so desired he could forbid the printing of any or all of them throughout the Empire. More curious still is the custom which acknowledges that the whales and sturgeons cast upon the coast of England are the property of the King. The Queen is supposed to have an equity in the whale, the tail going to her, perhaps in deference to her supposed feminine need of whalebone. As it happens, though, the whalebone is not obtained from the whales' tail.

The King's Priperty.

The King is sole owner of the beds of all tidal rivers in Great Britain He is also proprietor of all that part of the shore surrounding the British coasts which lies between low and high water mark. Any newly discovered land by a British subject belong to the King, and should an island arise suddenly in the seas within the three-mile radius of the coasts of Britain, its owner would be the King Theoretically, of course, the King is the real owner of every square inch of British soil, and the taxes the other owners pay are merely rent. Thus the King is exempt from taxation because since the taxes are his, it would be absurd for him to tax himself So, too, he is exempt from all tolls, and this prerogative gave rise to an amusing incident in the reign of George III. His Majesty was hunting one day on Hounslow Heath and was in hot pursuit of a stag. It swam across the river, and the hunters made for the bridge. Unaware that the King was with them, the toll keeper let down the gates, but raised them immediately on the cry, "The King. The King," being raised by the courtiers..

King George and the Toll Keeper

When the vanguard had passed through, the keeper lowered the gates again, supposing the King to have gone on. It happened, however, that George was in the second party. In vain his courtiers shouted at the toll keeper. "I've let King George through, God Bless Him," he stoutly declared, "and I know no other King in England. If you have brought on the King of France, hang me if I let him through without the blunt." In great wrath the Royal party had to wait until the toll fees were paid, the stag in the meantime escaping. A somewhat similar story is told of King Edward, who, as Prince of Wales, while fox hunting, was once halted by an indignant farmer with a pitchfork. The horror of the farmer when he learned the identity of his victim was only equalled by the amusement of Edward.

The King Forbidden.

Another Royal prerogative is that of pardoning criminals. King George could to-morrow order all the prisons of the Empire to open; for the theory is that every crime is committed against the King's peace. He could not, however, interfere in a civil case where the issue is between private parties. In some other respects the King's power is, by ancient custom strictly limited. for example, he cannot appear in Parliament save when he goes in state to the House of Lords to exercise his prerogative of opening or proroguing Parliament and giving his assent to bills. When Prince of Wales, King Edward was frequently present, listening to debates, but once he ascended the throne this privilege passed from him. King George too, has attended many debates in Parliament but will enter the House no more, save on formal occasions.

Similarly, the King may not enter a court of law as plaintiff or defendant nor may he administer justice To offset this disability is the legal theory that a King can do no wrong and the legal responsibility for any crime which an English King might choose to commit would rest upon his Ministers, not upon him. On no pretence may the King be arrested and his goods detained or taken into execution. This exemption extends partly to his household, and no menial in it may be arrested or taken in execution in criminal or civil action without permission from the Board of Green Cloth, which regulates the duties and liabilities of the inmates of the Royal establishment Every Royal residence is thus a sanctuary, and formerly the offence of striking anybody within these precincts was punishable by the cutting off of the offenders right hand, and by life imprisonment.

The source of Power.

Mention must be made also of a Royal prerogative — that of declaring war. It is doubtful if there is another European sovereign who could by his own act declare war with a foreign power. Not long ago some burrower into the constitution called attention to this right of the King of England, and sounded an alarm Whereat his readers smiled, better aware than their instructor, where within the British dominions, lies real power on which is founded both Kingship and the law — the will of the people themselves.

WHY MEN CLIMB MOUNTAINS.

Sir Martin Conway Says It Is a Hereditary Instinct.

Sir Martin Conway, explorer, mountaineer and author, who was recently a guest of the British Authors' Club, discussed the problem why people should want to climb mountains.

The problem, he said, had never been solved and never would be. The most one could say was that in some persons it was an hereditary instinct. He took it that it was the desire to look over on the other side that was the great secret and compelling force which induced people to climb mountains.

Among the Buddhists mountain-climbing was the chief element in obtaining sanctity. Buddhist saints derived much of their sanctity from the report that they had climbed such and such a mountain. Mountains had always been regarded as the home of peculiar creatures, such as demons, fairies, gnomes, or dragons. In the Himalayas the belief was generally spread abroad that on one big peak there was a palace of crystal inhabited by royalties among the fairy folk.

On another, he was told, when the clouds formed the fairies were cooking their bread. According to the inhabitants, a man once went up a third peak and when he returned had lost his reason because the fairies had taken it away. "They warned us," observed the speaker, "that if we went up much farther the same thing would assuredly happen to us, if it had not already happened and was not the cause of our coming."

Sir Martin described one of his adventures in the Bolivian Andes. "I was 'chivvied' with considerable velocity from one mountain which I had essayed to climb with a theodolite, and I was glad to escape with my life. I was pursued fifteen miles by the enraged population of the neighboring village, and if they had not been good enough to throw stones, which hit my mule, I should have come away in a very different condition."

Lloyd-George's Struggles.

The Hon. David Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, had many a hard struggle with poverty in his early youth. When he was sixteen Mr. Lloyd-George was articled as a clerk in a solicitor's office in Aberystwith. He had passed his preliminary law examination when he was but fourteen.

Both he and his uncle performed almost prodigious feats of saving in order that the ninety or a hundred pounds necessary before he could study for his chosen profession could be scraped together.

The money was obtained, however, and for nearly six years Lloyd-George worked and studied, and when at length he found himself a full-fledged solicitor, he was without the necessary money to buy his robes!

Now this was a tragedy indeed, for in Wales a solicitor may not appear in court without his robes. The robes cost about three guineas, and the young solicitor could get the money nowhere. However, he got a case and a way was opened to him. Without loss of time he hunted up possible clients, got two or three more cases, obtained payment in advance, purchased his robes, and duly appeared in the court.

Clerical Frugality.

In the far-off days of 1766, the year in which Goldsmith wrote his immortal "Vicar of Wakefield," the Universal Magazine contained this obituary notice:

"Lately, Rev. Mr. Matfinson, curate of Patterdale, Westmorland, for sixty years. The first infant he christened was afterward his wife, by whom he had one son and three daughters, all of whom he married in his own church. His stipend was forty years $60 and for the last twenty not $100 per ann. Yet he died at the age of eighty-three worth $5,000, $4,000 of which was saved out of his stipend."

The correspondent of London Notes and Queries who quotes this astonishing record of frugality asks if Goldsmith may not have received the first impetus to the composition of his novel by reading this announcement.

Real Solicitude.

Husband—You are quite comfortable, dear?

Wife—Yes, love.

"The cushions are easy and soft?"

"Yes, darling."

"You don't feel any jolts?"

"No, sweetest."

"And there is no draft on my lamb, is there?"

"No, my ownest own."

"Then change seats with me."—Ideas.

Owned the Isle of Man.

It is not generally known that the Earls of Derby were at one time practically sovereigns of the Isle of Man. They held the island from the crown on the condition of an annual payment of two falcons. But in 1775, on the death of the tenth earl, the lordship of Man devolved on the second Duke of Atholl, whose successor sold it to the British Government for £350,000.

PROTESTS INNOCENCE

Miss Leneve Will Probably Help to Convict Crippen.

She Declares That She Thought Belle Elmore Died a Natural Death—Crippen Spends His Time Reading and Walking—Spent Morning Perusing the Bible — Prisoners Will Wait Here for Evidence of Murder.

Quebec, Aug. 3.—Miss Leneve, Dr. Crippen's companion in flight from London, yesterday affirmed her innocence to Miss Phillips, the matron of the jail infirmary, in which the girl is incarcerated, protesting that, if murder had been committed, she had no part in it. "I was always under the impression that Belle Elmore had died," she said. "I accepted her jewelry, with the understanding that if Dr. Crippen murdered her, I knew nothing about it."

Knowledge of this statement did not come through Inspector Dew, nor his confreres in charge of the case. "Mum" is still the word in official circles. But the signs point to the fact that something has transpired to give them grounds for hoping that the girl will turn King's evidence. The Scotland Yard man yesterday expressed the opinion that Miss Leneve would give the crown every assistance in her power towards clearing up the mystery. He further affirmed his belief that the Leneve girl had nothing to do with the murder of Mrs. Crippen, or Belle Elmore as she was known in theatrical circles.

Dr. Gosselin, who was called to attend Miss Leneve at Chief McCarthy's house on Monday morning, after her removal from the Montrose, is still visiting her in the jail infirmary, to which she was Monday evening removed, but he will not make any statement as to her condition. It is said, however, at the jail, that she is improving. Miss Phillips, who has charge of the jail hospital, has placed a female "trusty" in the room with the girl, to guard against her attempting to make away with herself in a despondent moment.

Crippen has mentioned the girl only once since his arrest, and then he expressed the hope that she would be well cared for, as she was a very delicate young woman.

The former London doctor has been allotted a large cell in the southern section of the jail, where he spends his time chiefly in reading and walking. When he called for fresh reading matter yesterday morning, he was taken two books, one of them the Bible. The murder suspect chose the Bible and read attentively until meal time. He sleeps and eats well, according to the jail officials, and on the whole is in good health. A telegram arrived for him yesterday from his aged father, C. M. Crippen, who resides in Los Angeles, Cal., but was withheld by Inspector Dew. The message did not mention the case, or express confidence in the son's innocence, but merely that the prisoner could count on all the support that the father could give.

There is no longer any doubt about the length of time which will be required to get Crippen back into England. Judge Langelier of the sessions of the peace, who had a conference yesterday with Premier Sir Lomer Gouin, informed the press last evening that the authorities here would have to await evidence from England that a murder had been committed before they could send Crippen back. At any rate, the law which has been invoked provides fifteen days' grace for the prisoner. The authorities are also awaiting a warrant of extradition from Ottawa.

Will Defend Crippen.

London, Aug. 3.—Arthur Newton, the London solicitor who has cabled to Dr. Crippen his willingness to undertake Crippen's defence, is a well-known and successful criminal advocate. He has been connected with many cases of a sensational character.

Says He Don't Want Preference.

London, Aug. 3.—Right Hon. Alexander Ure, Lord Advocate of Scotland, speaking at Great Missenden, said: "Those self-made, muddle-headed people who preached preference wanted to give Canadian farmers an artificially increased price on the produce, but the farmers themselves, the very day this policy was preached in the Commons, repudiated it and said they only wanted fair play in their own market." It is proposed, he said, to give Canada a preference she did not want, and to shut out Australia and South Africa.

Increase In Customs Receipts.

Ottawa, Aug. 3.—July customs receipts for the Dominion were $5,724,714.16, as compared with $4,913,156.66 during the corresponding month last year, an increase of $811,557.50. For the four months ending July 31 the receipts were $22,611,810.16, as compared with $18,003,153.87, an increase of $4,608,650.29.

Will Not Commit Political Suicide.

London, Aug. 3.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Morning Post protests against the repetition by the free trade press of the report of the "gigantic delegation" to Laurier in favor of abolition of the tariff. It says that Laurier is as likely to commit political suicide as to embark on a fatal free trade policy.

Still In the Ring.

Vancouver, Aug. 3.—Hon. Frank Oliver arrived from Dawson and left for the east. He denies that he had any intention of resigning the portfolio of the Interior.

Died In the Cells.

Chatham, Aug. 3.—James Haggerty, the man found senseless on the Grand Trunk tracks about a weeks ago, died Monday night in the police cells.

Ours, But Has a String on It.

London, Aug. 3.—The Rainbow has been taken over by Admiral Kingsmill, but remains under the commander-in-chief at Portsmouth.

The Australian government is considering plans for a transcontinental railway from east to west, to develop inaccessible country, to expediate the mails and for military purposes.

The Broken Trust

I have seen repentant men lead good and useful lives. Paul Lynne may do the same. It is never too late to mend. He stands before us a criminal now; give him time, he may become a good and useful member of society. I have seen stranger things

"You were always kind to me," murmured the unhappy man; and for the first time his lips trembled and his eyes filled with tears.

"You are right, Mr. Grey," said Captain Chandos, but Lord Damar dissented.

"You are bound in justice to expose to prosecute, and to punish him."

But the tears were streaming down Paul Westerne's face.

"No, no, by lord," he cried; "the man relents, repents; he can do more Do you remember Divine lips that long centuries ago said: "Let him who is without sin cast the first stone!' My lord, have you no need of mercy, that you refuse to show it? Give him another chance. He is human. He is a repentant man, not a defiant foe, to be trampled under foot. Give him a chance. Do not be hard; it will rise up against you if you are."

"Yes," said Mr. Grey, "it must be mercy, not justice! Something is due to him; he might have given us long months of trouble and untold expense he has made all the reparation in his power, and he repents."

Even Lord Damar turned uneasily away as the long bitter sobs fell upon his ear.

"I cannot stand this," he said; "there is no more to do; let us go away."

It was Captain Chandos — true friend and noble foe — who went up to Paul Lynne, and bending over the crouching figure said:

"The worst is over; we will leave you. You yourself shall decide your future. You must at once give up Carsdale, and return there no more. If you like to go abroad, I will comply with Alan Wayne's last wishes; I will give you a fair start in life and you can atone for this miserable sin."

But the bowed head was not raised.

"In one hour," said Captain Chandos, "I will return. I will save you all further shame. Hush! do not weep so; try to think. I will help you all I can."

They left the room silently, one by one, and as the artist closed the door he said, gently:

"There must be some good left in a man who can weep so bitterly."

The sound of that bitter weeping went with them.

Esther was still sitting in the hall; her wistful eyes followed them. Paul Westerne went up to her.

"We know the secret," he said gently. "You love him; go to him and comfort him; he stands in sore need of it."

CHAPTER XXXIX.

A Woman's Love.

He knelt where they had left him, his face buried in his hands, deep, convulsive sobs shaking the strong figure. He heard no noise; neither the opening nor closing of the door aroused him.

He never looked up, even when two tender arms were clasped around his neck, ewhn a fair face was laid on his, and a voice that was all music said:

"Let me comfort you, Paul. You are my own again."

He could not thrust her from him. She, to whom his cruelty and treachery had been boundless as the deep sea, was the only one in his hour of shame and humiliation that came near him.

She, who refused all share in his prosperity; who would rather have perished with hunger than have taken from him one shilling of his ill-gotten money, came now to share his sorrow.

Had they placed him on the felon's dock, she would have stood by his side; had he been placed upon the scaffold, she would have remained near him. There are, thank Heaven women of such loving devoted natures, and their heroism is not rare.

"Paul," she said, "you have atoned; you have confessed; look up — all is not lost. You may live this down let me help you; it was a great temptation, and you fell — others have fallen, and have risen higher and higher"

But in the white face raised to hers there was nothing but despair.

"Esther," he cried, "I do not deserve that you should be here with me now."

Surely, Madam, You Want Flavor In Flour

'Tisn't every flour has flavor, you know.

But FIVE ROSES is milled from "flavoured" Manitoba Spring Wheat, the very meat of the golden berries.

The toothsome part of the cleaned, field-ripened kernels—the inside heart with all its flavor, without any impurities, or specks, or stain.

Nothing to deaden the flavor—not even bleaching, Madam.

And the longer it is kept, the better it grows.

LAKE OF THE WOODS MILLING COMPANY KEEWATIN

The woman who knows and uses this best flour finds in its savory freshness a most effective appetizer for finicky folks.

The amber gluten in FIVE ROSES imparts to the body of the loaf, to all your rolls, and goodies, and bake things a delicate aroma; and to the crinkling crust a rich tastiness as from freshly barked hickory nuts.

And, you know, that mouth-watering sensation is the surest sign of ready digestibility.

You can buy any old flour your grocer hands you, of course, but you simply can't get the FLAVOR unless you get FIVE ROSES.

There is no other flour like it, just as there are no other pies like yours.

Just YOU try it, Madam. Then you'll understand.

ROMANTIC WOOINGS.

Sir Henry M. Stanley Was Rebuffed When He Sought Miss Tennant.

Like an aroma, that haunts and colors the thoughts and feelings of our most tender moods, is the romantic odor that clings around the love-making of some of the world's most notable men and women, lending to it an attractiveness and fascination which neither time nor circumstances can effectually diminish.

Even a man like Sir Henry Stanley, resolute, brusque, and absorbed in his life-work, had one of the most romantic wooings imaginable, and certain it is that if any one had told Miss Dorothy Tennant, when she first met the great explorer, that he would one day lead her to the altar she would have laughed the idea to scorn. Dainty, daring Miss Tennant, whose charm and caustic wit had gained here celebrity in London society, openly expressed her indifference, almost dislike, for the famous traveler. This was discouraging to begin with, but Stanley, nevertheless, set himself to pay marked attention to perhaps, the only girl in his "set" who did not eagerly welcome a little notice from the most-talked-of man of the year. When, later, he proposed to the much-petted young lady he met with a further rebuff.

Sir Henry went on his way back to Africa to relieve Emin Pasha with unmoved mien, but a very sore heart, and to the onlookers the little drama was closed. But they reckoned without their host, and the sequel to the interesting love tale came when Stanley returned triumphant—again successful in his undertaking.

At a ball in Kensington they met again. Before the evening had advanced far Stanley and his first and only love were alone together for a moment. "I have not changed, Dorothy," he said, simply. "Really?" she asked, raising her beautiful eyes to his face and speaking more softly than was her wont. "I have though." And then Stanley knew that he had won yet another victory.

The wooing of that other great traveler, Sir Richard Burton, was quick and very unconventional. One day when Miss Arundel was walking with her sister in Boulogne, she passed a strange man whose dark eyes, as she afterwards confessed, "seemed to hypnotize her." Turning to her sister she declared, "Some day that man will marry me." The very next day the sisters again met the strange gentleman, who chalked upon the wall this question, "May I speak to you?" Miss Arundel chalked in response, "No, mamma will be angry"—and this was the beginning of one of the most remarkable wooings and wedded lives in the whole romance of love.

It was over a dinner-table that Miss Glynne caught her first glimpse of Mr. Gladstone, to whom she was to devote her life. "Do you see that young man?" a staesman who was sitting next her, said. "Some day he will be Prime Minister of England." No wonder the young girl's interest was aroused; and when, in the winter following, they met again in the lovers' land of Italy, what wonder that the wooing proceeded apace, and that the foundation of one of the most beautiful married lives in history was laid?

The love affairs of famous writers have ever provided an interesting and fascinating topic for discussion, and little wonder, when one recollects the romantic wooings of so many of our great literary men. Few more romantic wooings are chronicled in these affairs of the heart than that of the great dramatist and orator, Richard Sheridan, when he determined to make Miss Linley, the beautiful "Nightingale of Bath" his wife. She counted her suitors by the score; but Sheridan's devotion won her heart. He disguised himself as a coachman merely to have the pleasure of driving her; he escorted her to a French nunnery to rescue her from the persecutions of an odious wooer, with whom he fought two duels on her behalf. And this was but a type of the chivalrous adventures which ultimately enable him to lead her to the altar in April, 1773.

Possibly the happiest and most romantic of all literary love-stories is that of the Brownings'. Their courtship was by no means devoid of difficulties, thanks to Miss Barrett's father, who was a most exacting parent, and seems to have kept his daughter in considerable awe of him. The lovers determined, nevertheless, to get married. To face the anger of her father was, however, too much for Miss Barrett; and, therefore, the marriage was solemnized without his knowledge. Husband and wife parted at the church door; but a week later they met again at a stationer's shop, and set off for Southampton, whence they sailed for that beautiful southern shore which was to witness such happy years of married life — an ideal union, fitly described as one unbroken realized poem."

The love romance of John Ruskin was not without its pathos. Adele Domecq, the beautiful daughter of his father's partner, was the object of his heart's worship. She came on a visit to his home at Herene Hill, and the youth promptly fell "head over heels" in love with her "sweet oval face and graceful figure." But Adele could speak no English, and he knew nothing of her native tongue, Spanish; while his natural shyness made his efforts at love-making so ridiculous that she declared: "If this boy does not desist I shall die of laughing." But for young Ruskin it was the one love of a life-time, and from the day when Adele became the wife of Baron Duquesne his "heart was dead within him."

"Nine Tailors Make a Man."

The often employed phrase, "nine tailors make a man," is said to have originated in the following incident: In 1742 an orphan boy applied at a fashionable tailor's shop in London in which nine journeymen were employed. His interesting appearance opened the hearts of the benevolent tailors, who immediately contributed nine shilling for the relief of the little stranger. With this capital he purchased fruit which he retailed at a profit. Time passed on, and wealth and honor smiled upon the young tradesman, so that when he set up his carriage instead of troubling the college of heralds for a crest he painted the following motto on his carriage door: 'Nine tailors made me a man'."

A South Arabian Food Plant.

Jowari, a tall, slender plant resembling corn and headed with a grain something like millet, is the Abdali's chief crop. He feeds the stalk to his camels and eats the grain himself. Three crops a year are produced. Jowari requires little cultivation except weeding, which the Abdali does by hand, and when ripe he cuts it off close to the ground with his hunting knife. New shoots spring up from the roots to become the next crop. For a camel load of about 125 pounds he receives at Aden an average of two rupees, or $64.88. A fair yearly yield is twenty camel loads an acre.—Consular and Trade Reports.

Fairly Warned.

"Mr. Smith," spoke up the young lawyer, "I come here as a representative of your neighbor, Tom Jones, with the commission to collect a debt due him."

"I congratulate you," answered Mr. Smith, "on obtaining so permanent a job at such an early stage in your career."—Success.

Got What She Wanted.

"I can stand for some things, but not for everything," said the clerk as he watched a stylishly dressed young woman leave the store.

"What is the matter?" asked the proprietor, who had walked up unobserved.

"That woman who just left hustled up to the counter and asked to see men's shirts. I showed her every style and color we carry. After inspecting the entire stock she rose and thanked me sweetly, adding: 'I didn't wish to purchase any. You see, I am making my husband some shirts, and I wanted to be sure I was doing them right. My husband is very particular about the finish of his shirts.' And they say married women are so considerate."

The boss smiled and walked away.—Boston Traveler.

Defining an Art Patron.

"Is your husband so very fond of art?"

"Art! He doesn't know a Raphael from a haircut."

"Why, I understood him to say that he was an art patron."

"Patron! That man wouldn't trade a club sandwich for a Bouguereau! What does he mean by calling himself an art patron?"

"Why, it says it costs him ten thousand a year to pay for the bogus masters the smooth dealers coax you to buy—and that makes him an art patron."

REMARKABLE ISLANDS.

Archipelago Near Cape Colony Is Rich With Sea-Fowls' Eggs.

Lying off the southwestern corner of Cape Colony, and a little to the north of Cape Town, are a group of islands of which Dassen, Jutten, and Malagassen Islands are the largest and most prominent. They appear nothing more than rocky islets, whose jagged rocks projecting above the level of the sea offer an emphatic warning to the navigator not to venture too closely. Should the passing vessel approach sufficiently near, the traveler will observe the islands to be crowded with birds, and probably will dismiss them from his mind with the thought that they are merely the isolated and well-nigh inaccessible strongholds of the sea-fowl clustering on their barren sides.

Such, however, is far from being the case. Though the three above-named islands, which constitute the largest and most important of the group, do not cover in the aggregate more than from 20 to 30 acres of ground yet they are the centre of two flourishing industries. The islands are the property of the Government, and their sanctity is carefully preserved. No one is allowed to intrude on their shores without express permission. They are as closely protected as a hoard of treasure, and on each island is stationed a resident official or ranger, for whom comfortable quarters are provided, and who on behalf of his employers maintains a practically autocratic sway. Though one might probably search in vain for traces of precious metals or gems, the existence of which might be suggested by the thoroughness of the reservation, yet their yield two articles of commercial value which represent a satisfactory revenue to the Colonial Government. The first of these is guano, of which huge deposits are to be found on these seagirt rocks; the other is penguin eggs.

The last-named industry is becoming of more importance every year, and a decided stimulus has been imparted to the trade by the recent successful introduction of the eggs into Britain. In South Africa the edible is as common as the ordinary hen's egg, and is a favorite addition to the breakfast table. In fact, owing to its peculiarly easy digestible qualities, combined with an appetising flavor, it is greatly preferred to the smaller product of the domestic fowl; while the fact that "it is considerably larger renders it a good square meal in itself.

In general appearance the egg resembles somewhat that of the goose, to which it also approximates in size. A peculiarity in cooking, however, is that the white or albumen—never becomes solidified and white, as is the case with the hen's egg, but preserves its jelly-like consistency of a very pale blue color. No matter how long cooking may be prolonged, it will always retain this character, though the yolk itself will become set in the usual manner. It is owing to this peculiarity that the albumen of the penguin's egg is so easily digestible and constitutes such a valuable dietetic for invalids. In view of the fact that the bird depends for its sustenance on fish, it might be conceived that the egg will necessarily have a fishy flavor; but such a conclusion would be quite fallacious.

Her Majesty's Hobby.

Queen Alexandra wrote a long time ago in the preference book at a ducal mansion that her favorite occupation and amusement were "playing the piano and riding," her chief dislike "slander," and her highest ambition "non-interference in other persons' business." Her Majesty has not changed her views on the last two points. Her dislike of gossip is well known, but since that time she has developed a new hobby in photography, to which she remains permanently devoted. For nearly twenty years photography has furnished the Queen with a pleasurable and artistic pursuit, and with an object for making a collection. The Queen's photographic albums number many volumes, and she derives great pleasure in arranging the pictures which she has taken. Each photograph has the name of the subject and the date at which it was taken inscribed beneath it, in the Queen's handwriting. During one of Her Majesty's cruises in the Mediterranean, she sent home some fourteen hundred films to be developed, which will give some idea of the enthusiasm with which the Queen follows her hobby. She has also found a novel use for her work by having a tea service specially manufactured, with one of her photographs represented upon each piece.

What He Found Out.

An Italian journalist, Signor Tommaso Glioni, has just had some disagreeable experiences. Desirous of knowing something of the lunatic asylums from within, with the object of ameliorating the lot of the insane, he presented himself at the gates of the Cimarosa asylum and asked for an audience of the king of Italy. The attendants showed him the door, and then he ran foul of the police and in the end found himself interned in the asylum. The doctors examined him and, finding him far from tractable, administered an emetic. Then they gave him a shower bath and next vaccinated the enterprising journalist. After that they held a consultation in the presence of the "lunatic," whose bona fides they evidently suspected, and brutally but unanimously agreed that the only treatment in such a case was trepanning [illegible] brain. By this [illegible] thought [illegible] to con[illegible] sel [illegible] fr[illegible] serving [illegible] thoug[illegible] admin[illegible] sufficie[illegible] t.

The Home of Musical Fish.

Lake Batticaloa, Ceylon, has the probably unique distinction of being the home of musical fish. The sounds emitted by these are said to be as sweet and melodious as those which would be produced by a series of aeolian harps. Crossing the lake in a boat one can plainly distinguish the pleasant sounds. If an oar is dipped in the water the melody becomes louder and more distinct.

THREE YOUNG MAGNATES.

Youthful Business Men Who Are Now Millionaires.

Every little while there is some little incident occurring that goes to show how fast some of the younger generation of Canadians have jumped, by their own efforts, into the millionaire class.

The other day, for instance, when the big ocean liner Lusitania pulled into New York from England it had among its passengers three young Canadians who about five years ago very few people ever expected would be in the millionaire class for a great many years to come, and yet in that short space of time, in entirely different fields had accumulated an unusually large amount of wealth for a young country like Canada.

The three of them, who chummed quite a lot together on the way over, were Mr. C. B. Gordon, the young president of the Dominion Textile Co., which represents the merger of a number of the larger cotton concerns of Canada; Mr. W. M. Aitken, more generally known as the president of the Royal Securities Corporation because it is his pet concern, but in reality the wizard of Canadian promoters, who even before he had touched the thirty-year mark had perhaps more consolidations to his credit than any other Canadian capitalist; and Mr. Shirley Ogilvie, a director of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., Ltd., but more generally known as one of the four young men who jumped into prominence a few years ago, when after securing the control of the Canadian Rubber Co., they formed the big Canadian rubber consolidation, now included in the Canadian Consolidated Rubber Co.

Even a hasty glance back shows at what a tremendous pace all three of them have come along, for it only seems the other day when Charlie Gordon was working almost day and night to put the Standard Shirt Co. on its feet and probably had never dreamt of such a thing as the consolidation of the principal cotton concerns of the country.

When the time came, however, for this consolidation the Montreal financiers who recognized the possibilities of it, right from the outset called in Mr. Gordon's advice because it was felt that from a practical standpoint he knew a great deal about the cotton trade of the country.

When finally the merger had been completed it was found that Gordon had relinquished his position in the Standard Shirt and was to fill the important post of vice-president and managing director of the big textile concern.

Naturally, of course, from a stock market standpoint, he got right in on the ground floor, and while he was going ahead making a success of the Textile Company he was all the time adding to the value of his big holdings in the company.

Then about a year ago, when Mr. David Yuile, the president of the company, passed away, the directors insisted on Mr. Gordon stepping into the presidency, notwithstanding the fact that in doing so he would easily be the youngest Canadian to occupy such a post in a big concern.

Of course Mr. Gordon has also been a shrewd business man in other ways, but there can be little doubt but that by far the greater proportion of his present large fortune was made out of the Textile securities.

Then while young Mr. Aitken has during the past year become one of the leading figures in financial circles, both in Montreal and Toronto, still before coming up to Montreal to reside from Halifax he had put through a large number of deals, more particularly in connection with public utilities and electrical power concerns.

"Patrick," Duke of Connaught.

A propos of the probable appointment of H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught to be Governor-General of Canada before very long, though not probably this year, some papers have credited the selection of the name "Patrick," as one of the many borne by His Royal Highness to the personal request of the Duke of Wellington, who acted as sponsor. As a matter of fact, Queen Victoria herself has explained that the suggestion came from a humble but patriotic daughter of Ireland. Her Majesty was out driving with two of her children when an old beggar wife hobbled across her path and cried with high-pitched fervor: "Oh, Queen dear! call the next one Patrick and all Ireland will die for ye!" In the royal family, and among his intimates, the Duke of Connaught is always called "Pat," and it is related by one who knows him very well that he can tell the good stories he has collected in his travels and campaigns, with a humor worthy of his Irish name.

A Dundas Militiaman.

The famous 77th Regiment has a new colonel, and his name is not Bertram, but Knowles.

The new colonel is, however, of the Bertram type. He was born in Flamboro Township in Wentworth County in 1862. Proceeding rapidly to a professional career, he has been a barrister in the town of Dundas since 1884. He has served on the School Board, and in the council, and was for two years mayor of the town.

His military service has been short. In 1899 he joined the 77th Regiment as captain of No. 1 Company. Exactly ten years later, he became Lieutenant-Colonel and Commanding Officer.

BRONCHITIS.

Need of Watchful Care During an Attack of the Disease.

Bronchitis is the name given to any inflammation of the mucous membrane of the bronchial tubes. In a fairly healthy adult an attack of acute bronchitis is not a very terrifying thing, although it is most distressing and disagreeable.

It is as if an unusually severe cold and cough, instead of confining itself to the head and throat, wandered on down the chest. The irritation of the tubes results in a constant cough and sense of breathlessness. The temperature rises, the patient feels sick, the more so that the incessant coughing does not result in the throwing off of any secretion to speak of.

In a day or two the inflammation in the tubes subsides, the temperature goes down, there is less and less sense of oppression, and the secretion gradually becomes freer. From this point there is gradual recovery, as from an ordinary bad cold.

On the other hand, in the very old or the very young or with those whose powers of resistence are lessened from any cause whatever bronchitis is a dangerous disease. It has a tendency to run from the acute into the chronic form, in which the sufferer may be perfectly well during the summer months or while in a warm climate, but at the least chill or exposure must expect and will get his inevitable attack of bronchitis with symptoms persisting until the return of warm weather.

The moral of this is that it is most essential to give proper treatment during the acute stage. The need of watchful care during a bronchial attack will be the more appreciated when it is understood that such an attack may be the beginning, sign and warning of a tuberculous trouble and, furthermore, that whooping cough and measles sometimes begin that way.

In any case, whether the attack be simple bronchitis or a warning of some other trouble, the first rule should be "straight to bed." In fact, this good old fashioned rule at the onset of any type of so called "cold" cannot be bettered.

A wise secondary rule is to stay in bed till the temperature has been normal for a day or two. If this were observed relapses would be fewer and convalescences shortened.

Never mind how mild the trouble promises to be, a physician should be at once summoned not only because he alone is competent to recognize danger signals, but also because there are many alleviations in his power of the numerous painful and distressing symptoms of this disorder.

The Driver Was Puzzled.

A negro and his truck were rapidly careening down the steep hill to the station. Crates and boxes were noisily bumping to the street, but a small negro sat on the summit undisturbed by the rapidly accruing wreckage. Presently the driver pulled up at the station with a flourish, and, looking over his shoulder, his face became momentarily transfixed with astonishment to note that a great portion of his load was missing.

Turning to the small negro, he demanded:

"What's de matter wif yo' mouf, niggah? Hit wuks well 'nuff w'en dey ain't no 'casion."

Cow Caused Trouble In Quiet Rossmore.

The action of a cow at the village of Rossmore last evening not only caused considerable excitement but resulted in a resident of this city being injured, but fortunately not seriously. The animal had been purchased by a butcher in this city from a yeoman residing in Ameliasburg Townshp. It was being driven towards the city, when near the bay bridge at Rossmire it acted as if mad. A number of persons endeavored to get the animal upon the bridge but it was o fno avail. In one of its mad charges it struck Mr. Thomas Carter, of this city, and hurled him for some distance. At first it was feared that Carter was painfully hurt as he was unconscious. He however, revived, and some bruises constituted his injuries. The animal finally turned and, when last seen, was making for the place it had been taken from Lawn Social.

A very enjoyable event, indeed, was the lawn social held on the rectory grounds of Emmanuel R. E. Church Victoria avenue, last night. There was a good attendance, and the grounds were nicely decorated. Everything was "al fresco." A short but very enjoyable programme was given. Miss Annie Mair showed her fine training and splendid soprano voice in three songs, namely, "The Garden of Roses," "My Ain Folk" and "If I had a Thousand Lives to Live," greatly pleasing the audience Miss Pearl Thompson sang "Under the Maples" very nicely, and Mr Harry MacKay, always a favorite sang "Afton Water" and a sacred solo. It is a safe wager that Sweet Afton will cease to flow gently before people get tired of hearing Mr. MacKay sing Burns' sweet song. In addition to the vocal music, the Sunday school orchestra played, and during the evening the ladies served ice cream and cake, which made a tremendous hit, especially with the younger folks.

The Last Sad Rites.

The funeral of the late Mr. Hugh Collins took place this morning from the Queen's Hotel, and many from the city and vicinity attended the obsequies. At the Queen's Hotel a brief service was conducted by Rev. Rural Dean Beamish, of St. Thomas church, after which the remains were conveyed to Plainfield village where a service was held in the Methodist church by the Rev. Mr. Ward. Interment took place at Garrison cemetery. The floral tributes were numerous, and many were beautiful in design. The bearers were five brothers, John, Archibald, James George and Edward, and one nephew,

A Gone Coon.

"Nigger," the little black spaniel dog belonging to Mr. J. V. Jenkins, which was a general favorite with all guests at Hotel Quinte, was last evening the victim of an accident which will probably result in his death. "Nigger" was on the crossing at the junction of Bridge and Pinnacle streets and did not notice the approach of an automobile which knocked him down and ran over him, inflicting internal injuries. It is asserted that the driver of the car failed to give the necessary warning when approaching the crossing.

STRIKING

C. S. Nesbitt, of Durand, an employee of the Grand Trunk who sacrificed his expectation of a pension of $50 a month from the company, by joining the strikers three weeks before the pension was due, is not to be congratulated for his heroism. He has a family and they would almost have been justified in initiating a judicial inquiry as to his sanity, for he was hardly fit to exercise his own discretion in flinging away an income that would have stood between them and want as long as he lived. The labor organization which exacted such suicidal loyalty from him was not entirely blameless either, for his continued service to the company for so brief an interval could in no way endanger the success of the strike. If an intelligent workman whose union frequently drags him into strikes would keep a debtor and creditor account of his losses by obeying the union and his profits out of strikes, even when they succeeded, he would be astonished how the balance would show on the wrong side. In Nesbitt's case the whole account may be on the wrong side. He is too old for any other employment than switching, and if the strike does not succeed, he will be permanently out of a job. Foolish Nesbitt.—Detroit Free Press.

At Griffin's

An exceptional strong bill of vaudeville and pictures were presented to the patrons of Griffin's Opera House last evening—Dunlevy and Williams, a clever team of men, present an act entitled "College Chums", which created untold amusement for all. Also Mamie Fisher, known as the Iron Jawed Wonder, equalled the honors, her act being a decided novelty to this city. The above bill will be continued Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

Memorial Tablet in St. Andrew's Church.

Following is an extract from the minutes of the Kirk Session of St. Andrew's church which speaks for itself:

"That a tablet having been placed in St. Andrew's church by Mrs. S. S. Lazier, in loving memory of Rev. M. W. MacLean, for thirty-one years minister of the congregation, the Kirk Session would express its hearty appreciation of the beautiful memorial thus presented by Mrs. Lazier, and its gratification that the faithful ministry of Rev. Mr. MacLean has been recognized in this appropriate manner."

The tablet is of solid brass, beautiful in design and workmanship, and a very fitting memorial to the memory of a faithful and beloved pastor. Mrs. Lazier is to be greatly commended for her thoughtfulness and generosity.

Stones Were Flying Through the Air.

A gentleman this morning showed us a stone weighing 11 ounces which, last night, about 5.30, went hustling through the air and fell on the Bowling Green on William street. The stone, which narrowly missed a young lady, Miss Jessie McLean, was so deeply imbedded in the earth that it was all a fairly strong man could do to pull it out. Where did the flying rock come from? Well, not from Halley's comet. It is alleged that several big blasts were set off on Dundas street, west of George, just before the missile made its appearance on the Bowling Green, and that the rock flew in a dangerous way because the blasts were not sufficiently protected by coverings. Too much care cannot be taken in this matter. Broken windows, etc., are bad enough, but if a 11-ounce rock hits anybody on the head it's liable to be a job for the undertaker.

Along the Docks.

There was a scene of considerable activity about the dock this morning and afternoon. The steamer Brockville made two trips to Twelve O'Clock Point conveying the children and friends of Christ church and St. George's Sunday schools. There was a large attendance.

The steamer Varuna this morning had a large number of passengers on board for various bay ports.

The steamer Belleville of the R. & O. line came into port this morning being eastward bound. She had on board many passengers and a large consignment of freight. She took on board here over 2,000 boxes of cheese, in addition to other freight.

This afternoon the steamer Aletha conveyed an excursion party to Picton, there being a large number on board.

Local Strike Notes.

There was much satisfaction in the city last night when the news arrived that the G. T. R. strike had been settled.

Parties of men, evidently strikers, paraded the streets cheering, shouting and singing. They were bubbling over with joy, apparently, to think that their enforced idleness was over.

One of the strikers informed The Intelligencer this morning that the striking trainmen in this district will all return to their posts today.

Great activity prevails around the local station and freight yard.

Black Man Barred From Ocean Sands.

CROWD WANTED TO DROWN TWO COONS WHO DARED GO BATHING WITH WHITE FOLKS AT CONEY ISLAND.

New York, July 30.—An attempt was made to drown two negroes at Coney Island, yesterday, because the negroes wanted to bathe in the ocean with the white men and women. Bryant Teal and Frank Davis, the negroes had narrow escapes.

They slipped into bathing suits during the heat of the day and went to the pier. About 60 white men and women were in the water at the time. An outcry against the presence of the negroes was raised by someone.

Several men grabbed Davis, who is slight of build, and pulled him out into deep water. They did not know that he could swim and their object seemed to be to drown him. Davis was pulled beyond his depth, but he proved a good swimmer and he saved himself by striking out and away from the whites who seemed to want his life. He made a wide detour, got to shore and ran for cover. In the meantime Teal, who stands six feet high and is of powerful build, had gotten to shore and taken to flight, under a hail of stones. The crowd took after him.

Teal was almost winded when a white man named James Deaver, saw his plight and called him into his little place of business. Deaver stood off the crowd while Teal hid in the rear until he got his wind again. Then he slipped out of a back window and continued his flight until he was safely home.

In the chase after Teal so much excitement was created that a dozen calls for the police were sent.

Alleged Wife Beater.

As the result of a call last evening to the corner of Wharf and Pinnacle streets, by a police officer, Wm. Gerard, a middle-aged man, was placed under arrest. The charges preferred against him are rather serious, namely, being drunk and assaulting his wife. Gerard has been residing in the city for some time.

This morning an amicable settlement in this case was effected without police court proceedings, Gerard returning home with his wife.

WORLD'S DEBT TO CANADA

A Wonderful Achievement

Discovery of "Fruit-a-tives" has meant health for all

Canada's fame does not rest solely on her furs and wheat fields. Her rise in the esteem of the world is not due to her Cobalt mines. It is the work of her great men that has made her great. A graduate of McGill University has won lasting renown for his original researches in the realms of Physics.

Everyone knows that fruit is wholesome, when eaten judiciously. Physicians generally recognize the fact that fruit juices have a beneficial effect on the various organs of the body.

It remained for a Canadian physician to discover a process whereby the medicinal action of fruit could be so increased as to make the intensified juices a wonderful cure.

"Fruit-a-tives" is this combination of fruit juices and tonics. Since its introduction to the public, "Fruit-a-tives" has met with a success accorded to no other medicine in the world. The reason is plain. "Fruit-a-tives" is the one remedy that is actually made of fruit, and is the only remedy that naturally cures Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, Headaches, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Backache, Kidney and Skin Troubles. At all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c., or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

KING'S OATH ALTERED

New Formula Passes Its Third Reading in the Lords.

Bill Which Now Awaits the Assent of King George, Simply Says That King Must Declare Himself a True Protestant and Swear to Maintain the Protestant Succession — Anglican Church Is Omitted.

London, Aug. 3.—The accession declaration bill, striking out the phrases offensive to the Roman Catholic Church in the declaration made by the King after accession and substituting merely the words, "I am a faithful Protestant," was passed by the House of Lords upon the third reading yesterday. No changes were made in the formula as adopted by the House of Commons.

The bill, having passed the House of Commons, now awaits the royal assent. The oath, as amended, will be in the following terms: "I do solemnly, sincerely, in the presence of God, profess, testify, and declare that I am a faithful Protestant, and that I will, according to the true intent of the enactments to secure the Protestant succession to the throne of my realm, uphold and maintain said enactments to the best of my power."

The unanimity with which Parliament has approved of the new form of declaration is in striking contrast with the controversial feeling aroused throughout the country. In Scotland the opposition to the bill was particularly keen, and members of Parliament were deluged with petitions from religious and other bodies protesting against the change. The Nonconformists claimed that there should be no reference to the "Church of England as by law established," and showed strong opposition to the original substituting clause, which read: "and declare that I am a faithful member of the Protestant Church as by law established in England." This amendment was accepted by the Premier.

The first reading of the bill passed the House of Commons on June 28 by a vote of 383 to 42, and the second reading was agreed to on Wednesday last without a division. The reasons for the bill were clearly expressed by Mr. Asquith, who declared that their only object was to relieve the new sovereign from the obligation of making a public declaration which gave legitimate offence to millions of loyal subjects in all parts of his dominions.

Destroyed the Books.

Montreal, Aug. 3.—Practically the whole day was taken up by the special investigation committee appointed to look into the charges brought against the members of Emancipation Lodge in connection with the alleged plot against the priests attending the International Eucharistic Congress. Three sessions were held, and the most important item adduced came out at the close of the third session late Monday night. It was to the effect that at the end of May all books and records of the lodge had been destroyed, so that there is no existent corroboration in writing of the charges made by the three young men of the alleged plot. The witness for the defence declared that the books had been destroyed to safeguard the lodge secrets and business.

Jail Conditions Disgraceful.

St. Catharines, Aug. 3.—County Judge Carman yesterday morning returned from Muskoka to dispose of four cases of robbery against Mark D. Lefay, Fletcher E. Marquis, Cyril Fisher and John Mullen. The cases were for trivial sums of money, and the judge took a lenient view of them. The four men were given a month in jail; Marquis getting an extra week for assault. The judge commented upon the light sentences because of the conditions at Port Dalhousie, which he termed disgraceful.

Trade With Australia.

Ottawa, Aug. 3.—The report of the Canadian Trade Commissioner to Australia, which has just been received by the Department of Trade and Commerce, shows that Australian-Canadian trade for the Australian fiscal year amounted to over $3,800,000.

Australian imports from Canada aggregated $400,000 and exports to Canada $400,000. For Australia's previous fiscal year imports from Canada totaled $2,660,000 and exports to Canada $395,000.

Rival Factions Clash.

Vigo, Spain, Aug. 3—The police here intervened yesterday to disperse rival demonstrations, the members of which came to blows over the dispute between Spain and the Vatican. The Capucines were marching in procession, acclaiming the Pope, when they were attacked by the anti-clerical elements of the population.

Plasterers on Strike.

Ottawa, Aug. 3.—A hundred and fifty plasterers and their laborers went out on strike yesterday morning in the capital, with a view to getting an increase of wages of five cents an hour. Laborers who have been receiving 25 cents are asking for 30, while the plasterers themselves, who have been getting 40 cents, want 45.

Biplane Turned Turtle.

London, Aug. 3.—While Mme. Franck was 125 feet in the air at Sunderland her byplane fouled of a flagstaff and turned turtle. It crashed to the earth and the motor struck a boy spectator, killing him at once. Mme. Franck sustained a compound fracture of the leg.

Presentation to Pastor.

Collingwood, Aug. 3.—Rev. J. A. Cranston, M.A., who is leaving here to assume the pastorate of St. Andrew's Church, Fort William, was presented on Monday evening with a gold watch and chain by the congregation of the Collingwood Presbyterian Church.

Charlton May Go Free.

New York, Aug. 3.—The forty days allowed the Italian Government under its treaty with the United States, to make formal demand for the custody of Porter Charlton, held in Jersey City, N.J., jail for the murder of his wife, Mrs. Mary Scott Castle Charlton, at Moltrasio, on Lake Como, expired at midnight last night.

No such request has been received by the State Department in Washington.

The interest of the U. S. Government in the case dies with the expiration of the forty days, and the unusual situation confronts the officials of a confessed murderer being held without legal process.

Three courses are open to the attorneys retained by Judge Charlton, father of the young assassin. The first is simply to demand that the youth be released, there being no legal charge against him. The second is the issuance of a writ of habeas corpus to secure his release, while the third is the institution of insanity proceedings.

Endorsed Naval Policy.

Regina, Sask., Aug. 3.—At the meeting here Monday night an unusual incident occurred, when 350 German immigrants, under the leadership of Theodore Semidtz, welcomed Sir Wilfrid. As Semidtz rose to address the Prime Minister a remarkable demonstration took place, which developed into a provincial welcome. Not only did the young German endorse the Government naval policy, but a gathering of young Hebrews took the same stand, and further, the young Englishmen who have been in the country for less than twelve months gave their expression of approval to the Government's policy. While the west thinks more of box cars than of warships, so far the navy has not been the most popular question before the public.

At Weyburn, Sir Wilfrid and his party were tendered a complimentary banquet on their arrival.

Defy the Authorities.

Ottawa, Aug. 3.—The Transcontinental Railway Commissioners are much concerned over reports from La Tuque, concerning whisky troubles in the vicinity of construction work. The law is that whisky cannot be sold within five miles on either side of the railway, while under construction. Reports to the commissioners state, however, that the whisky sellers are openly defying the authorities, and refuse to remove themselves. The situation is so serious that half a dozen Dominion policemen were sent to La Tuque yesterday, heavily armed, and with the simple order to see that the law is obeyed.

Boys Buried In the Sand.

New York, Aug. 3.—Three little boys, who had been searched for high and low since they were missed from their homes on Madison street in Brooklyn Monday afternoon, were found dead yesterday in a nearby vacant lot, where a sand embankment had fallen upon them while they were at play. The presence of the bodies in the sand pile was discovered by a dog.

Fatal Head-on Collision.

Newcastle, Pa., Aug. 3.—Two brakemen were killed, an engineer and fireman were seriously injured and several other trainmen sustained minor hurts in a head-on collision on the Western New York and Pennsylvania division of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. one-half mile south of Volant yesterday.

Escaped by the Window.

Meaford, Aug. 3.—At about 2 o'clock yesterday morning fire broke out in the residence of Mrs. Maxwell, on Berry street, apparently caused by mice. Mrs. Maxwell, who is a widow, succeeded in getting the children out by the window.

Don't Want the School.

Forest, Aug. 3.—A bylaw to issue debentures for $18,000 to build a new public school here was submitted to the ratepayers yesterday and defeated by a vote of 167 to 31, less than half the vote being polled.

Filial Repartee.

Richard Brinsley Sheridan, who was always distressed for money, was one day hacking his face with a dull razor when he turned to his eldest son and said:

"Tom, if you open any more oysters with my razor I'll cut you off with a shilling."

"Very well, father," said Tom, "but where will you get the shilling?"

ABOUT SIR THOMAS.

How the Great Irish Yachtsman Made His Money.

Sir Thomas Johnstone Lipton, Bart., K.C.V.O., one of Britain's most noted merchant princes, is widely known also as a practical philanthropist. But most of all is Sir Thomas popular and famous for his plucky attempts to win that much coveted of yachting trophies, the America Cup.

So far, success has not rewarded his ambitious and costly endeavors in that direction, but the many admirers of Sir Thomas join with him in the hope that he may yet experience the joy of "lifting that cup" for which he has hitherto challenged in vain. His victory would be indeed popular on both sides of the Atlantic. No man has displayed greater enterprise and ardor combined in the fascinating pursuit of yachtsmanship; no truer sportsman ever trod deck or stood at the helm than the man who owned the Erin and the Shamrocks, and who belongs to most of the crack yacht clubs in his native isles, as well as to that of New York.

Interested in aviation and keen on motoring, the chief recreation of Sir Thomas Lipton's strenuous business life has been sailing under "white wings." For the sea and yachting he has a perfect passion.

But first be earned the right and the wherewithal to engage to his heart's delight in his aquatic hobby by diligence in business.

For Sir Thomas has been the architect and builder of the huge fortune which he now enjoys.

Born in Glasgow in 1850, of parents who had migrated thither from the North of Ireland, with but little of worldly gear, he quite early in life created a thriving business out of nothing in a "mean street" of the city of good St. Mungo.

A glutton for work from the first, he displayed a perfect genius for shopkeeping. His motto was to get the best only of everything he had to sell, and to force it under the eyes of buyers. A born advertiser, the people who passed his stores were attracted by the goods cunningly displayed, in the beginning by his own hands, and later on under his watchful oversight. They became purchasers in steadily increasing numbers, and young Lipton prospered exceedingly.

His business, in course of time, expanded enormously; and then to supply his ever-lengthening provision counters Thomas Lipton became breeder, planter, and manufacturer. To and fro he went to America, and to and fro again, to make sure of steady and sufficient streams of trading-stock, raised under his own control.

Then he made Ceylon his tea-garden; soon thereafter transferring his commercial headquarters to London.

He started biscuit factories in Scotland, fruit farms down in Kent, mammoth meat stores in the United States and markets in many different towns all over the British Isles.

Sir Thomas Lipton is, in his modest way, proud of being a self-made man and often gloried in his great central warehouses in the City Road, London in recalling the time when he, perforce, had to toil something like seventeen hours a day. From the London centre he and his staff are directly in communication with the main branches of the business in Liverpool, Glasgow, and Dublin.

Cheery and full of humor always Sir Thomas is instinct with kindly charity. One outcome of this was his founding of the Alexandra Trust for providing the poor with cheap wholesome meals.

Peculiarities of the Baronetage.

One of the peculiarities of the baronetage is that while the precedence of a baronet is before all knights save Knights of the Garter, that of his wife is before the wives of all knights and his eldest son and daughters rank before the children of all knights. So that if there were another instance of a K.G. who had no higher title, all baronets' wives would precede his wife and the eldest sons and all the daughters of baronets would precede his children.

Another curious thing is that a baronet's patent virtually creates his wife a baronetess in her own right. She is a lady "for and during her natural life," whereas the style and precedence of peers' wives continues only during their widowhood.

A baronet's wife's style title is "lady, madame, or dame"; and I think that the strict consequence of the terms of a baronet's patent is that the widow of Sir A.B. marrying Mr. C. could call herself Lady C. with perfect legal impunity—that is, instead of calling themselves Mr. C. and Lady B. she and her second husband could be announced as Mr. and Lady C. This curious departure from invariable custom has passed almost without notice, but there is no doubt that every baronet's patent creates two life-holders of the dignity.—The Graphic.

Narrow Escapes.

Before entering the 13th Light Dragoons in 1855, Field Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood, V.C., who kept his seventy-second birthday the other day, spent three years in the navy. He served in the Crimea with the Naval Brigade, and was severely wounded while carrying a scaling ladder at the Redan. On another occasion, in the same campaign, his cap was removed from his head by a chip from a shell; while once he was nearly frozen to death when trying to snatch a few hours' sleep. His V.C. was the reward for personal bravery displayed while hunting down the rebels in the Sironga jungles in 1859.

Royal Lady Doctors.

Seeing that the Queen of the Belgians is the only royal lady who can boast of the degree of M.D. we are proud to think that Queen Alexandra has not escaped doctorial distinction. As far back as 1885 the Queen Mother received the degree in music from the Royal University of Ireland. Queen Mary, too, has a similar degree, but appropriately enough from the University of Wales. Perhaps the most curious doctorate in the royal family is the Duke of Connaught's diploma in literature, which his Royal Highness received from the University of the Punjab.

Because native trees are too slow of growth to meet the demand for lumber, trees from America and Europe are being introduced into New Zealand.

A DERBY JOKE.

Officers In Coster Rig Drive Four-In-Hand Barrow.

Quite a large number of people who seldom attend any other race meeting make it a rule never to miss a Derby, and one of their principal delights is the journey down the road. Given fine weather—and this year they were in luck's way in this direction—the Epsom road has many charms at this time of the year, and every description of vehicle is to be seen wending its way to the at ordinary times sleepy town of Epsom, which twice a year awakens from its lethargy and is for a few days all bustle and excitement. Motors and taxis of every description, smart four-in-hands, the sprightly quick-trotting horses of prosperous tradesmen, wagonettes, and the coster in his humble donkey barrow—all proceeded in one direction, and their occupants had all one object in view. They were out for enjoyment, and intended to make the most of their day. Quite the most picturesque turn-out this year left the neighborhood of Victoria at nine o'clock. People in the vicinity of the Grosvenor Hotel were astonished to see drawn up at the portico an ordinary costermonger's barrow capable of seating four persons, and in the shafts were a grey and a brown donkey. The shafts had been lengthened by the addition of an iron bar, to which were hitched the leaders, two more grey donkeys, making four in all. It was a very smart coster turnout, real four-in-hand harness, and plenty of flowers. Whilst the crowd stood gaping at the sight two smart-looking costers emerged from the hotel, peak caps over the eyes, jerseys, pearlies, blue chins, and slouching gait, and all. They were the real thing, and the crowd laughed and cheered as they drove off along Victoria street and over Westminster Bridge. Then the secret came out. It was a huge Derby Day joke. Two subalterns in a famous cavalry regiment had been challenged by their brother officers, and the tempting offer of 20 to 1 to drive a four-in-hand coster's barrow from London to Epsom, the drivers to be arrayed in coster's attire. The challenge was accepted, and as everything in the way of dress had to be technically correct, a visit was paid to a well-known theatrical costumier, who certainly had succeeded in effecting his part uncommonly well. The bet stipulated that the party should drive all the way, and pull up on some prominent position on the Derby course.

Unique Postage Stamps.

Reference has frequently been made to the King's ardor as a stamp-collector, and now the appointment of Earl Carrington as Lord Great Chamberlain recalls the fact, almost unique, that Lord Carrington's head appears on a postage-stamp. Records contain only one other instance, and that is the case—a classic among collectors—of O'Connel, the governor of New Brunswick. He was not what would be termed, even in flattery, an Adonis, but he placed his effigy upon a postage stamp. The result was disastrous to O'Connel. The stamps were immediately recalled and so was the governor. To-day, however, O'Connel is popular with collectors, for the stamp is of great rarity. Keen philatelists are always on the look-out for the Mafeking siege stamps, which bear the head of Major Baden-Powell. They were only issued to meet an emergency, but the Carrington stamp is Queensland's compliment to a popular governor.

Comet's Evil Influence.

An authentic record of the bad luck supposed to be brought about by the comet is contained in the old parish register of Alstonfield, Staffordshire, England, in which is a notice concerning a comet which was visible during the seventeenth century. The notice runs as follows:

"A very strange and fiery Meteor, in form like a Sword, appeared northwest by west in December, 1680, and continued about six weeks, after which ensued a tedious and long drought, which began April the 10th, 1681, and continued till June the 20th of the same year, which procured many pestilentious disease, as agues, strong feavours, small-pox, of which many died in ye Countrey, chifely in great cities and towns corporate."

The Careful Caddie.

Miss Nancy Price, the popular English actress, is credited with the following story of the careful caddie. She was playing golf some time ago, on links where there was a caddie of about twenty-two years of age, who always wore a cap with large flaps which came down over his ears, as he was a victim to chapped ears in cold weather. One bitter day in mid-winter Miss Price saw him without the ear-flaps down, and asked him if his ears were better. "They're not better. They're as bad as ever they were. I've never had my ear-flaps down since the accident." "What accident?" queried Miss Price. "Well, you see, miss, a gent arst me once if I'd 'ave a drink, and I didn't 'ear 'im!"

A Fine Bridge Hand.

An extraordinary hand at bridge is reported by Miss Minnie Anray Jones, of Clifton, Eng. At a final meeting of a local bridge club the declaration was left, and dummy declared hearts with thirteen. The cards were not new, and had been made and cut, but had not been used, as the rubber had only just begun, this being the second deal. There were eight players in the room to witness. The other three hands were not remarkable, a suit of six diamonds, headed by ace, knave, being the only long suit.

What Could She Mean?

"Your little birdie has been very, very ill," she wrote to the young man. "It is some sort of nervous trouble, and the doctors said I must have perfect rest and quiet and that I must think of nothing. And all the time, dear Gussy, I thought constantly of you."

The young man read it over, and then read it through very slowly, and put it in his pocket, and went out under the silent stars, and kept thinking, and thinking, and thinking.

Experts Doubtful of Crippen's Conviction

It is reported here that Dr. Crippen told Inspector Dew he had killed his wife, but that it was not a case of murder, the inference being an illegal operation.

It is said that the body is no nearer identification than on the day it was found.

Legal experts say that unless Crippen confesses it will be difficult to prove the charge against him.

Sent the Lawyers to Jail.

Lost His Life Diving.

Provincetown, Mass., Aug. 4.—George William Failey, gunner's mate of the second-class on the U.S.S. Connecticut, died on the ship yesterday as the result of diving for a lost torpedo. While down he signalled danger, and when hauled in never regained consciousness.

Stow in his account of London between 1560 and 1700 depicts an inn kept by a kind of Fagin of the time of Queen Elizabeth: "One Wotton kept an alehouse * * * near Billingsgate, and in the same house he procured all the cutpurses about the city to repair. There was a school set up to learn young boys to cut purses. Two devices were hung up. The one was a pocket, the other was a purse. The pocket had in it certain counters and was hung about with hawk's bells, and over the top did hang a little scaring bell. The purse had silver in it. And he that could take out a counter without any noise was allowed to be a public foyster. And he that could take a piece of silver out of the purse without noise of any of the bells was adjudged a judicial nypper, according to their terms of art. A foyster was a pickpocket; a nypper was a pickpurse or cutpurse."

Tricks Any Husband Can Learn.

To tell yellow from green in matching silk. To wash the dishes without breaking more than two. To keep quiet when he's spoken to. To face the cook when she's angry. To find out what ails the gas range. To stand in line an hour for two trading stamps. To set up his wife's brother in business. To get up winter nights to investigate "robbers." To smile when his old sweethearts' pictures are burned up. To prefer halma at home to billiards at the club. To drop his old friends because they are "vulgar." To give up coffee because it disagrees with his wife.—Puck.

The Old Man's Schedule.

When they asked the Billville youngster what the "old man" was doing now he replied:

"Well, when he ain't talkin' his head off 'bout breakfast bein' late he's a-raisin' Cain with the hired hands, an' when he ain't a-doin' of them things he's a-diggin' fer bait an' fishin' in the river an' a-doin' of nuthin' pertickler."—Atlanta Constitution.

Entirely Different.

"It's all very well before a girl's married for her to get a flower in her hair," remarked the observer of events and things, "but it's an entirely different matter if, after she's married, she gets her hair in flour."

Cynical.

"You seem to find your book very interesting, Miss Maidstone."

"Yes; it is one of the most charming stories I have ever read, and so true to life. Every man in it is a villain."

One negro who refused to give his name was arrested after a hard fight with a posse, just before noon yesterday. Just before the melee, the negro received a slight gun wound in the neck.

While Wilson has been identified by the man who was assaulted and thrown off the car when Dull was sent for, the majority of officials believe that he is an innocent party. He is being held, however.

The body of Sheriff Dull, who died at the hospital here yesterday, was taken back to Monroe at noon in a private car for burial.

Two Men Injured at Hamilton.

Hamilton, Aug. 4.—Late last night Chester Fickley, 315 West Hunter street, and Ramsay Wills, 25 Orchard hill, were struck by an automobile on the Dundas road and seriously injured. The two men were walking along just near the Globe Hotel, when the auto swooped down on them. Fickley was cut severely about the head, and his clothes torn from shoulders to hips, and it is feared he is injured internally. Wills also had his clothes torn, and was thrown heavily against a telegraph pole. The doctors claim that a few of his ribs are broken. The autoists did not stop, and, owing to the spot where the accident occurred being dark, the number could not be distinguished.

The injured men were hurried to the City Hospital.

New York, Aug. 4.—The federal grand jury, which has been probing the Government's complaint against the United Wireless Co., charging the use of the mails in furtherance of a scheme to defraud investors in the company's stock, turned in a number of true bills yesterday. MEN FORFEIT PENSIONS

G.T.R. States Plainly That the Privileges Are Suspended.

Process of Taking Striking Trainmen Back Into Company's Employ Goes Very Slowly and All May Not Be at Work For Three Months—Trouble at Bridgeburg Is Not Yet Over and Soldiers Are Kept Handy.

Montreal, Aug. 4.—Two debated points in the Grand Trunk settlement were cleared up yesterday. The company has stated plainly that the strikers return to work minus the pension fund privileges heretofore existing, and it is understood that the return of the men "as soon as possible" means within the next three months.

Reports received last night from various parts of the system indicate that very few men were re-engaged yesterday, but this can be explained to a considerable extent by the necessity of arranging new train schedules to meet the changed conditions. Then, of course, the freight service will take some time to right itself. In Montreal it is said that only one conductor of the fifty who struck was taken on yesterday, and he was given an extra train. A few of the old employes were taken back on the passenger service by Supt. Whittenberg at the Bonaventure Station yesterday morning, but not a single man was taken on at the Point St. Charles freight yards.

Vice-President Fitzhugh of the Grand Trunk, said officially yesterday evening that no one has been dismissed to give place to the men who went out on strike, yet he repeats that all the men will be taken back as soon as possible. A great many gathered at Bonaventure Station Tuesday evening, thinking that they would be taken on at once, but they were disappointed, and the same thing was repeated yesterday. While it is believed the company will eventually re-engage the men, yet there is considerable nervousness displayed at the prospect that many of them may be kept out for weeks without wages and without strike pay. It is believed that many will wander off into the service of other railways or into other employment.

More Trouble Feared.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Aug. 4.—So far as can be learned, all Grand Trunk men who went out on strike will be at work by to-night. Last night eight crews were on duty and regular day crews are expected to be called today. Special railway police still guard the local railway station, as well as the yards.

More strike trouble is feared at Bridgeburg, according to word received from there yesterday. Supt. Cunningham of the Grand Trunk met the strikers when, with their overalls and jumpers, they reached the Bridgeburg morning.

"You fellows," announced the superintendent, according to versions of the later, "have been dictating to me long enough; now, I'll do some dictating myself." Cunningham is the official who announced here that if any more cars were stoned the Grand Trunk would abandon Niagara Falls for passenger purposes and take all through trains around by Port Colborne and Bridgeburg.

After his meeting with the men Cunningham immediately communicated with Lt.-Col. Hill, commanding the troops on duty at Bridgeburg, and requested him not to send the soldiers home.

Nothing Doing at London.

London, Aug. 4.—None of the G.T.R. strikers have been re-engaged here, pending instructions from Montreal.

Delay at Brockville.

Brockville, Aug. 4.—Though the striking trainmen and conductors at this point have reported for duty, their services have not yet been accepted. Agent Hatton has not as yet received any instruction from headquarters to take them back. Freight traffic has been as a standstill here for the past 48 hours.

Two New Industries.

St. Catharines, Aug. 4.—The large stone building at Merritton recently purchased from the Canadian Colored Cotton Co. by the Canadian Haircloth Co. has been sold to a syndicate which will establish a rubber factory to employ 300 men. The factory will be outside of the present rubber merger. The haircloth factory will remain in the city, but will buy an adjoining factory and double its present capacity. The Merritton mill cost the rubber company $70,000.

Fell on Prongs of Fork.

Charlottetown, P.E.I., Aug. 4.—Frank Devine, aged 20, while engaged in hay-making at North Wiltshire, fell from the top of a load, landing upon the outspreading prongs of his hayfork, which entered below the right armpit, penetrating the lungs to a depth of seven inches.

Becalmed All Night.

Toronto, Aug. 4.—Becalmed in a sailboat, Eugene Rockwood of Long Branch, and Miss Whitten, a nurse at Mimico Asylum, spent the night on the lake. A gasoline launch sent out in search located them off Port Credit about ten o'clock yesterday morning.

Died of Blood Poisoning.

Kingston, Aug. 4.—John Marshall of Hamilton, visiting in the city, died Tuesday night from blood poisoning, caused by an injury to his hand while chipping castings.

Is making it Famous

When you use WONDER-SHINE, the dreaded half-day cleaning your silverware becomes but a pleasant half-hour.

Without any rubbing or scrubbing the tarnish disappears and the original brightness is restored, but neither your silver, your temper, nor your fingers will suffer as when you use "rub on" preparations of abrasive powder, or acid paste polishes.

WONDER-SHINE is not rubbed on, the silver is simply dipped in.

Like all great discoveries, the process is very simple.

CURRENT EVENTS.

The Canadian Customs Officials at Niagara Falls have seized an automobile for undervaluation. It was entered for duty at $1,500.00. Investigation proved it to have cost $2,268. The auto was seized and the owner was called upon to pay $2,268 plus 35 per cent. duty, less the duty already paid on the undervaluation of $1,500. To square things with the Canadian customs cost over $3,000 and the original price of the machine. It served him right. The man who could afford to buy a $2,268 automobile could afford to pay the duty.

A party of Irish-Americans have sailed from New York for Queenstown, Ireland, for the purpose of teaching Irish farmers how to use American agricultural machines. If the missionaries, says a contemporary, take note of what they see they may be able to bring back to America some knowledge of the methods by which old country farmers raise on old land about twice as much grain, etc., to the acre as do American farmers on almost new land. There is a chance for reciprocity in the situation

Excavations at the ancient necropolis of Belmonte, have revealed two tombs of female warriors, with war chariots over the remains, like the men's tombs recently discovered. This find shows that the existence of Amazon heroines is a historic realty.

A Surprise—The members of the Wesleyan Reform Union in session on the 1st of August, at Manchester, England, were astounded when the new President, Freeborough, declared it as his firm belief that the Roman Catholic Church was the most vital agency for the unification of Christendom. No other Church, he said, had the machinery, the wealth, the tradition and the ability to unite all the forces of the Christian Church, and if that great power could be moved to meet the needs of humanity as he saw them, Christ's coming would be realized by the present generation. The utterance was received with significant silence.

A planter in the Southern States having come to grief, his estate was purchased by his former overseer. The son wants, after his father's death, to buy back a painting that he prizes from its family associations. But its dark-skinned possessor will not part with it, greatly to his white kinsman's dismay, because he regarded it as an heirloom. Lynching may possibly secure it.

Earl Grey's departure for a trip to Hudson Bay is a notable event in the history of Canada. His Excellency's progress will be closely watched by the Canadians, not only because of the esteem in which they hold the Governor-General, but also because of the great advertisement which the journey will be for northern Canada.

Lightning started a forest fire of serious proportions on French Mountain, opposite Lake George village in the State of New York. Estimates of the burned area is 1,000 acres and the fire is still spreading.

The age of chicanery and humbug still exists. Sir Wilfrid Laurier told the people of Brandon the other day that he still was a democrat and to the hilt. A democrat who is a Knight Grand Cross of the Most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George should be an interesting personage in the eyes of democrats not to the hilt, who call each other by their front names abbreviated and ride in prairie buckboards and hay waggons. Sir Wilfrid, you are an arrant humbug.

As a result of the taxation of the landlords by Lloyd George, some of them are disposing of their holdings. The Duke of Bedford is one of the number. That nobleman has announced the sale of his Tavistock estate. If the heavy tax which is imposed upon land has the result of throwing into the markets the thousands of acres now reserved as game preserves, the Lloyd-George Tariff will not be an unmixed evil. It might be supposed that the tenants—all of whom are Liberals—would be pleased with the proposed change. But not so; these people are praying the Duke to hold on. If, however, there is to be another ownership they would like to be the proprietors. Here we have an illustration of the superiority of the Unionist scheme over that of Lloyd-George. Mr. George taxes landowners with a view to making them give up their possessions. The Unionists propose the purchase of the property for the tenants, with the aid of the State. In the case of Tavistock, the tenants, were the Unionist policy in force, would be able to buy the land in the form of a rental. This is a striking illustration between a Conservative and a Radical policy.

The Government at Ottawa has decided to admit healthy immigrants for railway work without insisting on their coming to the border with $25 in their possession. This is the most sensible thing done by the Laurier Government since it came into power. It should go further and allow all such immigrants to come into Canada. The country is starving for laborers.

Died in Toronto.

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Gilbert, formerly of Sidney Township, and widow of the late Abel Gilbert, died in Toronto yesterday. The remains will be brought here for interment tomorrow noon. Mrs Gilbert was a member of the Methodist church. The surviving members of the family are three sons, A. H. Gilbert, of New York; H. S. Gilbert, of Toronto, and E. W. Gilbert, of Buffalo, and two daughters, Mrs. Sarah Ackerman, of Palermo, Ont., and Mrs. Samuel Treverton, of Sidney.

How the Blind Read and Write.

Accompanying his annual letter in which he asks the readers of the Intelligencer to send him the names and postoffice addresses of any boys or girls, known to them, whose eye sight is so defective that they cannot attend the Public Schools with advantage, Principal Gardiner, of the Ontario Institution for the Education of the Blind at Brantford, sends us a card on which he has printed without ink, the letters used by the blind in their reading. These letters are composed of raised dots or points arranged in two horizontal rows and the combinations of points that have been contrived to represent the various literary, numeral and musical characters are most ingenious. Point letters are much easier to read with the fingers than line letters and blind children soon learn to read and write words, figures and music signs the writing being done with a steel stylus and a brass frame which they call a slate. The School for the Blind is maintained by the Ontario Government as a part of our free school system, under the supervision of the Minister of Education and the Principal will promptly answer any letter of inquiry concerning the school and its work.

A Yankee View.

(Buffalo Express.)

The settlement of the Grand Trunk strike was brought about by concessions on each side. The men gain a little more than was offered by the railroad company several weeks ago. It may be satisfactory to them, as their officers say, but the strike has cost them a lot of money and will cost many men their places and pensions. What concessions were made to them could have been made long ago, but it may well be wondered if the employees would have accepted the offer. The railroad company will be very glad to get most of its old employees back, judging from the character of the service since the strike started.

The Cheese Board

School Teacher Killed At Ivanhoe Yesterday.

Near the village of Ivanhoe, Huntingdon Township, yesterday afternoon a fatal runaway accident occurred, the victim being Mr. Gordon Lane, a school teacher who was engaged in teaching school at Lime Lake.

It appears that Mr. Lane was, in company with Mr. John Benson, a butcher, driving about the Township on business. Benson had occasion to alight from the vehicle and gave the lines to Mr. Lane. The latter, in attempting to turn the team around, did so rather quickly and sharply, with the result the vehicle was overturned, causing the animals to run away. Lane was dragged for some distance and left lying on a stone pile. The injuries he sustained were of such a serious nature as to cause his death about an hour later.

The unfortunate victim was 38 years of age and unmarried. His home is near St. Catharines. Mr. Lane was deservedly popular, not only with the children, but throughtout the neighborhood generally, and his untimely death is sincerely regretted

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

BASEBALL.

Stations Beat Ontarios in Fine Contest.

One of the best baseball games of the season in connection with the City League was that played yesterday afternoon on the Coleman Flat's diamond. The Ontarios and Grand Trunk teams were the competitors. For six innings it was a battle royal, and the large number of spectators present were keyed up to a high pitch. At the conclusion of the sixth innings the score was a tie, both teams having secured one run each.

In their half of the seventh and eighth innings the railway players succeeded in getting a man over the plate, which were all the runs secured. They were winners of the match by a score of 3 to 1. Sullivan for the winners and A. Moore for the losers, both pitched good ball and were well supported in the field. During the progress of the game but few errors were made and those were not of a costly nature. Mr. Wm. Smith umpired the game, and his decisions, except in two instances gave satisfaction. His decisions in the two instances mentioned appeared to be just to the majority of the spectators. He certainly endeavored to be fair and impartial. The score is an indication that a snappy game of ball was played. The line up of the teams was:

	G. T. R.	ONTARIOS
Pitcher	Sullivan	A. Moore
Catcher	Brown	Hagerman
1st Base	Young	Mills
2nd Base	Acton	Ketcheson
3rd Base	Smith	Wardrope
Short Stop	V. Brown	Wallace
Right Field	Doyle	McGie
Centre Field	Dunnings	E. Moore
Left Field	Oulten	Lavoie

The score by innings was as follows:
Ontarios ....010000000—1
G. T. R. ....00000111x—3

Ontarios Enter Protest

The Ontarios baseball team have entered a protest against yesterday's game, on the ground that the umpire's decisions in some cases were wrong and that Sullivan, the G. T. R. pitcher, on three or four occasions delivered balls when not in the box.

Game at Massassaga

An interesting ball game took place at Massassaga Park yesterday afternoon, between the S. M. A., of Belleville, and the T. A. C. of Trenton. The battery could not be beat, Jack Smith and Joseph Kelleher. It was a very exciting and fast game. The score was 3 to 5, when Tom Barrett, one of the league players here, came up to the bat and made a three bagger, resulting in the score being 6 to 5. At the end of the game the score was 8 to 7 in favor of the S. M. A. Mr. Retcards, of Trenton, was umpire; his decisions weren't very favorable.

S. M. A. line up:—J. Kelliher, pitcher; J. Smith, catcher; T. Barrett, 1st base; G. Wheeler 2nd base; B. McKenna, short stop; W. Callahan, 3rd base; H. McDonell, left field; G. Manahan, right field.

Dan Doran got a very bad finger in the fifth inning, but he finished the game.—Com.

A QUICK CHANGE.

The Sweet Taffy That Came After the Cold Roast.

"Say, Jen," said Katie, the brunette, with white side combs in her hair. "I see Mamie has bleached her hair again. Ain't it terrible?"

"Yes, perfectly awful!" replied Jennie. "She asked me if I would do it if I were she, and I said 'yes.' Don't she look perfectly dreadful—and it's getting streaked already. You could tell in a minute it was bleached, the roots are so dark."

"Sure. I noticed that!" responded Katie. "And, say, did you see the rag of a dress she had on yesterday? And it's fit—gracious! Looked perfectly dreadful, didn't it?"

"Perfectly dreadful," echoed Jennie.

"Well, she wanted a pattern, and I gave her the one of that dark blue silk I had three years ago," said Katie.

"You did?"

"Yes, I did."

"Oh!"

"And the hat she was wearing," continued Katie. "Did you get your optics on that?"

"Yes."

"Perfect sight, wasn't it?"

"Where did she get it?"

"Oh, down at the Moody's. I helped her pick it out," was Katie's reply. "Why, why, here comes Mamie now," she continued. "Hello, Mamie, you dear, sweet thing! How nice you look —too darling for anything!"

"Yes, indeed," added Jennie. "You do look perfectly charming. Say, let's all go and get some soda."

And the three friends walked away together.—New York Times.

Keeping the Best Mares.

Good, big drafts seem to attract the most attention, and yet the perfect draft horse is hard to find in the average rural community. Extra fine young horses are picked up at good prices by buyers who want such stuff, and the farmer gets along with less valuable animals. That is all right for geldings, but the best young mares ought to remain on the farm.

Baldheads Will be Scarce When Parisian Sage is Better Known

It Keeps Women's Hair Soft and Glossy Says Elizabeth House

No man likes to look older than he is. Every woman on earth absolutely abhors such a condition.

You may be 30 in years, but if you are baldheaded or grey, people will surely take you to be many years older, and you will be helpless to prevent.

Dandruff is the root of all hair evils. If it were not for the little destructive germs working with a persistency worthy of a better cause there would be no baldness.

Parisian Sage, America's greatest hair restorer, will keep you looking young and attractive.

It is guaranteed by J. V. Doyle to make hair grow and stop falling hair; to cure dandruff in two weeks; to stop itching of the scalp almost instantly.

Parisian Sage is the most invigorating, satisfying and pleasant hair dressing made; it makes the hair soft, luxuriant and handsome; it is especially praised by women who have beautiful hair. Parisian Sage is for sale by J. V. Doyle, at 50 cents a large bottle, or charges prepaid, from the Canadian makers, Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every bottle.

"I have only used one bottle of Parisian Sage, and, of course, I cannot praise it as much as if I had used more, but I find it a good tonic for the hair.

"It keeps the hair soft and glossy, the scalp clean, and makes the hair grow long, and stops falling hair.

"I recommend it to any one as a good tonic."—Elizabeth House, Manchester, Conn.

AN ANGRY MUSICIAN.

Amusing and Pathetic Story of Constant's Picture, "Too Late!"

An amusing and pathetic story is told of Benjamin Constant's first picture to attract attention. It was called "Too Late" and represented Fortune and Glory visiting an artist just as he had breathed his last. The artist was lying on the bed. The figure of Death stood near the door through which Fortune, carrying a box of money, and Glory, bearing laurels, had just entered.

The artist received many letters from those who had seen the painting. One was written by a professor of music, an old man, who expressed in touching words the emotion he had felt at the sight of the artist's work. He asked Constant to visit and talk to him about "Too Late."

The invitation was accepted, but as soon as the old professor saw the artist he uttered an ejaculation of surprise and anger. "Why, you are quite a youth!" he exclaimed. "I thought you were old and, like myself, had spent your life in vain endeavor to obtain recognition of your abilities. I conceived that picture to be the last despairing cry of a man as unfortunate as I am. I find you are quite young and your eyes are full of hope. You are a humbug, sir, and I request that you leave this house immediately!"

TRUE STANDARDS OF LIFE.

The Measure of a Man Is What He Is, Not What He Has.

It takes so long to learn how to live, so long to get even a glimmering of what life is for and what we ought to do with ours. We are so prone to live in the future, to fret ourselves about it. We are so busy yearning for the joys we imagine other people have and worrying about the trouble we imagine we are having that we make of the present, the one thing we are sure of, an endless regret.

And of all the follies the limit is to permit some one else to make our standards for us. Haven't we intelligence? Can't we think for ourselves? To want things we don't need, many we do not really care for, just because some one else has them and wouldn't understand if we didn't have them! To struggle and strain to make a show when all the neighbors know it is only a show and would respect us a heap more if we had the courage to be ourselves! Death's standards ought to be life's standards. Death does not ask how big a house we hail from, nor how many university degrees we have won, nor what is our bank account. Not what we have nor what we know, but what we are. And that's our measure of everybody but ourselves.—Erman J. Ridgway in Delineator.

A Riddle Making Epoch.

There have been epochs at which riddle making has been more especially in vogue, and such epochs would appear to occur at seasons of fresh intellectual awakening. Such an epoch there was at the first glimmering of new intellectual light in the second half of the seventh century. This was the age of Aldheim, bishop of Sherborne, the first in the roll of Anglo-Latin poets. He left a considerable number of enigmas in Latin hexameters. Aldheim died in 1709. Before his time there was a collection of Latin riddles that bore the name of Symphosius. Of this work the date is unknown. We only know that Aldheim used it, and we may infer that it was then a recent product. The riddles of Symphosius were uniform in shape, consisting each of three hexameter lines.—Cornhill Magazine.

Chaldean Tablets.

The clay tablets of Chaldea, probably the very earliest writing materials used by man, were of different sizes, the largest being flat and measuring 9 by 6½ inches, while the smallest were slightly convex and in some cases not more than an inch long. In the same ruins with the tablets have been found the glass lenses which were used by their readers. The writing was done, while the tablets were still soft, by a little iron tracer, not pointed, but triangular at the end. By slightly pressing this end on the soft moist clay the inscriptions were made. The tablets, having been inscribed on both sides and accurately numbered, were baked in ovens and stored away in the state libraries.—New York American.

A Mistake Somewhere.

"Is it true, Miss Gertie," he said, "that there are just two things a woman will jump at—a conclusion and a mouse?"

"No," she answered; "there is a third, Mr. Philip."

After thinking the matter over a few moments he tremblingly made her an offer, but she didn't jump at it. He was not the right man.

Two Men.

A feeble man can see the farms that are fenced and tilled, the houses that are built. The strong man sees the possible houses and farms. His eye makes estates as fast as the sun breeds clouds.—Emerson.

High Class.

Teacher—What class of birds does the hawk belong to, Tommy? Tommy—Birds of prey. Teacher—Now, Johnny, to what class does the quail belong? Johnny—Birds on toast.—Chicago News.

A Sure Cure.

"Doctor, my wife has lost her voice. What can I do about it?"

"Try getting home late some night."—Boston Transcript.

Bad Combinations.

Lambo—I have a pair of glasses at home that make me see double. Baldwin—Yes; I've seen you using them. One is a beer mug and the other is a whisky tumbler.—Chicago Tribune.

The Particular Sex.

A blind girl lately discarded her affianced lover because a confidential friend informed her that the young man squinted.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Lesson For the Pugsley Brodeur Type Of Politicians.

Mr. Fitzmaurice, of England, says a contemporary, is one of the three expert engineers appointed by the Dominion Government to supervise the planning of the Quebec Bridge at $1,000 per month each. For six months he found it necessary to be on the Mediterranean, so that he could not watch the bridge. Following the usual course of procedure the Department of Railways forwarded him six cheques for $1,000 each to cover the period of his absence.

Whereupon this English engineer staggered the Department by returning all six cheques — for $6,000 in all. He could not accept pay for work that he had not done, for the time that he had not been on the job which to a very remarkable extent distinguishes men of mark in Great Britain.

In the midst of the scandals at Ottawa this Old Country Engineer must appear a very Sir Galahad. His straightforward action stands out in distinct relief against the disclosures that have taken place in the Marine Department and the Printing Bureau. His high-minded conduct is a rebuke to Ministers of the Pugsley-Brodeur stamp, and to the army of party plunderers, who flourish under their fig tree.

OLD TIME HAT STAMPS.

Death Used to Be the Penalty In England For Forging Them.

Hats have in England been subject to very severe protective enactments. The blocked beaver hat, for instance, imported by Sir Walter Raleigh from the Low Countries, won its way so rapidly that in 1571 Queen Elizabeth passed an act to protect the making of "thrummed" caps, made from wool, for the advantage of the landed proprietors, whose sheep furnished the material. The statute provided that every male person "shall on Sundays and holidays wear on his head a cap of velvet wool made in England, penalty, 3s. 6d. per day.

About a century later the law, for which there is nothing too high or too low, having taxed men's shoes, turned its attention once more to their hats and soon put a check on all improvements in the trade by requiring every vender of hats to take out a license under a heavy penalty. Subsequently a stamp duty was imposed on all hats, which were officially marked inside where the maker's name now appears. The penalty for selling a hat without a stamp was £10, and the penalty for forging a hat stamp was death, whence, no doubt, the modern custom of the man who goes to church, sits down, looks into his hat—to read his maker's name!—London Chronicle.

An English Sanctuary.

Beverley minster, 180 miles north of London, is the shrine of St. John of Beverley, who died in the year 721. In 938 Athelstan, king of England, gave several privileges to the monastery, one being the privilege of sanctuary. This was not merely for man slaying; it was open to all wrongdoers except those who had been guilty of treason. For ordinary offenses, such as horse stealing, cattle stealing, being backward in accounts or being in receipt of suspected goods, a man came into sanctuary about a mile from the monastery or church. There used to be four crosses on the main roads leading to Beverley marking the limit of the area. In cases of manslaughter and murder it was not sufficient to be within one of these crosses. Before the fugitive could claim sanctuary he must enter the church and seat himself in a stone chair known as the "frid stool" or "freed chair." To this place many fled for refuge from all parts of the country.

Appropriate.

The worshipers in a certain chapel had some trouble to keep their faces straight a short time ago. During the service some commotion was caused by a gentleman who accidentally ignited a box of wax matches in his pocket and was trying to put them out, while his alarmed neighbors struggled equally hard to help him. The minister, being shortsighted, could not make out the reason of the disturbance, and, thinking to diplomatically cover the incident, he innocently said: "Brethren, there is a little noise going on. Until it is over let us sing 'Sometimes a Light Surprises.'"—London Answers.

A New Reason.

Annette, aged three, has two very talkative little sisters, and sometimes she finds it difficult to make herself heard at the table. One day when the others had been monopolizing the conversation longer than she liked Annette raised her finger with a warning gesture and whispered half aloud: "Everybody keep still. My foot's asleep."—Delineator.

A BANANA TREE.

The Fruit Grows Small End Up and Is Cut While Unripe.

Contrary to popular belief, bananas do not grow on the tree as they hang in the grocery, but with the small end of the fruit pointing upward—to all appearances upside down.

There is probably no other fruit of such universal consumption about which so little is known to the average person as the banana. Scarcely one man in a thousand not connected with the business knows what a banana tree looks like.

The fruit is never allowed to ripen on the tree, but is cut half or three-quarters "full"—that is, half to three-quarters developed, according to the distance it is to be shipped—and comes to maturity by feeding from the stalk, which contains a large amount of sap. Bananas cut in this way attain practically the same size as if allowed to remain on the tree, in which case the bunch becomes too much of a burden for its support and either falls or breaks the tree and ripens on the ground.

After the cutting the plantation is "cleaned," which merely consists of severing the standing trunks within a few feet of the ground, and a new tree comes forth from the remains of its predecessor, so that the fruit in all stages of growth is to be found at the same time, and the yield is continuous.

FREAKS OF A GENIUS.

The Man Who Smashed Glasses In a London Tavern.

One day a bulky, tall, pale faced gentleman with bushy, restless eyebrows entered a London tavern. The waiter did not ask him for his order, but immediately brought him a plate of bread and cheese and a glass of ale. Having consumed his lunch, the guest sat upright in his chair for awhile, leaning his hands on a heavy walking cane and staring blankly at the opposite wall as if in a dream. Of a sudden he gave a start. He seized the empty glass and dashed it to the floor with all his might, smashing it to atoms. He then reflected for a moment, laid a coin on the table, got up and left the inn without a word to any one. After his departure another guest had the curiosity to ask the waiter whether the gentleman who had just gone out was not wrong in his head. Quoth the waiter:

"Oh, no, sir! That's nothink unusual with 'im, sir. 'E's broke maybe a 'undred glasses since 'e's been a-comin' to this 'ouse. 'E don't seem to know it when 'e does it. 'E just gits a-thinkin' and seems to git hangry at somethink 'e's thinkin' about. It's the great Lord Macaulay, sir."—St. James' Gazette.

The Name Cuba.

Cuba is the name by which the island was originally known to the Lucayan Indians, who were with Columbus when he discovered it. One of its villages or cities was called by them Cubanacan, and it is reported that from the similarity of sounds Columbus, still supposing himself to be on the coast of Asia, imagined that this must be a city of Kublai Khan, the Tartar sovereign celebrated by Marco Polo. The survival of the original name for Cuba is a remarkable instance of persistence, as the island has been baptized and rebaptized many times since its European discovery. Columbus first called it Juana in honor of Prince John, the son of Ferdinand and Isabella. After Ferdinand's death it was called in his memory Fernandina. Subsequently this name was changed to Santiago, after St. James, the patron saint of Spain. Still later it was named Ave Maria, in honor of the Virgin Mary. But none of these names held, and the Indian name is still preserved.

Rice In the Orient.

Rice is kept for use in the orient in its husk, just like horse oats or unthrashed wheat. It is called "paddy" and is beaten or thrashed for daily use. But pure husked rice is too rough and unattractive looking for world markets, so it is polished in revolving cylinders with French chalk to make it pretty, pearly and smooth. But this robs it of its outer layer and most valuable food qualities. Polished rice is regarded as poison in Japan and is known to produce the dreadful epidemic disease beriberi in Japanese who live too exclusively on a rice diet and eating little or no meat.—Exchange.

Well Supplied.

An inveterate wit and punster asked the captain of a craft loaded with boards how he managed to get dinner on the passage. "Why," replied the skipper, "we always cook aboard."

"Cook a board, do you?" rejoined the wag. "Then I see you have been well provided with provisions this trip, at all events."—London Tit-Bits.

Getting Even.

Howard—When Dr. Incision operated on me he left a pair of surgical scissors in my anatomy. Can I sue him for damages? Lawyer—Better just send him a large bill for storage.—Life.

Malicious.

Youngleigh—Which is the better way to propose, orally or by letter? Cynicus—By letter, certainly. There's a chance that you might forget to mail it.—Exchange.

Why, Indeed?

She—Why does woman take a man's name when she marries him? He—Why does she take everything else he's got?

When death comes it is never our tenderness that we repent of, but our severity.—Eliot.

The damage and waste caused by smoke in the larger cities of the United States each year is estimated at $500,000,000 by an official of the Geological Survey, who says his figures are conservative.

DAINTY SANDWICHES.

How to Regale the Unexpected Tea Guest.

There is no edible more convenient and generally acceptable at little parties and picnics than the sandwich, but inexperienced persons make the mistake of using only heavy meats and one kind of bread. To be the delectable and comfortable morsel it should be the sandwich supplied for the gala occasion must express the utmost sophistication of taste, and the fillings and bread casings should be varied as much as possible.

White, gluten, graham, brown and rye bread are all used for the dainty bites given at smart functions. With cheese soda and salt biscuits are combined, and filling of whipped cream and nuts is put between sweet crackers. At a tea lately given there were even sandwiches of brown bread filled with a paste of baked beans, the whole made gay to the eye and fascinating to the palate with a shredded covering of pimentos. Red and green pepper sandwiches are common for beer suppers. These peppers are shredded fine and put with thin white bread cut in the slim two inch strip liked by the masculine eater.

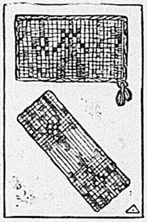
At the afternoon teas patronized by women the fixy sandwich is liked—the tiny triangle of wafer-thin white bread with a filling of mayonnaise on lettuce or the triangle of crisp toast holding a light spread of foie gras.

Sardines, anchovies, shredded chicken and broiled bacon go especially well with toast casings for substantial sandwiches, and if a dust of cayenne pepper and a squeeze of lemon juice are added after the salt the taste of these sandwiches will be delicious. In the making of all fish and meat sandwiches the seasoning counts greatly, and if the taste is not just right at first the clever cook will know how to add this or that thing until it is perfect.

For example, one housekeeper who found herself called upon unexpectedly to regale some guests one evening, having nothing else in the house, made sandwiches of some bits of chicken dressing, warmed up for the occasion, with a pinch of curry added. Another housekeeper—she was a bride, by the way—grabbed up a box of marshmallows after the handshaking and, leaving hubby to do the honors, returned from the kitchen presently with these delectable sweets toasted and put between some thin sweet buns she had made for supper. A pinch of homemade grape jelly put beside the softened candy gave the taste sublime.

Design to Interest Expert With Needle.

Ever since the days when the working of a sampler was regarded as the test of proficiency in needlecraft the woman with a penchant for "fancy work" has always looked with favor upon sample stitchery, though it may have been known to her under another name.



LATEST EMBROIDERY.

A fresh instance of the attraction that this old new work possesses for the modern devotee of the needle is seen in some pillow tops and bureau scarfs that have lately appeared. They are fashioned from a fine quality of canvas in natural tone, with vertical stripe of black. The needlewoman's skill is brought into play in the filling in of the spaces between the stripes in bright tones, reminiscent of the orient. The work is executed according to prescribed rules, and for the summer cottage or bungalow cushions and scarfs of this type are very effective when a gay color note is desired in the furnishings.

Raising Own Vegetables.

Any back yard 40 by 50 feet with decent soil can be made to yield enough summer vegetables to supply a family of six.

Thousands of people living in or near country towns buy all their vegetables a day or two old, generally wilted and stale, when they could easily raise all they need and have them fresh every day.

Do not be afraid to thin out the plants. It looks like a waste to pull up half the plants when they are growing nicely, but it pays. Transplanting requires the greatest care to make the work successful. Tender plants are easily injured by much handling, lack of water or too much hot sun.

Poultry house manure is a wonderful thing for the garden, but it should not be applied in the hill or it will burn the roots of the plants.

Lima beans do not require a very rich soil and are easily grown. Plant more of them.

Taking one year with another, onions will prove a most profitable crop. They are in demand in the markets every month in the year.

Electric lamps are inserted in the floors of passenger elevators so a person entering a car at night will know just where he is to step. The light is switched on or off automatically as a car stops at or leaves a floor.

Horse Notes.

The best customers want horses that have style, good appearance, that stand up, that are bright, sleek and attractive.

The floor of the hayloft should be seed and dust tight. Horses are often injured by seeds and dirt falling into their ears and eyes.

There is no kind of animal breeding that will pay better than the breeding of horses, but horses that will sell, not dunghills or misfits.

Bolting of food causes indigestion and consequently loss of health. Guard against irregular feeding. It tends to make horses bolt their food.

The hay usually given to horses to supplement the pasture is of very poor quality, either woody or moldy, and this results in a considerable loss.

Be Clean About the Dairy.

According to a successful dairyman, the presence of dirt in milk indicates careless and uncleanly methods in production and handling. Another common defect is off flavored milk, which may be due to a variety of causes, as feeding strong flavored foods, such as turnips, garlic, etc.; second, to feeding certain feeds to excess, as, for example, silage; third, to odors of silage or manure in the stable; fourth, to particles of manure and dirt getting into the milk, and, fifth, to not properly rinsing the bottles after using washing powders. Dairymen, as a rule, have been quick to see these defects when pointed out and to appreciate the importance from a business standpoint of producing milk as nearly perfect as possible.

Dislikes Happy Endings.

A remarkable fact concerning "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," which Mr. Thomas Hardy, the famous novelist, who recently celebrated his seventieth birthday, wrote twenty years ago, is that many people sent him letters imploring him to reconstruct the story, so as to make the ending a happy one. But Mr. Hardy was never a believer in the "living-happily-ever-after" ending to a novel. He says that the unreality of such methods irritates him, and he refused to alter his story one iota. Mr. Hardy still works diligently, and spends all the morning writing in his room. No man dislikes social prominence more, and he is inaccessible to any but his most intimate friends. Mr. Hardy considers that for a writer to enter into a constantly increasing round of social pleasures and gaieties is fatal. He should be content with the life which he was leading when he first made his mark.

An Unassuming Lord.

What people like about Lord Selborne, the late High Commissioner of South Africa, who has lately returned to this country, is his total lack of "side." In his early days Lord Selborne did a great deal of work amongst the East end poor. "The first time I ever saw Lord Selborne," said a well-known personage, "I took him for an East end curate in a billycock hat." His father, the first Lord Selborne, who was one of the greatest lawyers of the Victorian age, once wrote of his son, "He has not hitherto been wanting, and I trust never will be, in pluck and resolution to do his duty according to his lights." The father's words have been more than justified.

The apple was always a great temptation—green apples have their little victims yet.

The safest and surest remedy we know of is

Nyal's

Wild Strawberry Compound

Its direct antiseptic action on the bowels overcomes the "green apple poison"—soothes irriated parts and checks dysentery gently. It contains no harmful opiates and being NYAL'S we can heartily recommend it.

Anything you buy with the name Nyal's Remedies will give you entire satisfaction.

A King's Coin Collection.

Victor Emmanuel is considered, and rightly so, an exceedingly clever numismatist. A rather interesting story is told of the manner in which the king, while still little more than a child, acquired a taste for the science of numismatics. One day he received a soldo bearing the head of Pope Pius IX. A little later, finding another, he added it to the first, and in this way he collected fifteen. Meanwhile his father, King Humbert, presented him with about sixty pieces of old copper money, and thus was formed the nucleus of his collection.—McClure's Magazine.

BOYCOTT ON U. S. GOODS.

Chinese Merchants Take Revenge For Treatment at 'Frisco.

Canton, China, Aug. 4.—A boycott on American lines to the one which several years ago caused millions of dollars' damage to American trade in China, has been proclaimed here, in response to complaints of the treatment of Chinese in America.

The specific cause of complaint on this occasion is the objection of the Chinese of San Francisco to the detention sheds on Angel Island in San Francisco Bay, which they have been endeavoring for some time to have removed to San Francisco itself, in order to secure better treatment for arriving Chinese.

The boycott is proclaimed by the Chinese Self-Government Society of Canton, an organization conducting a propaganda for "China for the Chinese" and for Government reform to which Chinese in San Francisco appeal by letter.

An appeal has been issued to Chinese abroad, asking them to co-operate in the boycott.

Rammed Wooden Vessel.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 4.—The steel steamer Chippewa rammed the old wooden steamer Albion off Westpoint, north of the entrance to Seattle Harbor early yesterday.

The Chippewa was returning to Seattle from Everett after carrying an excursion party to Vancouver, B.C., and back, and had no passengers.

Ten passengers bound for Everett were aboard the Albion, but as far as known, none of them were injured. The hull of the wooden vessel was pierced by the bow of the heavier steamer and the two were wedged tightly together. The passengers on the Albion, which will likely be a total loss, were transferred to the Chippewa.

Reports indicate that the damage to the Chippewa is not serious. The Chippewa is a steel steamer of 996 tons. She was built at Toledo, Ohio, in 1900, and is owned by the Puget Sound Navigation Co.

Sovereignty v. Treaty Rights.

London, Aug. 4.—At The Hague fisheries conference yesterday, Elihu Root, replying for the United States, said that the importance of the dispute, which without an arbitration tribunal could previously only have been decided by war, justified long speeches made with respect to the first question, concerning the right of Great Britain to regulate the fisheries carried on by Americans. Mr. Root declared that Britain looked upon this question from the standpoint of her sovereignty, while the United States regarded it from the viewpoint of the right accorded her by treaty. America, he said, recognized British sovereignty, but opposed any regulations that were incompatable with the treaty of 1818.

Opposition to Power Company.

St. Catharines, Aug. 4.—The bylaw granting a franchise to the Ontario Power Co. to pole the streets and distribute and sell electric energy throughout the city will not come into effect for a while. John S. Campbell, barrister, on behalf of a client, has written to the council protesting on on account of grave irregularities in the vote, and threatening to ask for an injunction and investigation into the whole vote if the measure is finally passed. It is believed that the Cataract Co. is behind the opposition to the bylaw.

Appointments to "Rainbow."

London, Aug. 4.—The following appointments have been made to the Rainbow: J. D. Stewart, in command on commission, Aug. 4; Lieuts. A. E. D. Moore, R.H.C., Halifax; R. V. Holt, R. T. Edwards; engineer commander, T. J. Morgan; engineer lieutenant, R. H. M. Bury; artificer engineer, R. W. Hood; staff paymaster, R. A. Jenkins; surgeon, T. A. Smyth, gunners, Mock and Pehan.

Want Reduced Rates.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—The filing of a petition with the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington, asking that body to investigate the tariffs and net revenue of express companies, by commercial organizations throughout the country, was made known yesterday. The petition is signed by 124 associations of commerce and commercial clubs who want a considerable reduction in express rates.

The Reward of Bravery.

London, Aug. 4.—King George, at Marlborough House Tuesday, in the presence of the Home Secretary and other Government officials, decorated 62 miners for conspicuous gallantry in saving, or attempting to save, life in the recent colliery disasters, presenting them with King Edward medals. Nine seamen also received medals for conspicuous gallantry in saving life at sea.

Two Hundred Fishermen Drowned.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 4.—Under the direction of the military authorities, rescue work was yesterday taken up on the River Amell Amoor, near Nicolaiesvk, where 200 fishermen are known to have been drowned when a typhoon wrecked their boats Tuesday. It is feared that the death list will exceed that number.

Explosion Result of Carelessness.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 4.—The Russian admiralty yesterday ordered a rigid investigation into the torpedo boat explosion at Kronstadt Tuesday, in which six sailors were killed and nearly a score injured. It is hinted that the explosion resulted from carelessness on the part of the crew.

A Reign of Terror.

Bonnay, Fla., Aug. 4.—A reign of terror exists in the northwestern section of Holmes County, owing to the determination of the whites, by a wholesale lynching of negroes, to avenge the murder of Bessie Morrison, a 14-year-old white girl.

Appointed Science Master.

Kingston, Aug. 4.—S. H. Henry, M.A., a graduate of Queen's University, has been appointed assistant science master in Collegiate Institute.

In several eastern cities street cars are being tried that have a rail running through the center for standing passengers to grasp instead of the usual straps. More persons can be carried than in the customary manner and at greater comfort.

WORKBAG AS A PRIZE.

It's Made of Chiffon and Is Very Dainty.

Have you seen the new chiffon workbags? They are novel, good looking and, more surprising yet, wear better than do silk ones. A girl has given one hard use for a year and a half, and it is still in good condition.

To make such a bag for a prize at a bridge party cut an oval bottom of stiff cardboard, dimensions 11 by 7 inches, with rounding ends. If the board is heavy enough one piece will answer. Generally two ovals are better. Cover first with cotton batting, then with white satin, and overcast the edges neatly together. Put under a weight to prevent warping.

The top is made from white chiffon over a color. Three-quarters of a yard of each color is required. Cut the pieces across from selvage to selvage and sew into the seams at each end.

Put the colored chiffon underneath and turn in the edge at the top to the depth of a quarter of an inch. Turn the bottom up into a quarter inch hem to give more body for the overcasting. Selvage is placed to selvage, but the chiffons are not sewed together.

Two inches from the top run an inch wide casing, sewed by hand, in silk to match the lining. Leave an opening through the selvage of white chiffon to insert drawstrings of inch wide double faced white satin ribbon. To open the bag to its full extent allow five yards of ribbon cut into two yard lengths.

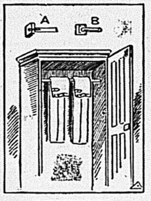
Overcast the bottom of the bag to the oval bottom and finish the top with half inch white cluny or valenciennes lace.

For a card party of half a dozen tables such bags would form handsome prizes if each one were made up in a different color, such as lavender and white, yellow and white, green, pink, blue and coral color, with ribbon and outer layer white.

Chiffon is used rather than chiffon cloth, but the latter will probably wear better, though not so fluffy. In selecting the chiffon get a good quality and make sure that both are the same width, as it simplifies the joining and lets the parts fall in more graceful folds when drawn up.

A Trouser Rail.

A handy contrivance that may be fitted up in a bedroom cupboard is illustrated here, and it will be found a great convenience and save considerable time and trouble. Trousers, like other garments, cannot well be hung upon pegs in a closet and as a rule have to be carefully folded and placed in a drawer if they are to be kept in shape and in good condition. This serves very well for those clothes that are not continually in use, but for garments that are often required it is an excellent plan to fix a rail across the top of a closet, over which the trousers may be folded and hung and kept in shape and free from dust and dirt.



SAVING CLOSET ROOM.

In an ordinary closet the rail may be easily fixed, and an old broom handle may be used for the purpose. It must, of course, be cut to fit across the inside of the cupboard, and then two screws run through the sides of the closet (the heads of the screws can be painted and not be visible) and into the ends of the rail will hold it firmly in its place, and the trousers may be hung over it in the manner shown in the picture and be ready at hand whenever they are required.

In a closet that is perhaps made in a recess in the wall it is a little more difficult to fix up a bar, but it may be done in the manner shown in the two small diagrams at the top of the sketch. A square block of wood should be screwed on to either end of the rail. The bar can then be fitted into its place and nails run through the block of wood and into the wall. A glance at the diagram will explain this.

A New Food Fad.

Are you drinking sour milk?

"Certainly not. That is food for pigs, not human beings," say you.

Professor Metchinkoff of Paris, with Dr. Osler to back him, says differently. These gentlemen declare drinking of sour milk will prolong life and cite the longevity of the people of eastern Europe, who live largely on this diet, to back them.

So every one is drinking sour milk, for life is a precious commodity, and the latest means of achieving it is cheap and convenient.

Like all other fads, moderation is desirable. An exclusive diet of sour milk is not to be advised. Indeed, do not start it without consulting your physician, as it may be just the food you should not take under any circumstances.

This diet is supposed to be beneficial to the kidneys and the stomach and to act as a sort of tonic.

In Nuremburg, Germany, there still are in use more than 1700 houses that were built in the sixteenth century and more than 3500 erected in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

CARING FOR UNRULY COWS.

When a cow has been raised on the farm and turns out unruly the owner, generally speaking, has but himself to blame, but as many farmers purchase cows that are troublesome in one way or another a hint or two by an expert dairyman regarding such animals may prove of interest.

Some cows are confirmed ramblers and cannot be turned by any ordinary fence. In a case of this kind the vice is due to the animal not having been properly restricted in her wanderings while she was growing to maturity, and there seems to be no cure for the vice. A preventive measure is to equip the animal with a collar and swinging pole, but the best plan is to sell her at the first convenient opportunity.

A cow that kicks while being milked is not beloved of the milker, and such a practice is a sign that more time and patience should have been expended upon her when she first came down to milk. It depends somewhat upon the individuality of the cow and how long she has thus misbehaved herself whether her manners can be improved or not. Try being gentle with her and coax rather than force her to stand still, and frequently in the course of time tying the legs may be dispensed with.

Many cows that do not kick have the undesirable habit of being continually upon the move while being milked, which is, of course, very annoying to the milker. This awkward habit is always due to nervousness and is nearly always the result of having been ill treated at one time or another. Petting the animal somewhat and milking quietly and calmly will frequently effect a cure, but it may be some time before the habit can be entirely dropped.

Some cows will kick promptly at any one approaching them in the stall. This vice may occasionally be cured by a change of stall that permits of the animal being approached from the contrary side. If such a move does not cure, try persistent kindness for a month or so, and if this does not bring forth improvement see if sterner measures have any effect. If none of these things answer, the best must be made of a bad bargain, and it would be well to get rid of the animal when the opportunity offers.

EXCELLENT HEAD STUDY.
[By courtesy of Iowa State college.]

A very awkward habit some cows acquire is that of tossing the head just as food is being placed in the manger, and unless the attendant is very wary one of the horns, if the cow has horns, may easily catch him upon the face. Some cows that will thus treat strangers will not continue the practice when properly used by the attendant, and others will treat everybody alike. One way of aiding in effecting a cure is for the attendant to fill his mouth with water before going up to the animal's head and if she misbehaves herself to squirt out the water upon her head.

A by no means dangerous habit, but one that is very annoying to the woman when work is being done at high pressure, is that of not standing properly when it is desired to go up alongside the animal. The legs of the animal should never be hit with a stick or with a fork or other tool that may be in hand, as this is liable to start the animal kicking. Indeed, hitting the legs with a fork or other tool is the usual cause of cows' kicking.

Dehorning the Calves.

One of the most humane ways for removing horns on calves is by means of caustic potash. Get one or more sticks of caustic potash and preserve it in a tightly corked bottle. One stick will serve to dehorn a number of calves. Apply this potash as soon as the buttonlike horns can be felt on the calf, which is usually when it is three or four days old. To apply the potash remove the hair about the horn close to the skin, moisten the potash slightly and rub over the skin which covers the point of the horns until the skin is white. It is not necessary to rub the skin until blood comes, as is often advised, as it causes unnecessary soreness. Wrap the caustic in heavy paper to protect the hands of the operator. Do not moisten the caustic too much so that the liquid will run down the sides of the calf's head, for this will cause unnecessary pain. Fasten the head securely and apply the potash only on the spot over the horns.

When the Hogs Gnaw Pens.

When the hogs get to gnawing the woodwork of their pens you may be sure they need something different to gnaw from what you are feeding them. Look into it and see that you are giving them variety enough.

The Australian government is considering plans for a transcontinental railway from east to west, to develop inaccessible country, to expedite the mails and for military purposes.

The Broken Trust

"It is my place," she said gently; "had I been really your wife, it would have been for better or worse; let it be so now. Oh, Paul, do you not know I love you? I have never loved any one else—I shall love you until I die — let my place be here by your side. I would rather be near you even now than sit a crowned queen by a king's side. You believe me, do you not?"

He murmured something that he was all unworthy, but she hushed him, her face glowing with a light that did not come from earth.

"Let me comfort you," she said; "this is a dark hour. Oh, remember when all other faces turn coldly from you—when all other hearts seem closed against you — remember, I live for you — remember, my heart is a sanctuary of rest and refuge."

He let the tender arms clasp themselves more tightly around him; he let the fair face rest more lovingly against his; he had trampled upon her heart and broken it; but he could not fling the gentle hands from him.

"It must have been a terrible dream, dear," she continued gently; "a dreadful madness that possessed you. You would have told, even had they never discovered it. Your own true, better nature would have awakened in time. It seems to me it is not too late yet to live it down. I do not want to make light of your terrible sin, but while you repent do not despair. Let me teach you—let me help you, live it down.

But he turned from her with a despairing cry.

"It is too late, Esther, too late! I could not go back to the old life after tasting this. I could never bear poverty, and work, and shame, and sordid misery again. I laid all on this one stroke and lost."

Bue she would not be repulsed—she would not let him speak so mournfully.

"Poverty and hard work are not so hard to bear," she said. "You are young and strong; life is all before you; you can redeem the past if you will."

"No," he cried again, "it is too late!"

She knelt again by his side; something in the despairing face startled her. She tried to draw him nearer to her to soothe and caress him; as she would have done a child.

"You can go to some new world," she said. "You need not stay here. In another land men will not look coldly upon you; there may be a long, honorable life before you yet, and, oh! Paul, let me share it — let me go with you — I can comfort you best."

He was touched at last by her self devotion and her undying love. Something of the old gentleness came to his face.

"Esther," he said, "you are very good — too good for me. I have brought you nothing but sorrow and shame."

"I have forgotten it all. I shall never remember anything except that I bade Paul Lynne farewell, and have found him again. You will soon forget this miserable, golden dream, and be your own self again — brave and true."

"That self died in the hut near Otana," he said mournfully, "and can never live again. I cannot do it Esther. I do not repent as good people use the word. I am sorry I did it but I do not repent. I can never look my fellow man in the face again yet I am not humbled in my sin."

She spoke sweet, womanly words to him — words of hope, of mercy of pardon, of love — but they fell on deafened ears. He listened without replying, his face never losing its look of rigid, blank despair. She liked to remember afterward how he turned to her and clasped her in his arm, saying:

"Eshter, I sinned against the dead man, and against his heir, but I have sinned more cruelly against you than any one else. Will you say you forgive me? No man ever tortured a loving woman as I have tortured you."

THEY WANT NEW TARIFF

The Western Farmers Present Memorial to the Premier.

Dr. Smith, in Behalf of Grain Growers at Weyburn, Sask., Declares That High Protection Is a System of Tribute Levied by Manufacturers on Their Fellows and Makes For Dishonesty.

Weyburn, Sask., Aug. 4.—The memorial on the tariff, presented to Sir Wilfrid yesterday by the grain growers of southern Saskatchewan, still maintains a strong tone of objection to the tariff in general, and a duty on agricultural implements in particular.

Dr. Smith, who spoke to the memorial, claimed that Sir John A. Macdonald introduced the word protection in lieu of the words "Thief and robber." Mr. Smith declared that manufacturers, under the protective system, not only enjoyed the profits of his own labor, but also secured a portion of the profits of the other man's labor. In the case of the farmer, he asked, was it not a crime to pass such a law? If it was wrong for the individual to rob, it was wrong to make robbery legal. "Protection is a great wrong. It makes nations dishonest with one another. It makes individuals selfish and dishonest. It teaches the mischievous principal that we are to expect to receive value without giving value in return."

If it was wrong for the Conservative Government to pass the law, is it not also wrong for the Liberal Government to perpetuate the same law?

Continuing, Mr. Smith commended the course adopted by Sir Wilfrid, in not seeking for reciprocity at Washington, but, now that President Taft had taken a step towards securing closer trade relations between the two countries, they hoped he would be able to bring about some equitable arrangement. They regarded the duty on agricultural implements as a special tax upon the farmer.

The grain growers were willing to pay their share towards the revenue of the country, and Mr. Smith asserted that a revenue tariff provides incidental protection, and should be sufficient to satisfy the most exacting. The manufacturer asked protection to infant industries, and afterwards as a matter of vested rights.

"If we are free men, treat us as such. If we are slaves, we ask freedom. If this be refused, we demand it. Our resources are not exhausted."

But For the Women.

Madrid, Aug. 4.—Field Marshal Lopez Dominguez, who is ex-president of the Senate, and ex-Premier, said yesterday that he would support Premier Canalejas in his struggle for religious reforms, but he doubted the success of the movement, on account of the immense power of the clergy and their influence over the women who, he declared, are compelled under the domination of their confessors.

"The openness with which Premier Canalejas is conducting the campaign," said the field marshal, "is one of the best features of the situation. He wants Spain and the world to know what he is doing. If he succeeds he will have rendered an immense service to Spain."

Ready For Trouble.

San Sebastian, Aug. 4.—Twenty thousand soldiers are being quietly mobilized in this city to prevent any disturbances at the big Catholic demonstration planned for next Sunday. It is expected that at least 150,000 Catholics will take part in the protest against the Government's action toward the Vatican.

BRINGING EWES AROUND.

First Year Very Troublesome In Life of Animals.

Having been an extensive grower of wool and mutton for twenty years, says a well known shepherd, I will give some experience and observations I have had in developing the ewe lambs, by which I trust some one will be benefited.

Every year while buying a few native lambs for feeding purposes I have an opportunity to observe what a great many flock owners are doing with their ewe lambs, and I am sorry to say that this part of the flock is sorely neglected in altogether too many instances.

The first year is the critical period in the life of the ewe lambs, and if they are improperly fed and cared for but little improvement can be effected in the flock. The impression is carried by many farmers that it is not important to force the ewe lambs along the first year, as they have two seasons to come to maturity. I consider this a very wrong impression of the situation and one that has an important bearing upon the improvement of the flock.

FEEDING SHEEP BY HAND.

Experience has taught me that much cheaper gains can be made and much more rapidly in the first year of the lamb's growth than during any period thereafter. Ewe lambs that are allowed to stop growing the first year never regain normal condition and, despite good breeding, they fail to transmit to their offspring the desirable qualities found in their parents.

I have observed ewe lambs in my own flocks that, because of insufficient nourishment during the suckling period, failed to make the growth they should have made. Because of the good breeding behind these lambs I retained some of them to replenish my flock. I have found that, with one or two exceptions out of a large number of instances, I have never secured a lamb from these that was worth retaining for breeding purposes.

I am very confident that the first year of life determines to a large extent the future usefulness of the ewe lamb. A ewe that has been full grown will withstand neglect and hardship and bring forth well developed offspring. But if she has been poorly cared for during her early life the reverse is invariably the result.

A female of any kind must have a strong, healthy system, with vigorous constitution to withstand the natural functions of reproduction. These characteristics come into natural life during early development and not as the animal ages.

Therefore if one wants his ewe lambs to grow into strong, healthy and vigorous breeding stock he must begin feeding them as soon as he can get them to partake of food other than that furnished by the dam. This feed should contain the elements that will produce bone and muscle and be given in troughs clean and pure.

Cholera Preventive.

Careful and persistent attention to general preventive measures, such as quarantine, disinfection, proper feeding, etc., on the part of farmers generally would no doubt result in a material reduction in the yearly losses from hog cholera, and the importance of observing these precautions cannot be overestimated.

THE DAIRYMAN

Dried Beet Pulp as Feed.

Dried beet pulp is coming to be a great dairy feed. It's only a short time since it was considered a waste product.

Give Cow a Vacation.

A cow should have at least six weeks' vacation between milking periods. If she is milked continually she will not last long.

Cleaning the Udder Well.

The cow's udder should be well washed and dried with a coarse cloth before milking, and the milker's hands should be washed after every cow.

Making Butter.

Butter to be graded as extra must have a quick, fine and fresh flavor. Its body must be good and uniform. The color must be good for the season when made, properly salted, neither gritty nor fat.

Skimmilk and Cream.

Some men that own separators and have good herds of cows report much profit in selling cream to one class of customers and skimmilk to another set. Sometimes the same customers want both the cream and skimmilk. On account of the separation they pay more for each.

A familiar shaving paste known as cream of almonds is made by melting one part of caustic potash into three parts of lard with enough essence of almonds added to give it a flavor.

RATIONS FOR THE CALF.

Feeding the Youngsters Too Early May Prove Injurious.

It is well to leave the calf by itself for at least twelve hours and, in case the calf has run with its mother for several days, possibly twenty-four hours. Attempts to feed the calf earlier than this usually do the calf no good and may injure the feeder's temper. Such is the opinion of an authority on dairy matters. If the calf's muzzle is held in the milk and its mouth pried open once so that it tastes the milk it will drink without the feeder being obliged to place his hand in the milk and allow the calf to suck his finger.

The calf is unable to handle hay or grain until it is a week or ten days old. During this period it is not wise to try to feed skimmilk. At first the whole milk should be fed three times a day—four pounds in the morning, two pounds at noon and four pounds at night—at blood temperature. In about a week or ten days the calf can be fed twice daily. During this time the allowance of whole milk can be gradually increased to about twelve pounds. This amount depends somewhat on its ability to handle increased quantities.

The stomach of the young calf is very delicate, and all changes should be made gradually. When about two weeks the calf, if a strong, vigorous one, can be gradually changed to skimmilk. During the first day decrease the amount of whole milk one pound and add one pound of skimmilk, and so on each day until the change is complete. Previous to this the calf should have a little grain (corn or Kaffir corn meal or a little mixture of both) placed in its mouth immediately after drinking its milk. In this way it gets a taste of the grain and will soon go to the feed boxes and eat with a relish.

After the change to skimmilk is completed the amount may be gradually increased as fast as the calf is able to consume it without scouring. Care must be taken not to increase too rapidly. The calf is a greedy animal and will appear more hungry after drinking its milk than before, and if given too much it will soon be on the sick list. The milk fed should be weighed or measured at each feeding. Our experience has been that a calf three to five weeks of age can be fed from ten to twelve pounds daily, from seven to eight weeks old fourteen to sixteen pounds, and when three to five months of age can be fed eighteen to twenty pounds of milk. The milk should always be fed warm and sweet.

FOR CHURNING RESULTS.

Close Attention Always Necessary to Realize the Best.

There can be no definite rule laid down as to the temperature at which the cream should be churned, as different creams require different temperatures. The fat is in the form of microscopic globules, and they must have a certain degree of softness if they are to unite.

When the cream enters the churn that is properly ripened and contains 26 to 30 per cent fat the temperature should be such that the cream will churn in thirty to forty-five minutes. This will give an exhaustive churning and leave the butter in a condition in which it can be easily handled without injuring the texture.

Before putting the cream in the churn the churn should be thoroughly scalded and as thoroughly chilled with cold water. The advantage of this is that it will freshen the churn and fill the pores in the wood, so that the cream and butter will not stick to it.

The outside temperature of the churning room should be as nearly as possible the same as the churning temperature. If it is warm the cream will warm up rapidly and the butter will likely be soft and will require more washing to remove the buttermilk.

It is useless to lower the cream rapidly to the churning point just before churning. It should be there at least two hours before churning. The reason for this is that fat is a slow conductor of the heat, and, although the serum has cooled and the thermometer reads the right temperature, the fat has not actually reached it, and the results would be the same as if churned at an actually higher degree.

THE HORSEMAN

Don't Whip or Jerk the Horse.

It is a shame to whip or jerk a skittish horse that has shied or been frightened by an unusual obstacle. Soothe him rather than try to unnerve him.

Wash For Horse Lice.

For lice on horses take half a pint of kerosene in two gallons of water and wash the horse with this twice, with an interval of two or three days between the applications.

Ruining a Spirited Animal.

A spirited horse will in the end be made slow and spiritless by constant nagging, twitching of lines, peevish urging and other wearing processes that fretful drivers practice.

Excellence of Hay.

A colt or horse will live and develop on good hay alone, but he will thrive better upon a two-thirds ration of hay and the rest straw. A ration of oats given with these will be all the better.

Rolling Scratching Horses.

After a hard day's work in the field the horses will enjoy a few moments to roll in the yard about the straw pile. Your horses will scratch themselves more in five minutes by rolling than you can do with a currycomb in thirty minutes.

A mummy found in Egypt and presented to the English Royal College of Surgeons in 1822 recently was decided by experts to be the oldest known, dating from about 3000 B. C.

MANY KINDS OF FLEAS.

About 400 Different Species Are Known to Naturalists.

One of the first naturalists who devoted themselves to watching fleas, with such microscopes as were then available, was Leeuwenhoek, a Dutchman, who lived at the end of the seventeenth century. Leeuwenhoek discovered that a small mite fed on the flea, and it was this discovery which inspired Swift's familiar lines:

So, naturalists observe, a flea
Hath smaller fleas that on him prey,
And these have smaller still to bite 'em,
And so proceed ad infinitum.

The flea's parasite, however, to be accurate, is not another flea or even another insect, but is a mite classed among the sarcoptidae. Linnaeus, writing in 1758, described only two species of flea. The first, which was the human flea, he rightly named Pulex irritans. The second was the chigoe of hot countries. To this, on account of its burrowing habit, he gave the name of Pulex penetrans. At the present day about 400 different species of fleas have been described and named by the small band of scientific men who have devoted themselves to their study. Most of these have been discovered within quite recent years, so it is probable that many new forms and varieties will be collected and observed.—Harold Russell in London National Review.

MOTORING COMFORT.

Auto Tent Used by American at Derby Race.

Motoring is admittedly a keen sharpener of the appetite, and many and varied are the conveniences and contrivances evolved by ingenious minds for the satisfactory serving of refreshments while on tour and beyond the reach of a satisfactory hostelry. The elaborately fitted up auto basket, which was hailed as a boon when it made its first appearance a few seasons ago, was simply an indication of what the purveyor to the comfort of the autoist could do when he got fairly started.

Year by year auto baskets and hampers have been improved until now the best are models of completeness and compactness. And there is not the slightest excuse for the tourist going hungry or having to subsist upon food he or she does not like, for the materials for a first class meal may be easily carried even on a moderate sized car. For those who do not want to go to the trouble of making tea or coffee on the trip there are all sorts of thermos receptacles obtainable.

A MEAL BY THE WAYSIDE.

The addition of a table that could be conveniently set up was made to the equipment of the auto hamper a couple of years ago, and now comes a supplementary convenience in the form of a tent to shelter the diners. This is an English device, though it was built in response to a suggestion from an American millionaire who used his tent hamper when he attended the Derby—the big English racing event of the year.

Vegetable Soup.—Chop into dice soup greens consisting of carrot, cabbage leaf, very little parsley, leaving the rest for garnishing the beef. Scald marrowbone, extracting the butter to use in with beef. Then boil marrowbone in soup greens, adding two-thirds cupful of tomatoes, salt, pepper, sugar, dash of worcestershire sauce. Strain after cooking for forty minutes and serve hot with toasted croutons.

Braised Beef a la Marengo.—Use one and three-fourths pounds of beef cut from shank with marrowbone. Take extra marrowbone (which your butcher will give), extracting the marrow butter, adding it to beef. Drop beef into boiling water and simmer for three hours, then add tops of leek from your soup greens, also the vegetables used for soup. Cook for forty-five minutes, adding one-fourth cupful of tomatoes, salt, pepper and few drops of worcestershire sauce. Remove vegetables, passing them through colander, mashing them fine, returning them to beef sauce, and boil up again. Serve beef on hot platter in slices or whole with marengo sauce made, as above described, of the soup vegetables. Pour around beef and garnish with parsley.

Spaghetti au Gratin.—Drop into boiling salted water; cook for twenty minutes. Remove to pan with one tablespoonful olive oil and one small piece of leek; turn spaghetti in oil until slightly brown, then pour on platter with five spoonfuls of soup stock, grated cheese on top; just enough tomato sauce on edge of platter to give color. Serve from hot oven after cheese has browned.

Salad.—Cut large dill pickle into dice with two radishes, cut with skin on into small cubes and serve on lettuce leaves.

Southern Rice Pudding.—Soak one and one-half tablespoonfuls of rice in water for thirty minutes, then add one-quarter cup of milk after pouring off the water, soaking for twenty minutes. Add rest of one pint of milk and two tablespoonfuls of sugar. Cook in medium oven, stirring in the top as it browns. Add a little water if it thickens too much and have it creamy.

EXERCISE CARE IN SELECTING BOAR.

The selection of the boar is very important, and it is the opinion of the writer that some farmers do not have as much success as they should and could have in raising hogs simply because they do not exercise the care necessary in selecting the male to be used in their herds.

The boar should be selected with greater care than the sows, for his influence equals the combined influence of all the sows of the herd. A superior boar may be used on a superior herd of sows with good results, but the use of an inferior boar on sows of high quality will have a disastrous outcome. The one method raises the standard of the herd; the other invariably lowers it.

A boar with male characteristics strongly developed should be selected, preferably as a yearling or else as a pig that has been purchased at the same time as the sows and allowed to come to maturity before being used. He should have a well erected neck and a strong masculine head. His shoulders should be developed according to his age. However, strong shoulder development in pigs under a year or eighteen months old is objectionable.

The boar should be selected to correct any defects that may be common to the sows. For example, if the sows are rather coarse in bone and loosely built the boar should have high quality and fine bones, skin and hair. If the sows tend toward overrefinement and delicacy the boar should be rather rangy and strong boned.

PRIZE BERKSHIRE BOAR.
[By courtesy of Iowa State college.]

The same indications of a good pork producing carcass that the sows require should be seen in the boar—a broad, straight, deeply fleshed back, much depth and length of sides and well developed hind quarters. The visible organs of the reproductive system should be well developed and clearly defined.

The boar should stand upon his toes, and there should not be the slightest indication of weakness in the pasterns of the young ones. In a matured boar (two or three years of age) that has seen hard service it may be expected that he will be a little down on his pasterns, but a six or eight months old pig that does not carry himself on upright pasterns is not a safe animal to select for a herd boar.

PROCRASTINATION.

The Habit of Putting Off Doing the Serious Things of Life.

Much of the unhappiness and improvidence in life is caused by early habits of procrastination—habits contracted unconsciously perhaps when character is in its formative stage and at the very time when most attention should be given to the untrained nature. It is so easy to fall into a happy-go-lucky way of living, so easy to jog along unconcernedly, doing the things which suit us best and perhaps which count for the least and leaving undone all the acts and unspoken all the words and unexpressed all the thoughts and unused all the advantages which are really so essential to a better understanding of ourselves and the wonderful life being lived about us!

What a bright world of promise fulfilled this would be if responsibility could only be made half as attractive as some of the minor diversions which seem to furnish so much pleasure to their partakers! If the hard places could be made soft, the rocky roads smooth and difficult undertakings easy, there would be small need for putting off from day to day the task of fulfilling any task whatever. As it is, with the certainty that happiness unalloyed is not within the grasp of man and with the knowledge that sorrow and trouble must come at some time into each of our lives, it seems strange that for all our weak human nature we cannot learn the lesson that procrastination teaches and benefit thereby.

An Office Business Only.

A young man called at the office of a justice of the peace and with some hesitation made known his business, which was to be married. The justice replied that he thought he could perform the service and asked if the young man had his license.

"Yes, sir," the youth replied.

"Well, where is the young lady?"

"She—she's at her father's."

"Well, bring her here."

"She'd rather be married at home, squire."

"And you expect me to go there and marry you?"

"Yes, sir, if you please."

"Young man," said the justice, "this office of mine is like a department store. We sell matches here, but we don't deliver them at the house."—Youth's Companion.

Cats and Dogs.

According to a French investigator, domestic animals have a certain amount of reasoning power, often act upon reflex notions and can associate ideas from which they draw inferences. Dogs, and still more so cats, he says, learn to imitate the voice and movements of their masters or mistresses. He has noticed old watchdogs which when they barked had peculiar intonations which resembled the voices of their masters. Cats try by the way in which they cry to make their mistresses understand exactly what they want.

Appropriate Styles.

"That elocutionist believes in dressing the part for any recitation."

"How do you mean?"

"Why, when she read the story about the sailors deserted on the lonely island she wore a costume of maroon, and at her lecture on Celtic wit her dress was trimmed with Irish point."

W.S.Morden, Barrister, Of This City, Secures Position in Toronto.

WILL BE ASSISTANT GENERAL MANAGER OF THE TRUSTS AND GUARANTEE COMPANY, AND REMOVE TO THE QUEEN CITY SHORTLY.

Owing to increasing business, the Trusts and Guarantee Company, of Toronto, has appointed W. S. Morden barrister, of this city, assistant general manager of the company, Mr. Morden will assume his position on Sept 1. Mr. Morden brings to the performance of his duties a sound legal education, broadened by a general practice of many years in Belleville.

In conversation with Mr. Morden a representative of The Intelligencer learned that, whilst he would remove to Toronto, his arrangements with the Trust and Guarantee company were such that he would continue his connection with the law firm he has been for some years connected with here. Mr. W. D. M. Shorey, of Newburg, will join the firm here and Mr. Morden's intentions are to visit this city every Saturday.

The removal of Mr. Morden from the city will be regretted, but his many friends will congratulate him upon securing the remunerative position he has attained to. As chairman of the Board of Education, Mr. Morden will probably retain that position for the balance of the year.

What the Strike Cost.

TO THE COMPANY.

Loss of freight business for thirteen days, amounting to perhaps a quarter of a million dollars.

Loss of passenger business through people prefering to ride on other rail way during strike.

Loss of business now that strike is ended, by reason of customers getting accustomed to other lines.

Standard ract of wages goes into effect one year earlier than offered previous to strike.

TO THE MEN.

Loss of pensions.

Loss of wages for time out of work during strike and afterwards.

THE TREATY OF PEACE.

The "standard" rate of wages and standard rules will go into effect January 1, 1912, and meanwhile the increases offered by the Grand Trunk previous to the strike will go into effect, dating from May 1, 1910.

The company will not discharge men engaged during the strike, but will find places for all strikers who may wish to come back.

The strikers lose their pensions and start in as new men.

A Runaway

Frank Hines' Case.

The story of Frank Hines about travelling from Labrador to the Pacific Coast seems to have been the outcome of an eccentric brain. He was run in as a vagrant in Toronto for begging in hotels. He said that his mother was ill and he could not get work in Eastern Canada, so he decided to seek his fortune in the golden west. He was allowed to go on suspended sentence.

Girls Escaped From Children's Shelter

Two girls, named Myrtle Bird and Miriam Melvin, who were inmates of the Children's Shelter, at an early hour this morning decided to leave that institution without leave and walked away. Their absence was discovered shortly after, but no trace of them could be found. They were aged 12 and 15 years, and were from the country. The police were notified of the occurrence and requested to be on the lookout for the runaways. Both girls were hatless. It is thought that they will endeavor to make their way to their former homes

Put Fly Paper On Mother-in-Law's Mouth

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 1. — "I'll teach you to keep your mouth shut," exclaimed Mrs. Clara Brandon, to her mother-in-law, Mrs. Lavina Brandon and, fitting the action to the word slapped a piece of sticky, fly-strewn paper over the elder Mrs. Brandon mouth.

She did not hesitate to pick out a piece that would have been less objectionable because it had not been "on duty" so long, but chose the first one she ran across and made a good job of it by pasting the edges around her mother-in-law's ears.

At least that was the story told by the elder Mrs Brandon when she appeared in police court against her daughter-in-law. Her features still bore the marks of the paper, and her face and ears were decorated with fly wings and glue. She left "he evidence" on her face over night to convince the judge, she said.

The daughter-in-law was arrested charged with assault and battery, and when the elder Mrs. Brandon went to police headquarters to talk the situation over, she was advised by Matron Gregoire not to remove the battle scars.

The elder Mrs. Brandon said she was sitting on the front porch when her daughter-in-law ordered her to depart. She moved over to the corner, she said and then her daughter-in-law kicked her on the ankle. But Mrs. Brandon said she refused to move further and her daughter-in-law rush into the kitchen and picked up the fly paper which she pasted over her mouth. Judge Collins continued the case.

HE HAS NOT CONFESSED

Crippen Has He Will Not Talk Till He Reaches England.

He Denies Rumor That He Had Admitted the Murder of Belle Elmore—Inspector Dew Has a Hard Time Avoiding the Reporters Who Are Staying In Quebec—Hundreds Ask For Passes to See the Jail.

Quebec, Aug. 4.—Inspector Dew of Scotland Yard will neither deny or confirm the report widely published yesterday that Dr. Crippen has confessed to the murder of Belle Elmore. To pressmen who called last evening at the St. George, where he has apartments, the inspector sent an attendant with a message that he would not be seen. A note was sent up to him asking for a statement, and the word came back, "I have no comment to make."

At the Quebec jail, where Crippen is confined, a correspondent was told by Governor Morin that he was not aware of any confession, and he entirely discredits the report. No persons, excepting officials, are being allowed in to see Crippen, but reporters was allowed to send a note to him, asking whether he had anything to say to the press. The reply was, "I will say nothing, till I get to England."

"He always seems cheerful enough," commented Governor Morin, referring to Crippen. The little doctor's contented demeanor is taken to indicate that he has a card still up his sleeve, which he will play at the proper time."

The Scotland Yard man went shopping yesterday, and purchased new wearing apparel for Dr. Crippen and Ethel Leneve. The clothing was purchased with the $10 found on the doctor, and a small amount found in the possession of the woman, when they were arrested. After performing this domestic chore the great detective went sailing on the St. Charles River, accompanied by Chief of Police McCarthy.

The appearance of a reporter on the horizon sets the detective twitching, so averse is he to publicity. It was gathered at the St. George yesterday that he is to desert that place to-day, and go in hiding, to escape the newspaper men.

The girl, who is charged jointly with Crippen with the murder of his former wife, is rapidly recovering, and now spends much time walking about her ward in the jail infirmary.

Appeals to the sheriff for passes to visit the jail are pouring in, and the attendance numbers about 300 a day, mostly woman. They all want to see Crippen, not the jail, says Governor Morin.

The jewelry, including four diamond rings, found on Crippen, which has been identified as the property of the missing woman, has been turned over to Deputy Sheriff Begin for safe keeping.

Says Dew Told Him.

London, Aug. 4.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Chronicle's correspondent says that Dew told him Crippen confessed that he killed his wife in a quarrel. Relatives have received the following cable from Miss Leneve. "I had seen or heard nothing until the cruel blow fell. I am returning home." Ethel.

Scotland Yard entirely discredits the reported confession of Crippen.

CATTLE MARKETS.

American Cattle Markets Dull With Prices Unchanged—Hogs Steady.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Aug. 3.—(Special.)—A more active trade is doing in this department of the live stock trade, and the indications are that it will continue thruout this month, as the bulk of the ocean freight space from this port is engaged. But up to the present there has been no demand for space for September shipment, for which agents are asking 30s to Liverpool and 25s to 27s to London. Cables of late from the leading foreign markets have been weaker on account of increased home supplies, and if prices continue to decline it might have a tendency to check the movement of northwest ranch cattle in that direction. The exports of cattle for the month of July were the largest of the season so far. The total number shipped was 12,521 head, showing an increase of 865, as compared with the previous month, but a decrease of 1421 as compared with the same month last year. The total exports from the opening of navigation to July 31 were 27,764 head, as against 28,568 for the corresponding period a year ago, showing a decrease of 10,804 head, which is due to a large extent to the falling off in the exports of American cattle from this port, as there have been only 22 head shipped during the past three months, as against 5128 for the same period last year.

At the Canadian Pacific live stock market this morning the offerings of live stock were 1200 cattle, 560 sheep and lambs, 1310 hogs and 400 calves, an easier feeling developing in the market for cattle on account of the larger supply coming forward, and prices were fully ¼c per lb. lower than on Monday. The weather was warm again, and this tended to curtail the demand from butchers to some extent; consequently only a fair trade was done, and quite a number were left over. Choice steers sold at 6c to 6¼c; good at 5c to 5¾c; fairly good at 5c to 5¼c; fair at 4½c to 4¾c, and common at 4c to 4¼c per lb. Cows were very plentiful and met only with a fair sale at 2½c to 4½c, and bulls brought from 3c to 5c per lb. Another feature of the trade was the decidedly weak feeling in the market for hogs, and prices, as compared with those of Monday, show a decline of 50c to 75c per hundred pounds. This was attributed to the increased supplies and the fact that the strike on the Grand Trunk Railway was settled, which tended to curtail the demand from packers some, and trade even at the reduced prices was not active. Sales of selected lots were made at $9.50 to $9.75 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars, and a few lots were delivered on contracts made earlier in the week at $10.25. Supplies of small meats were not so plentiful as they were earlier in the week, but they were ample to fill all requirements, and prices ruled steady. Sheep sold at 3½c to 3¾c per lb.; lambs at $3.50 to $5.25 each, with calves at from $3 to $10 each, as to size and quality.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Aug. 3.—Cattle—Receipts, 400 head; dull; prices unchanged.

Veals—Receipts, 450 head; active; 25c higher, $6.50 to $9; heavy calves slow.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 800 head; steady; lambs and handy weight sheep active; heavy sheep slow; prices unchanged.

New York Live Stock.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Beeves—Receipts, 1706; market slow; steers, $5.15 to $7.90; oxen, $5.50 to $6.20; bulls, $3.50 to $4; cows, $2 to $4.70; dressed beef dull; exports, 18,000 quarters of beef.

Calves—Receipts, 1872; market irregular; veals, $7.50 to $10; culls, $5 to $7; grassers and buttermilks, $4 to $4.25; good to choice western calves, $6.37½ to $7; dressed calves slow; city dressed veals, 12c to 15c.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 5006; sheep steady; lambs higher; sheep, $3 to $4.50; lambs, $6.25 to $7.62½; one car, $7.75; culls, $4.

Hogs—Receipts, 3227; lower; heavy to light state hogs and Pennsylvania hogs, $8.75 to $9.25.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—Cattle—Receipts, 10,000; strong; beeves, $4.80 to $8.20; Texas steers, $3.50 to $5.60; western steers, $4 to $4.65; stockers and feeders, $4 to $6.25; cows and heifers, $2.60 to $6.25; calves, $6.50 to $8.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 15,000; market strong early; slow later; light, $8.35 to $8.80; mixed, $7.85 to $8.75; heavy, $7.60 to $8.25; roughs, $7.60 to $7.80; good to choice, heavy, $7.85 to $8.40; pigs, $8.25 to $8.80; bulk of sales, $8 to $8.50.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 24,000; market steady to 10c higher; native, $2.60 to $4.60; western, $2.75 to $4.60; yearlings, $4.50 to $5.75; lambs, native, $4.50 to $7.10; western, $4.50 to $7.10.

Worked a Clever Scheme.

Sturgeon Falls, Aug. 4.—John Heroux was sentenced to three years in Kingston Penitentiary by Magistrate Bradford here on charges of forgery, perjury and theft. Heroux was a jobber for J. R. Booth, and organized a cunning system of fraudulent time checks, forged by his clerk, Herman Lavoie, under his orders.

An automatic burglar-proof lock has been patented for freight trains. If broken, it sounds an air whistle and sets the brakes on the train.

THE BULL A VALUABLE ANIMAL.

In many cases less attention is given to the bull than to the cow. Many farmers desire to possess superior cows, but from appearances on the average farm one frequently sees fearsome looking specimens doing duty as bulls. It forces one to believe that there are numerous farmers who do not care what breed, form, size or other points they own so long as the animals can do the work required.

This is an extremely unfortunate attitude, and when put in practice, as it is far too often, it is quite certain that the stock produced will be of an inferior character. It is here the mistake becomes conspicuous and more noticeable later when the progeny is marketed.

A CHAMPION SHORTHORN.

Superior cows are very desirable, but a good bull is more so, and it should be the ambition of all to own such, not only as a credit to oneself, but as a money getter.

A cow may be as good as is possible, but use an inferior bull and her calf will be moderate, to say the least, but use a substantial bull and ninety nine chances to one the calf will be better either than the sire or dam.

Attempts to breed from a poor class of cows with a bull of a similar character only results in the production of a lot of weeds, but if a really good bull is used for inferior cows the stock will be improved perceptibly both in appearance and value.

A pure bred bull of any kind is an acceptable animal, but crossbred ones are doubtful. That some are good it must be admitted, but the majority are rubbish. It does not matter what the object of breeding be—milk production in the extreme or beef with great development on the most valued parts—a superior bull will always make its mark and have a big share in securing all that is required for ornament and utility.

THE VALUABLE SEPARATOR.

Care Should Be Exercised to Keep This Instrument Clean.

The cream separator enters into the matter of the production of pure cream as one of the greatest factors of cleanliness. To insure the production of cream free from bacterial infection to any marked degree it is necessary to exert the greatest care in the keeping clean of the separator. Although the average housewife on the farm may and does use good judgment and pride in taking care of the separator, there are a sufficient number of housewives that do not to require much agitation of the subject.

The separator must be washed after each and every separation if the greatest care is to be exercised and at least once a day if freedom from expensive bacterial infection is desired. Many cases are familiar where no further washing is made other than that of flushing the machine out with hot or cold water. With this manner of washing it is impossible to keep clean and free from bacteria any separator.

Not only does cleanliness in the matter of washing exert great influence, but it is necessary to locate the separator in a place that is sanitary as well as convenient. Too often the former factor is forgotten; too often does the farmer place his separator where it will be the handiest for him, with no thought whatever of the sanitary conditions surrounding.

Not only do undesirable bacteria, putrefactive in their nature, fall into the milk and cream, but the odors of an unclean stable are absorbed by the cream. The volatile fats of butter fat, constituting 8 per cent of the entire quantity, absorb very readily any odor that may be associated near the cream.

Thus to insure a cream free from odors or taints it is impossible to place the separator anywhere but in a clean place without injuring the quality of the cream. Thus the separator exerts much influence in the keeping clean of cream. Since its introduction the separator has revolutionized the cream business, but it has not eliminated that great factor of cleanliness.

Hogs Pay For Keeping.

No animal on the farm is better adapted to turning good feed quickly into marketable meat than the hog, and none can better repay from a market standpoint a discriminating system of feeding. This is particularly true as to first cost, for the hog is by nature planned to utilize the least expensive feeds and will manufacture into toothsome pork much that might otherwise be reckoned of little value, if not waste. In any phase of farm economy the hog is a feature, and his proper feeding has in innumerable instances been the factor that kept a farm's profit on the right side of the ledger.

Because native trees are too slow of growth to meet the demand for lumber, trees from America and Europe are being introduced into New Zealand.

THE NEWEST FADS

"The Early Village Cock" Crows From Cushion Tops.

BILLIKENS VACATE PEDESTALS

Handsome Blotters Display the Favored "Bird of Dawning" Upon Their Covers Proudly Flaunting the Motto "While I Live I'll Crow."

The almost universal interest aroused by M. Rostand's clever play "Chantecler" has found practical expression in many of the season's novelties.

"The early village cock" has indeed "made his salutation to the morn" to good purpose and awakened us to the realization of the aesthetic charms of the humble denizens of farmyard and forest.

The newest specimens of art pottery bear upon their quaint forms representations of gallant chanticleer, slender hen pheasants and sober hued fowls in delightfully rich colorings on highly glazed gray green backgrounds. Bronze and enamel ornaments, paperweights, hatpins, brooches, etc., all are found in the form of familiar farmyard creatures and also appear as owls, frogs and wild birds, while "golliwogs," "lucky" black cats and hideous little Billikens have had to vacate their pedestals in favor of newer charms and mascots in the shape of a crowing cock.

A CHANTICLEER PINCUSHION.

We have long been familiar with dainty little egg cozies made to represent a cock's head. These are more popular than ever, particularly when expressed in white cloth with scarlet comb and wattles. Others in dark green, yellow and red may be stuffed as penwipers or emery cushions.

Chanticleer pincushions may be painted with very little trouble and are extremely effective. A flat, hanging pincushion is made by neatly covering two rounds of cardboard about five inches in diameter with velvet and cutting out a few rounds of thick felt or flannel, which are placed in layers until the desired thickness is obtained. A piece of satin ribbon hides the edge, and to this the two velvet covers are invisibly sewed. When a cock's head has been painted on the side in glowing colors and bows of ribbon of two shades added by which to suspend the cushion the result is very pleasing. It is so easy to procure good copies of cock and hens nowadays. There is an excellent series of colored picture postcards that serve admirably as guides, or they may be frequently found in children's picture books.

A very novel key rack is shown in the illustration and is quite easy to manage. A small strip of bamboo or a rustic stick about eight inches long and flattened at the back must be procured. Three little hooks must be screwed into this to hold keys. The cock, with the rising sun behind him, should be painted on extremely thick water color paper and cut out carefully with scissors or a sharp knife. This is firmly glued to the back of the strip of wood and a ring fastened behind the cock by which to suspend the whole. This design, considerably enlarged, is very suitable worked in outline in flax thread upon a linen cozy for a hot water can, especially if the appropriate words,

"Up, up," says the crowing cock—
"Don't you hear the village clock?"

are introduced.

A NOVEL KEY RACK.

A handsome blotter also displays this favored "bird of dawning" upon the cover, proudly flaunting the motto, "While I live I'll crow."

When Ironing.

The backs of old kid gloves, sewed together and used as an interlining to kitchen kettle or laundry iron holders, are invaluable as a means of giving protection to the hands without adding materially to the bulk of the holder. A piece of felt, flannel, blanketing, serge or even velveteen may be used as the outer covering.

When heating flatirons it is always best to lift them and wipe after being on the gas stove.

Instead of having an iron stand on which to rest your irons, use an ordinary brick for the purpose. The brick being a good nonconductor, the irons will retain their heat longer.

A Boston sewerage pumping station utilizes for fuel the screenings from sewage, dried and compressed into briquettes.

THE FIFTH OF JULY.

'Twas the fifth of July, and the children were swathed
In bandages up to their eyes freshly bathed
In lotions aseptic. Each lay in his bed,
And visions of firecrackers danced through his head.
In soft padded slippers the nurses moved round,
And father and mother scarce uttered a sound
For fear lest their darlings should wake to the fact
That Willie was legless and four fingers lacked
On Mabel's right hand, while the poll of poor Joe
Was as bald as an egg, but as black as a crow.
The others had lost only fingers or toes,
A trifle compared to an eye or a nose.
And so they all waited in silence and fear
In hopes that the doctors would soon reappear.

'Twas the fifth of July, and in ashes there lay
The barn and the stable, the oats and the hay.
Three fine carriage horses had gone up in smoke
With father's new auto, and that was no joke.
But boys must be boys though their lives pay the cost,
And girls must be girls though their beauty be lost.
And "patriotism" can only be shown
By crackers and lockjaw, and by these alone,
And so in their bandages, groaning with pain,
The children live over the Fourth once again,
While father and mother recall, with a sigh,
Their offspring whose beauty once gladdened the eye,
And all wait in silence and trembling and fear
In hopes that the doctors will soon reappear.

YOUNG MEN DROWN.

Three Toronto Residents Perish—Visitor Dies at Picton.

Toronto, Aug. 5.—Three Torontonians perished yesterday in the water. Merton Kent, of the Argonaut, R. C., son of the late H. A. E. Kent, was drowned from a launch under unusual circumstances while on his way to the regatta at St. Catharines. Harry McBratney, aged 20, was upset with a companion while sailing off Orchard Beach, Lake Simcoe. Fred Swift, a ship's cook, fell into the bay while intoxicated.

The drowning of "Mert" Kent came as a great surprise to his many friends in athletic and social circles. He was thrown into the water when an accident to the tow line, by which his disabled launch was being towed by the steamer "Garden City," caused the small craft to lurch suddenly.

Young McBratney, who was twenty years of age, and employed as a furniture polisher by the John Kay Co., left on Saturday last for Orchard Beach, accompanied by Ernest Pretty of 174 Euclid avenue. Yesterday morning the two lads went out for a sail, were struck by a squall and their boat overturned. It is reported that young McBratney's heart was not very strong, and it is thought that he went down immediately. Pretty was rescued by the two Strachan brothers, who put out immediately in a rowboat.

Fatality at Picton.

Picton, Aug. 5.—E. J. Paradis, general manager of the Syracuse Gas Engine Co., of Syracuse, N.Y., was drowned.

Paradis, with his wife and Captain Wessels, and H. W. Sheriff, manager of the Royal Hotel, were out in Sheriff's motor boat. There was a heavy sea running. Paradis stood up in the boat, and, losing his balance, fell overboard.

FREIGHT CHIEF QUESTION.

Cost of Carrying Goods Is the Paramount Issue, Says Graham.

Moose Jaw, Sask., Aug. 5.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier and party arrived here yesterday afternoon from Weyburn, after making short stops at Yellow Grass and Lang. The Premier had his customary conference with the grain-growers.

At a luncheon given by the Canadian Club in the evening to the members of the Premier's party, Hon. Mr. Graham spoke on the subject of transportation charges.

"We have heard a great deal in the press about reduced passenger rates—about the two-cent passenger rate. In the matter of rates that is not the paramount question. Few people in comparison to the number of the population travel. More are traveling now than in the earlier days of the country because there are more people now in the country."

Ontario's Apple Yield Decreasing.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Aug. 5.—In an address before the annual convention of the International Shippers' Association, over the river yesterday, Prof. J. W. Crow of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, did not speak enthusiastically of Ontario's apple growing. He said apple growing in Ontario was fast on the decline. The prime cause for this was the number of unscrupulous buyers throughout the province. They offered such low prices and treated growers so unfairly that apple orchards were fast being replaced with other fruits.

He estimated that the apple shipments from Ontario centres this year would be: Chatham, 1,000 to 2,000 barrels; Alviston, three cars; Wyoming 19 cars; Watford, 1,500 barrels; Grimsby, six cars; Ingersoll, 4,500 barrels; Trenton, 7,000 barrels; Thornbury, 12,000 barrels; Durham, 2,000 barrels; Jordan, 20 cars; Oshawa, 8,000 barrels; Wicklow, 3,500 barrels; Sparta, 3,000 to 5,000 boxes; St. Catharines, 6,000 to 6,500 barrels.

Pugsley at Military College.

Kingston, Aug. 5.—Hon. Dr. Pugsley was here yesterday and promised new dormitories, a drill hall and a cement wharf at the Royal Military College, which he saw yesterday for the first time. Dr. Pugsley was delighted with Kingston. He said it had a magnificent location. He went on to Toronto on the Government steamer Speedy.

Capt. Wolfe, Chatham, England will succeed Capt. Brown, and Capt. Sedgewick, Hillfield, Eng., takes Maj. de Bury's place at the Military College in September.

Paul Waggoner and Joseph Clappon, Toronto salesmen, are held here pending enquiry into their Toronto movements. On a vagrancy charge, the men were remanded to jail for a week. News came that they had issued checks in Toronto when they had no funds in the bank.

Lightning Struck Six.

Galt, Aug. 5.—The electric storm Wednesday night was the worst in years. The home of R. S. Dryden was struck, demolishing the interior of one bedroom and partially stunning six members of the household.

Mrs. Walter Jones, a resident of Moffat, who disappeared a week ago is supposed to be in Toronto, where a search will be made.

BROKE ALIEN ACT?

Thirteen Strike-Breakers In Jail at Sarnia.

Some Being Taken Back.

Brockville, Aug. 5.—The Grand Trunk trainmen and conductors who went on strike are being gradually taken back into the service. Yesterday union crews were called for the day freights east and west out of Brockville and six union crews were in charge of as many trains arriving from Montreal. The men are not, however, being taken back as quickly as they expected, and much uneasiness prevails in the ranks of the brotherhood. No passenger conductors nor brakemen have yet been called for duty. Several yardmen are back in their old places.

Troops Called Off.

Bridgeburg, Aug. 5.—The troops that have been here for several days, guarding Grand Trunk property during the strike, left by special train yesterday at seven a.m. for Niagara Falls, Toronto and London.

None Re-employed at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Aug. 5.—Not one of the striking trainmen on the Ottawa division of the Grand Trunk has as yet been re-employed, nor has official word been received of the termination of the strike.

Strike-Breakers Dismissed.

London, Ont., Aug. 5.—A sensational episode was enacted Wednesday night when the Pacific Express from Suspension Bridge drew up to the platform and Conductor Hughson and Brakemen Willisley and Turleston, all American strike-breakers, were dismissed by Supt. Bowker, charged with being intoxicated.

Thirteen Strike-Breakers Arrested.

Sarnia, Aug. 5.—Traveling Immigration Inspector Herbert has caused the arrest of thirteen Grand Trunk strike-breakers at Sarnia, and is now endeavoring to secure the arrest of one other of the party of fourteen men who came in from the States. The party had about $20 each in cash, and on landing in Sarnia Wednesday, after passing the immigration inspection, this money was taken over by the G.T.R. agent at Sarnia. Herbert has signed declarations to this effect. On a charge that they were entering Canada under false pretences, thirteen of the men are now in jail in Sarnia.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

George Wheeler of Smith Township is dead as the result of a kick from a vicious cow.

Inspector Dew of Scotland Yard is on his way west from Quebec to visit Niagara Falls.

Seventeen hundred troops are still on strike duty at Columbus, Ohio. The street cars are running.

Lord Athlumney and the Earl of Euston will attend the conclave of Knights Templars at Chicago.

At Chadwick, Ill., enraged because his wife had filed suit for divorce, John Divelbisi, aged 50, shot and killed the woman and himself.

Prince Henry of the Netherlands, the Prince Consort of Queen Wilhelmina, fell from his bicycle and sustained a fracture of the collar bone.

Dr. Hawk of Melfort, Sasks., has been arrested, charged with illegal practice in the case of Mary Scott, who died in convulsions at the hospital.

At St. John, N.B., John Kearns, confined to bed with tuberculosis, took advantage of a moment when his wife, who was sitting up with him, had fallen to sleep, and cut his throat with a razor.

Eight persons, seven of whom were city firemen, were injured in a fire which destroyed one of the Smith-McCord-Townsend Dry Goods Co.'s warehouses at Kansas City, Mo., and caused $200,000 damage.

At Oakland, Cal., despondent because he believed he was about to be turned out of the house of friends with whom he lived for some time, Wm. Cooper, formerly of New York, shot and killed Mrs. Hurley Buss, dangerously wounded her husband and fatally wounded himself.

Hail Riddles Car Windows.

Prescott, Aug. 5.—The local train on the C.P.R. from Ottawa to Prescott, due here at 4.50 p.m., arrived last night minus almost every pane of glass.

About three o'clock, when pulling out of Manotic, the train ran into a cloudburst, accompanied by a terrific wind. The train could be felt rocking heavily. The hail was so heavy that every window in the cars was broken instantly.

One lady, who had her watch on her wrist, reported the hail having come through the window, and in addition, had sufficient force to break the crystal on her watch.

To Study the Redman.

Winnipeg, Aug. 5.—A small party of scientific investigators from the United States will leave at once for Lake of the Woods and Rainy River to study the Canadian Indian in his native wild. The party consists of Prof. Libby, of the University of North Dakota; Prof. Starr of Chicago, and an Indian interpreter. Rev. H. G. Gunn of Winnipeg, who has made a study of ethology and had made a special study of Indian folk lore, will accompany the party.

Explosion Kills Two.

Boston, Aug. 5.—Two persons were killed and several injured by the explosion of a steam pipe on board the fishing excursion steamer Satellite as she was proceeding down the harbor yesterday. The dead are firemen. There was no panic among the passengers.

WONDER-SHINE

Silver and Gold
Is making it Famous

When you use WONDER-SHINE, the dreaded half-day cleaning your silverware becomes but a pleasant half-hour.

Without any rubbing or scrubbing the tarnish disappears and the original brightness is restored, but neither your silver, your temper, nor your fingers will suffer as when you use "rub on" preparations of abrasive powder, or acid paste polishes.

WONDER-SHINE is not rubbed on, the silver is simply dipped in.

Like all great discoveries, the process is very simple.

CURRENT EVENTS.

Another strike. The striking members of the International Operative Plasterers' Union were joined in their strike by thirty members of the Plasterers' Laborers Union this morning The laborers are asking an increase in their scale from 25 to 30 cents per hour. Modest demand this. Laborers insist upon $3 a day or quit work.

That the people of Ontario have an honest and practicable Government is recognized by everyone. Here is another illustration. "The Hon. W. J Hanna, provincial secretary, announces that after the first of next month there will be no prison labor contracts between private firms and the Ontario Government. The Taylor Scott Woodenware contract, the only survivor of a long list, expires on September 1, and will not be renewed. The establishment of the new provincial prison farm at Guelph has led to this step. Of the 400 men at Central Prison now, 150 will be taken to Guelph for construction and general farm work. One hundred men will also be used in the north on road construcion and general colonization work. We have no fault to find with the Taylor Scott Company, said Mr. Hanna, "their contract was as good as any prison labor contract could be. It is simply a part of our avowed policy to do away with the sale of prison-made goods sold in the open market."

The following is a fair illustration of the character of, and the many ways in which the Royal Family of England gain the affections of the subject: 'England's oldest living clown Mr. James Doughty, of Brighton West Pier, says: "I wrote to the King the other day, telling him 'that I was old and feeble. I also told him I had performed before his grandmother (Queen Victoria) and his father and mother many times. I have just received a reply from Lieut-Col Sir William Carrington, acknowledging the receipt of my letter, and enclosing a Post Office order for £3 from His Majesty's privy purse." Mr Doughty was delighted with the donation, and said that he would celebrate his ninety-second birthday on August 27 by giving a benefit performance, when he would again appear in his clown's costume.

'In Manitoba, the other day, the agents of the Ottawa Government paid $25 per vote, with a view to getting rid of the Roblin Administration. This was a high price, for the Ontario figure is, as a rule, no more than $2.

As an evidence of how Toronto is growing, building permits representing values aggregrating $11,793,883 were issued by the City Architect for the first seven months of this year.

Is there anything that Canada has not got within her borders? An exploring party reports great finds of asphalt and salt in the Peace River district. "Asphalt, reports the explorers, "crops out everywhere. Along the Athabasca it occurs in great high mounds, and Saskatchewan people are using it now in its raw state to roof their log houses with. In the vicinity of Fort McMurray alone it is estimated that there are twenty-eight cubic miles of asphalt to be had for the trouble of lifting it from the ground.

"Salt can be picked up in places in chunks like large stones. When Neil Campton was boring for oil at Fort McMurray he went through 203 feet of salt in two veins. He has now bored down to a depth of over a thousand feet, and the prospects of striking oil are excellent.'

Mr. J. R. Booth, the Ottawa Lumber King, paid his men in full for the time lost by them owing to the strike The amount involved was over $12,000. Nobody will repay Mr. Booth for the money he lost through the strike, but everybody will feel like imitating the example of his employes when they received their pay, and giving three cheers for the Grand Old Lumber King.

500 Got Pensions From Grand Trunk

Toronto, August 4—The Grand Trunk officials do not care to discuss the question of pensions, but there is a feeling that the system will be continued.

The establishment of the pension a few years ago was a voluntary affair by the management, but thoroughly appreciated by the employes. Since its establishment 500 old employes have retired, and the company is paying out yearly about $125,000.

Another feature connected with the pension is that the poorest paid employe, will, when he retires, receive $200 a year. This is men whose salaries were, not large enough to guarantee them that amount on the 20 per cent. of their earnings.

The pension is given for long and faithful service, and does not cost the employe anything except to do his duty.

Strikers Are Sore On Strike Leaders, Says Montreal Wire

Montreal, Aug. 4 — The G. T. R trainmen are sore to-day on the strike leaders, feeling that they have lost heavily in the settlement.

Last night about 70 men were taken on in the yards, and to-day about a dozen of the strikers were assigned to work, but of the 500 who went out in this district less than a hundred have been taken back in the first twenty-four hours after the strike was settled.

The G. T. R. is determined to keep all the new men who show signs of making good, and the men are blue at the prospects of remaining out of work for a considerable time before places are found for them. Very few of them have got places with the C.P.R., and many of them see a lean time ahead and blame the whole thing on the strike leaders.

Second Edition Of The "Moonstone"

AN INCIDENT WHICH RECALLS THE PLOT OF WILKIE COLLINS' GREAT NOVEL.

New York, Aug. 3.—Captain H. C. V. G. McAdams, of Hereford, England, who came to New York a little more than a week ago in search of a blue pearl, said to have been taken from the eye of an image of Buddha during the Sepoy revolt, and to be worth $100,000, has succeeded now, according to his attorney, in losing not only the jewel, but himself as well.

Reginald H. Scheneck, of 45 Broadway, who says he is acting for the Rajah Ranee in his search for the Buddha's eye, went to police headquarters and had a general alarm sent out for the captain. Mr. Schenck said that on July 25, when the captain was in Boston on the trail of the jewel, he received this telegram from him: "Case and jewel gone between station here and Touraine Hotel. Have called Pinkertons."

Soon after receiving the telegram Mr. Schenck was called out of town. He understood that the captain was on his way to New York and left instructions to be given him at his office if he called.

Mr. Schenck returned today and found that no captain had turned up. He went to see the representative of the rajah, who he said is a count, and who is stopping at a New York hotel, and after their conference, it was decided to call in the police.

A TALE OF A RATTLER.

A story comes from San Bernardino, Cal., of a snake that is or was amenable to devotional appeal. It was out on the Vale ranch and it was a rattler —number of buttons not stated. Three women, Mrs. Dunlap, Mrs. Allison and Mrs. Vale, were seated on a lounge under the trees when Mr. Rattler crawled from under a cushion on which one of them was seated. Was there a panic? Yes and no. But instead of trying to aviate without a plane of any sort, Mrs. Dunlap, who saw it first, thought of snake charming and she whispered: "Let us sing." They did so, and they sang "Nearer My God, to Thee," probably feeling that way, for it isn't so easy to sing. The snake paused with uplifted head and rattles at "present." While he was listening the ladies, still singing, armed themselves with clubs and then, sad to say, they broke confidence with that devoutly sympathetic varmint. They killed him in cold blood and now they are said to be rehearsing like a massed band for the next encounter with the traditional enemy. There isn't much of a moral to the tale, but it suggests regret that our late Mother Eve didn't know Dr. Smith's hymn. It might have saved some of us a lot of trouble.

Skunk Scared 'Em.

Port Hope, August 4 -- An unusual and alarming visitor came into the church at Sturgeon Point last Sunday during the service, and caused untold consternation among those in the rear rows of seats.

All were intently listening to the interesting address given by Rev. G. R Welch, when a slight patter of feet was heard by those in the back seats and looking curiously around they beheld—you can't guess— a skunk of daring disposition and inquisitive mood

No one ventured to cry "seat" at it, because it might not, and then the consequence would be dire. The clammy hand of fear gripped those closest fast, and slowly the little animal examined and surveyed his field of exploration, then silently slipped away into the woods, where he belonged No one fainted, because they wanted to be ready to run, and those within the railing of the church were blissfully ignorant of the terror of the more distant congregation.

Lively Game Yesterday Afternoon

Yesterday afternoon an old-time baseball game was played on the diamond at Stoney Lonesome. The teams were a nine from Canifton and nine wine clerks from the city. It was an enthusiastic crowd of spectators that witnessed the game, which resulted in in a victory for the dispensers of beverages. "Shorty" Brown commenced as umpire but he was replaced later in the game by Ald. Flagler, owing to a vigorous kick by some of the players, who threatened to mob Brown. It is stated that Charles Kline played the star game for the wine clerks. The game at one time became so warm that some spectators were requested to act as special constables. It was altogether a lively and exciting contest, and the date of the return match is eagerly looked forward too.

The Lawn Bowling Club

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:—

Dear Sir,—I wonder if many of our young women and men of mature age, know of the existence of such a club in Belleville as the Lawn Bowling Club? situated on William street.

It appears to me that if it were more generally known, a large number would avail themselves of it, for a more pleasing and health-giving exercise I do not know. I learn that the first club match is fixed for tomorrow, Saturday, but in addition to these why not arrange for visiting clubs, say Cobourg, Port Hope, and other towns. I believe a ladies' club has also been organized and a pleasant home provided. Yours.—Englishman.

The Only Dry Place.

A stingy angler was fishing on a Scottish loch on a pouring wet day. He had been consoling himself from his flasks and forgetting his gillie. Presently he asked the gillie if there was a dry place in the boat on which to strike a match.

"You might try my throat," said the gillie. "It's dry enough!"—Fishing Gazette.

Not For Publication.

"Who was that at the door just now, Dick?" asked the young wife.

"A bill collector, dear," was the husband's reply.

"And what did you say to him, Dick?" continued the wife.

"Remember, Richard, there are ladies present," broke in his mother-in-law.—Yonkers Statesman.

Possessing remarkable antiseptic, germicidal, cleansing, soothing and healing power, the curative value of Rexall Eczema Ointment is very pronounced in the treatment of eczema and allied skin diseases, whether of the dry scaly sort, the weeping type, where there is a flow of ill-smelling excretion, or the intermediary kind, such as pimples, blotches, discolorations, ringworm or acne. It is very useful for treating hives, nettle rash, insect bites and wounds. It is ideal for the skin ailments peculiar to children.

Rexall Eczema Ointment is grayish-white in color, has a pleasant odor, and is very cleanly for use. Lloyd-George and The Whiskey Tax.

The Lloyd-George Tariff, so far as it affects a tax upon spirits, has not proved a success. It is one of the cases where too high a duty, whether it be direct or indirect, proves a failure so far as revenue is concerned.

It may be remembered that the increasing of the excise tax upon whiskey was one of the reasons given by O'Brien, M. P., for opposing the Lloyd-George proposition, as an injustice to Ireland.

According to the estimate of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the increase in the revenue from the spirit tax ought to have been £1,900,000 more last year than it was in 1908 when the rates were much lower. Instead of having that increase, the Chancellor had a decrease of £3,559,000. Yet 1909 was a year of much greater prosperity than 1908.

If the increase of a tax upon spirits has been the cause of a reduction in the consumption of whiskey in Ireland, it has proved the best temperance legislation that has ever been attempted in Parliament, and might therefore, in the interests of the people, be raised still higher. Mr. Dillon one of the Irish M. P.'s, denies this proposition and declares that "to-day "the greater part of the drunkenness "in Ireland is from porter and not "from whiskey," hence the tariff was in favor of the brewer in England and against the distiller in Ireland An additional grievance. Is it not impossible that there has been more illicit distilling than in former years. The greater the tax the greater incentive to manufacture what is known in Ireland as "Mountain Dew," which is more likely to create drunkenness than purer spirit. "The grievance of the Irish people in the connection is an old one," says a contemporary. "It has been the subject of controversy for half a century. It involves questions as to the meaning of the Act of Union and what Ireland was entitled to claim under that law. Mr. Gladstone began the trouble with his budget of 1853. As set out in one of the publications of the Nationalist party, the Irish case is as follows: Before the year mentioned the liquor tax was a tax on alcohol. The Englishman drinking beer paid as much as the Irishman drinking whiskey. Mr. Gladstone changed the law so that a duty of 2 shillings 8 pence a gallon on spirits for consumption was increased to 11 shillings. The beer duty was not proportionately raised. The brewer gained at the expense of the distiller. England, a brewing country, was helped and Ireland, a distilling country, was hurt. The situation has now been aggravated by the Lloyd-George budget taxes which are so high that they have raised the price paid by consumers and reduced the sale and production in the United Kingdom of spirits as a beverage. Regarding the situation from an industrial standpoint the Irish members of the Imperial Parliament resent the action of those responsible for it, and have only agreed to withhold their condemnation in the expectation that through their self denial they will be able to secure home rule and then fix their taxes to suit themselves. Home rule, however, is a prospect while the spirits tax is an actuality, and it may be that the actuality will presently be more effective in deciding their line of action than the prospect."

Contrary to the general belief that hard woods give more heat in burning than soft, Government experts have found by tests that linden, a very soft wood, has the greatest heating power, with fir, another soft wood, next.

A glass bottle may be cut off easily by ated in kerosene, lighting the string and tying around it a piece of string saturallowing it to burn until the bottle is heated, then plunging the bottle into cold water.

FOOLS THE BATTERS.

The Celebrated Fadeaway Ball Pitched by Mathewson.

Hugh S. Fullerton, writing of the wonders of pitching in the American Magazine, says:

"Before Mathewson learned the trick of pitching his 'fader' there was one man who pitched the same ball in even more wonderful style. He was Virgil Garvin, now dead, and if he had possessed baseball intelligence enough to use other balls to mix with it he probably would have been another Mathewson. Garvin was a tall, slender young Texan with extremely long fingers, and he pitched the ball with the middle finger lapped over the index finger, turning his hand almost upside down, allowing the ball to slip over the sides and ends of the first two and between the second and third fingers. As he released the ball from his hand he jerked it sharply backward. The result was that the ball appeared to be moving with great speed. As it came near the batter the ball seemed to hesitate in the air and then suddenly curve down and in, just as a left hander's slow curve does. The ball was a freak. Garvin did not understand its full worth, and it remained for Mathewson to develop and use it intelligently. He achieved the fadeaway by holding the ball precisely as if for a fast outcurve and by releasing it over the side of the middle finger. By the sharp holding pressure at the moment of release he put 'reverse English' on the ball, causing it to revolve rapidly up to a point where it suddenly lost force and dropped, rather than curved, down and in toward the right handed batter and away from the left handed one. Not content with that achievement, Mathewson trained the ball so that by jerking or turning his wrist sharply at the instant he let go of it he could make it 'fade' either way and, even more, could regulate its speed at will.

"The fadeaway operates exactly on the same principle as a billiard ball struck low can be 'drawn.' When the 'draw English' begins to take effect upon the ball it attempts to return to the pitcher, and if the friction surface was solid instead of air it would do so."

Personal Honesty In England.

In his annual report the chief constable of Liverpool says that "in every relation of life there are indications that there is a general decay of personal honesty." He argues that crime, instead of decreasing, is actually increasing in England. The crimes of the animal and the savage crimes against the person he admits have lessened, but crimes against property—the crimes of civilized man—have increased. Further, he says, "There is more of that disregard for the truth which is the initial stage of dishonesty, more carelessness about the honesty of the means employed in getting the better of somebody else which is the principal object of so many transactions between man and man."

Title of Queen Mother.

It is many years since the title of queen mother, by which Queen Alexandra will in future be known, has been borne by the widow of an English king. The consort of William IV. became, of course, at his death queen dowager, while the wives of the four Georges all died before their husbands. The last queen mother, in fact, was Henrietta Maria, wife of Charles I., who lived for years after her son's restoration to the throne. For a previous instance we have to go back to Queen Elizabeth Woodville, widow of Edward IV. and mother of the infant king who was murdered with his brother in the Tower of London.—Dundee Advertiser.

The Wheat Ears.

Edward H. Crump, mayor of Memphis, praised in a recent address those charities that send slum children to the country in the hot weather.

"The pale, lean urchins of the slums," said Mayor Crump, "show in quaint ways how strange they are to the country and its charms. Thus a little country weeker on leaving the train at Green Willows ran ahead of his companions over the meadows. He soon came running back again, shouting excitedly:

"'Hey, fellers, come here quick! Here's a field of shrimps!'

"The field to which he pointed was planted in wheat."—Washington Star.

Books In China.

Missionaries say, according to the Homiletic Review, London, that it is becoming difficult to procure at the bookshops in China any copies of the works of Confucius. Formerly the Confucian classics, with voluminous commentaries, formed the chief stock in trade, the remaining supplies being chiefly composed of fantastic novels which read grotesquely when translated. The change which has taken place is revolutionary, for scientific and mathematical works, translated from English, French and German, together with the stories of Doyle, Dickens, Dumas and Scott, fill the bookstores.

The New Paris.

Not less than $300,000,000 is to be raised by the municipal council of Paris to be spent on the improvement of the city. The Haussmannization of Paris is to be completed. The housebreaker is already at work where the Boulevard Haussmann is to cut its way through to the Boulevard Montmartre and thus make a broad thoroughfare the whole way from the Bois de Boulogne to Pere Lachaise. The region of the Halles is to be improved out of recognition, while a new bridge is to be thrown across the Seine. And these are only examples.

The damage and waste caused by smoke in the larger cities of the United States each year is estimated at $500,000,000 by an official of the Geological Survey, who says his figures are conservative.

HOW HE LOST THE BET.

One on the Arkansas Man Who Knew All Pests.

A St. Louisan who makes a specialty of Ozark stories tells this one of an old colonel who went down into Arkansas a great deal when the railroads were building through there to Texas.

He was not a sweet tempered man, and what he thought of Arkansas he was not soft to remark. One day he was particularly abusing the state, its mosquitoes, bugs and myriad pests. It was a little too strong for the natives, and one of them retorted:

"Don't see why yuh cain't stand it. We live down hyar all right."

"Do you call it livin' down here all right to set aroun' an' slap bugs all day?" the colonel retorted.

"Don't slap bugs all day," the native answered.

"Yes, you do too. I'll bet $5 you can't set there where you are five minutes with your hands folded in your lap."

It was a bet, and the colonel moved around behind the native as that worthy undertook the ordeal. There were a few bugs of one kind and another, but the colonel placed his reliance upon something that was easier calculated to make an impression.

Standing where his adversary could not observe him, he took a small sun glass from his pocket and focused its beam upon the back of the native's neck. It was not very long until the red hair on the neck began to curl up and smoke, and after about two minutes and a half the yellow skin began to squirm. The native gritted his teeth and stood it for three minutes and a half. Then he spoke.

"Colonel," he said, "Ah don' want to seem to hedge on this bet, but Ah'll compromise right now for two dollahs an' a half if you'll let me brush that bald tailed hornet off'n the back o' my neck."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Where They Missed It.

It was their first baby.

The mother was in a perfect rapture.

It was an ugly baby, but she did not know it.

Happy young mother!

All of them are like her.

But the father had dark misgivings.

His salary was only two-ten a week, and babies are expensive luxuries.

Her father was rich, but he had frowned upon their union and had heterodox and heretical notions as to supporting a son-in-law besides.

Cruel old man!

One day when the baby was a month old the father came home from his office in the city and found his wife radiant.

She was not happy when the baby was out of her sight.

"What is it, Jennie?" asked her husband gloomily, for he was yet uncertain as to the blessings conferred by the baby.

He was also sleepy.

"Oh, Charlie!" she chirruped. "I heard from papa today."

Charlie looked gloomier than ever.

"Don't say anything, dear," she pleaded, for she knew her husband's opinion of her father. "He has heard of our baby, and, though he has not yet determined to forgive us, he has sent us a check for £50 for dear baby's sake."

At first the young husband's face lit up with pleasure, then it shadowed again.

"Are you glad, Charlie?" she asked, with a quivering lip.

Then he smiled joyfully.

"Yes, darling," he whispered; "but what a pity it wasn't twins!"—Ally Sloper.

Her Game.

"Your father despises that young man you are engaged to."

"I know it, and so do I."

"Then why in the world are you going to marry him?"

"I wouldn't marry him if he was the last man on earth."

"Then why"—

"Dad will buy me off with an electric runabout in a few days."—Houston Post.

Perplexing Case.

Professor (after calling on Blank and waiting for him to recite)—Seems to me, Blank, you ought to be able to answer my question with all the prompting you are getting back there.

Blank—Well, professor, there's such a difference of opinion around me that—Gargoyle.

Easy Enough.

Just Out From College—The great trouble with you, dad, is you can't say "No." Learn how to say it and you will sleep better. By the way, dad, can you give me an advance?"

"No," said dad, with ease.

The Skeeters Return.

Night time, and the skeeters come.
Round and round they're winging.
Whew! Where are they coming from?
Listen to their singing.

"B-z-z-z-z!" the skeeters say,
Bite all night and sleep all day.
Never can keep them away—
Nets, smoke or kerosene—
Even nip you through a screen.

HIS EDITORIAL POLICY.

Mark Twain Made a Clean Breast of It to His Readers.

Mark Twain took the editorial chair on the Buffalo Express in August, 1869, and this is the paragraph in which he made the readers acquainted with his new responsibility:

"I only wish to assure parties having a friendly interest in the prosperity of this journal that I am not going to hurt the paper deliberately and intentionally at any time. I am not going to introduce any startling reform or in any way attempt to make trouble. I am simply going to do my plain, unpretending duty—when I cannot get out of it. I shall work diligently and honestly and faithfully at all times and upon all occasions—when privation and want shall compel me to do so. In writing I shall always confine myself to the truth, except when it is attended with inconvenience. I shall witheringly rebuke all forms of crime and misconduct, except when committed by the party inhabiting my own vest. I shall not make any use of slang or vulgarity upon any occasion or in any circumstances and shall never use profanity except in discussing house rent and taxes. Indeed, upon second thought, I will not even then, for it is inelegant, un-Christian and degrading. I shall not often meddle with politics, because we have a political editor who is already excellent and only needs a term in the penitentiary to be perfect. I shall not write any poetry unless I conceive a spite against the subscribers."

Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for women's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.

TRIED TO BRIBE GORE

Blind U. S. Senator Makes Charges Against Republicans.

Says Vice-President Sherman Is the Man Higher Up In a Flagrant Attempt to Secure Lands Belonging to Oklahoma Indian Tribes—Attorney Wanted a Fee of Three Millions For Putting Through Deal.

Munskogee, Okla, Aug. 5.—What happened in the private office of United States Senator Thomas P. Gore of Oklahoma, at Washington at noon last May 6th, formed the basis of sensational charges, involving the names of Vice-President Sherman, Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas, Congressman B. S. McGuire of Oklahoma and others, in a hearing before a special Congressional investigating committee here yesterday.

During the thirty or forty minutes of a conference held in that office, Senator Gore testified that he was approached by Jacob L. Hamon, former chairman of the Oklahoma territorial Republican committee and also former chairman of the Oklahoma State Republican committee, and that he was offered a bribe of $25,000 or $50,000 to remove certain legislation pending in Congress, so that $3,000,000 might be paid to J. F. McMurray, an attorney of McAllister, Okla., and his associates.

The money was to represent "attorney's fees of ten per cent. of $30,000,000, which was to be obtained from a New York syndicate for 450,000 acres of coal and asphalt lands now owned by the Choctau and Chickasaw Indians in this state.

THOMAS P. GORE.

Vice-President Sherman was mentioned by Mr. Hamon, Senator Gore testified, as being interested in the land deal to the extent of favoring the approval by Congress of what was known as the McMurray contracts with the Indians.

"When I scoffed at the offer of a bribe, even if it was raised to $50,000, as Hamon suggested it might be," testified Senator Gore, "my visitor (Hamon) at my office in Washington went on to say other members of Congress were interested in the contracts He said Senator Curtis was interested and Congressman McGuire of Oklahoma was interested, and then he mentioned the name of a man higher up in the Government. I was appalled when I learned that name."

"What was the name of that man higher up?" asked Chairman Burke.

"Well," replied the blind Senator, "I don't like to say. Indeed, I could not repeat it without a great deal of reluctance."

"Now, Senator Gore," explained Mr. Burke, "this committee has come here to get all the facts, and we want you to tell all you know."

"Well, as that is the case," responded Mr. Gore, "I will tell all I know. The man mentioned by Hamon as being higher up and interested in the McMurray contracts was Vice-President Sherman."

No further questions were asked concerning the mention of Vice-President Sherman.

What happened in another private room in Washington, where also, it is alleged Hamon made more overtures relative to the land deal, was told by Congressman C. E. Creager, of the third Oklahoma district. Congressman Creager supplemented the testimony of Senator Gore.

He said that on June 16 last, he was invited by Hamon to meet him in a private room at the Occidental Hotel in Washington. Having gone there, Mr. Creager testified, he was informed he could have a substantial "interest" in the land deal, if he could withdraw his opposition to the approval of the McMurray contracts by Congress.

Washington, D.C., Aug. 5.—What is assumed to be Italy's formal demand for the extradition of Porter Charlton, the young American in the Hudson County (N.J.) jail, charged with having killed his wife, Mary Scott Charlton, at Lake Como, Italy, reached the State Department yesterday.

Who Shot The Arrow?

It Offered a Poor Boy an Education Anonymously

By MARY A. BOWERS

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Humphrey Miller was lying on the grass one July afternoon in the center of the square about which clustered the village of Atherton. Humphrey was a typical case of a boy born to the plow who yearned for something better, at least more intellectual. He wished to go to college and study a profession. He was ready to work his way while studying, but just as he was about to matriculate his father died, the farm was sold out under a mortgage, and the boy's mother and sister were thrown upon him for support. To bear this burden and his own as a student appeared to him a matter of sheer impossibility. He must forego his projects, accept a situation offered him in a country store and go to work.

He was about to arise and walk to a corner of the square where the store in question was located to announce that he would begin his duties the next morning when he heard a whizzing sound and saw a short distance from him an arrow standing with its point imbedded in the ground. To the feathered end hung a bit of paper, which, now that the arrow was at rest, floated idly in the wind. Humphrey arose, went to the arrow, broke the string that held the paper and found the following words written in pencil:

> Go to college. Your mother and sister will be provided for.

Humphrey swept with his eye the square and the houses that lined it. The former was empty; the latter showed no sign of the person who had shot the arrow. They were mostly dwellings, and Humphrey knew nearly all of the people who lived in them. He began at once to con over those among whom the mysterious archer might be found. There was Peter Owens, a friend of his father, who was well to do, but Mr. Owens was not a man to hide a charity under a bushel. There was Harvey Dixon, his mother's cousin, but Dixon had all he could do to provide for his own family. There was his intimate friend, Bob Clark, who had been left a legacy by his grandmother. Humphrey knew that Bob when he was younger had been fond of archery. Besides, Bob's sister Lucina had shown by her actions that she admired Humphrey. Had not Lucina something to do with the matter?

Humphrey thought all the rest of the day about the proposed benefaction and in the evening went to see Rose Wyman, a girl in whose judgment he had great confidence, intending to ask her to find out for him who had shot the arrow. Rose did not live on the square and, having no means, could not possibly have had anything to do with the message. He told her of the circumstance and that he could not accept the favor without knowing the donor and agreeing to repay in time the amount expended upon him. Would she help him?

Rose always took time to consider before reaching her decisions. Finally she said:

"If the person who shot the arrow wished to be known he or she would not have taken that means of communicating. To endeavor to discover the donor would be ungrateful in you. My advice to you is to accept the gift as it is offered."

"You've got a lot of horse sense in that head of yours, Rose," was the reply. "I'll take your advice."

Humphrey left her, wondering how a girl no older than himself could have so much foresight. Relying upon her judgment, he acted on her advice, went to college that autumn, rang the college bell for his tuition, did all sorts of odd jobs and in his third and fourth year taught school. Besides this, he read the first books used by students of law.

The promise of his unknown friend to provide for his mother and sister was kept, but the amounts provided were small and at times irregularly paid. Humphrey, remembering Rose's words that it would be ungrateful for him to endeavor to discover who was the donor, told his mother not to look into any checks she might receive and if any came that revealed the secret not to tell him. The remittances were all made by check, signed by the cashier of the Atherton bank. But, obeying her son's instructions, Mrs. Miller never inquired at the bank from whom the money came, though it was not probable if she had done so she would have received any satisfaction.

But the one clew Humphrey possessed as to the identity of the unknown donor—the fact that Bob Clark had been fond of archery when a boy—took possession of the student's mind and kept its place there all through his college course. Attached to the clew was a feeling which kept him in a state of constant perplexity. What if Lucina Clark had persuaded her father to advance the means sent his mother? That Lucina had shown a predisposition for him was evident. At the end of his studies it was to be expected that the secret would come out. If Lucina had been instrumental in the matter it would be incumbent upon him to bestow upon her any return she might desire. Suppose she should wish the offer of himself!

Lucina was an attractive girl, and such a result did not appear especially distasteful to him. Indeed, the association of her with this (to him) great benefaction was gradually drawing him toward her during the whole of his college course. Each year he was growing older and at the time of his graduation had attained the season when one begins to think of his domestic future. His thoughts during this period were all of Lucina Clark.

While in college Humphrey took one or two scholarships which brought him monetary assistance, but beyond this he had too much on his hands to study for prizes or honors in his class. At the time of his graduation nearly all his friends at Atherton, including Lucina Clark, went over to attend the exercises at the college. Rose Wyman had become the principal of a school for small children, and the exercises of her own pupils prevented her from seeing her friend graduate.

Humphrey had studied enough law while in college to enable him to get a situation in an office that would pay him a meager salary and give him such a legal education as may be obtained from office practice. Therefore he did not attend a law school. He preferred to stop the payments of his unknown friend. He therefore directed his mother to return the first payment made after he began his duties and ask the cashier of the bank from which it came if he might not now know to whom he had been indebted. The cashier after taking time for consultation with his principal returned and answered that whenever he felt abundantly able to repay the amount the donor's name would be given him. Until then there could be nothing gained by furnishing the desired information.

Humphrey was much disappointed. He thought of charging Bob Clark with being a party to the matter of his benefactions; but, thinking that if his sister were involved without his knowledge it might raise a delicate complication, he desisted. Since the only clew he had was in connection with the Clark family there was no one else for him to consider. In his perplexity he remembered that he had been guided by Rose Wyman's judgment thus far and it would perhaps be better to take counsel with her before going any further.

Rose confirmed his idea that if Lucina Clark had had anything to do with the matter, should he speak to Bob, complications might arise. Indeed, Rose was of the opinion that if any woman had been the donor the situation might become very embarrassing. She advised Humphrey not to let the benefaction influence him in the matter of love. If he loved Lucina he should tell her so, shutting his eyes to the fact that she might have secured for him the assistance which had enabled him to obtain a college education. If he did not love her for herself without this (hypothetical) favor he should not propose to her on account of it.

Humphrey left his friend, having gained a new item of knowledge. He had spent four years at college and come home to learn that a girl with a common school education had more sense than he had. He felt like saying with the poet, "Knowledge comes, but wisdom lingers."

He made up his mind not to act in the matter without Rose's sanction. But he seriously considered offering himself to Lucina Clark. He believed that there were nine chances in ten that she was at least indirectly concerned in the matter, and if she were the whole would make a very pretty romance. But, not being sure of his love for her, he concluded to wait. It struck him, moreover, that he would not like to confess to the practical Rose that he was influenced by this supposed "pretty romance." He had come to dread Rose's unromantic way of looking at things. He thought that if she had only had a little of the ideal in her nature he might have considered her a sweetheart instead of a friend.

But Humphrey could not make up his mind that he loved Lucina Clark exclusive of the gratitude he felt for her supposed favor. One day he went to Rose and told her this. He also told her that he had borne the uncertainty attached to the secret long enough and it was time he was relieved of it. He also desired to commence to make small payments returning the amount he had received. To do this he must have the name of the donor and he had been told that it would at such time be proper for him to make inquiries to that end.

Rose considered awhile replying, then advised him that if such was his intention he might with propriety ask the cashier if he would reveal the secret. Humphrey was so delighted that he was about to go to the bank at once when Rose stopped him.

"You have plenty of time," she said. "I make it the rule of my life to sleep over important decisions whenever it is possible. Go tomorrow."

"Just like you, Rose," he exclaimed—"no impulse, no romance! But you make up the deficiency in mighty good sense."

Humphrey went to the bank next morning and asked for the name of his benefactor. He expected that the cashier would ask for time in which to get the consent of his principal. In this Humphrey was mistaken. He had already been authorized.

"Rosalie Wyman," was the reply.

Humphrey gaped at the man for a while and then without a word rushed out of the bank and did not stop till he found Rose.

"Rose," he said, "I would like to torture you and then burn you at the stake. How did you do it?"

"Worked and saved."

"Well, all I have to say to you is that if you have any use for a natural born fool there's one at your disposal."

"Think over it; there's plenty of time."

"Not one second."

"Well, then, there's been a long wait for me. I'm glad to have it over."

Hearing of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, I thought they were worthy of a trial. My surprise was indeed great. From the very first I experienced relief. Continuing with them I found my troubles were slowly but surely leaving me, and before long I once more knew what it was to be free from the harassing effects of the ailments that had long sickened and weakened me. So great is my faith in Dr. Morse's Indian Pills that I shall never on any account be without them."

John Lewis & Co

A new machine separates the whites and yolks of opened eggs by allowing the former to pass through a sieve and automatically ejects bad eggs, which will not separate, their weight tripping a tray.

The Broken Trust

"It is all forgotten," she said, "and was forgotten soon as it was done."

"There have been great influences over me," he said, mournfully. "Yours has always been the best. There will be no one to say a prayer for me but you. Say one for me now; fold your hands over my head, and say: 'God bless and pardon you, Paul.'"

She did exactly as he asked her; then she kissed the dull eyes, pale lips, with a passion of love and grief that could not be put into words; kissed it as mothers do the face of a dead child; clinging to him and crying;

"My love— my love— you are all mine again."

He drew himself from her gentle hold at last.

"Esther," he said, "they have given me one hour in which to decide my future life. I must have time to think. Half of the hour is over. You have been true and faithful to me when others would have fled in disgust and anger; you must leave me now, my only friend, while I think."

He could decide upon nothing while that fair, loving face pleaded to him; he could not think calmly of the different lives that lay before him, while her sweet eyes, from which all storm and gloom had vanished, sought his.

For even while her arms were around him and her sweet, prayerful words fell like music on his ears, even then Paul Lynne had resolved that, let him take what path in life he might, Esther should not share it. Her faithful love touched him, her devotion comforted him even in that dark hour, but he resolved never when that hour was over, to look upon the face of Esther Bruce again.

"I will leave you," she said, "but I shall not go from the house. You are my charge now, Paul; when the hour is ended I will return. Whatever else you have to suffer, let me stand by your side and share it."

She liked to remember afterward that when she opened the door he followed her, and raising her fair, flushed face, kissed it passionately and never saw it again.

He was alone at last. The chairs in which his judges sat were still ranged round the table; the portrait lay there—they had trusted him implicitly—even the confession he had written down and signed was left. One and all as they quitted the room the four gentlemen had thought more of him than any one else.

There was Alan Wayne's fair, calm face looking at him; the same eyes that had so often smiled into his smiled now; the lips that dying had trusted him to promise, he had promised. There smiled the same face from which he had lifted the white cloth and marvelled at its sculptured beauty, while his life lay in ruins around him.

What should he do? From the moment he saw that paper in Mr. Grey's hands he knew all further concealment was useless. They seemed inclined not only to show him mercy but even the means to start him afresh in life. Perhaps Captain Chandos, who seemed so liberal, might give him three or four thousand pounds.

Bah! what was that to the man who had been master of Carsdale, whose yearly income had been counted by thousands, who had given as much for a jewel, when it pleased him, or for a picture that suited his taste.

Could he renounce all the luxuries, the magnificence, the costly comforts, of his present life. Could he drink black coffee and eat bread? Could he endure sordid miseries, privation, poverty and work?

He looked at his soft jeweled hands and he remembered the time when he dug and reaped and sowed and chopped down huge trees. Could he do it again?

No! as the future rose vividly before him, the details grew more and more hateful.

What were those words in Esther's Bible, the words that had risen before him in letters of fire?

"The wages of sin is death"

"Death!" The word had a horrible sound, but what was death annihilation. Some philosophers said new life. Merciful men and women taught the passage through which men passed to judgment. He tried to say to himself that the old philosophers were right, but in his heart he knew the truth—he knew that judgment followed death.

The word fascinated him; surely it was better than such a life as he must lead.

Death let it be; men spoke mercifully of the dead, who never spared the living.

RUPTURE IS POSSIBLE

Vatican May Break Off Relations With Spain.

Papal Nuncio to the Spanish Court Is Preparing to Leave In Case Premier Canalejas Goes Any Further In His Anti-Catholic Policy—Bloodshed Is Feared at San Sebastian When Clericals Celebrate Sunday.

Rome, Aug. 5.—Monseignor Vico, the papal nuncio to the Spanish court, was given instructions from the Vatican to be ready to leave Madrid at a moment's notice, in case of an unfavorable issue to the negotiations.

This preparation for a complete rupture of diplomatic relations between Spain and the Vatican would indicate that little is hoped from the answer which Cardinal Merry del Val is now drafting. Although the Vatican is earnestly trying its best to avoid a complete break with Spain, Cardinal Merry del Val fears that Senor Canalejas, the Spanish Premier, will be forced, in order to satisfy his extremist supporters, to still further accentuate his anti-Catholic policy, and the cardinal is preparing for the worst.

The Giornale D'Italia publishes an interview with Cardinal Vicenzo Vannutelli, who describes Premier Canalejas as "a terrible man," adding that it is impossible that King Alfonso approves his anti-clerical policy.

Candinal Vannutelli goes on to point out that the King is a fervent Catholic by sentiment and tradition but that he is too young to grapple with the situation and he has been seriously embarrassed.

With reference to the report that the King of Portugal is to visit the King of Italy in 1911, thus disregarding the prohibition of the Vatican, Cardinal Vannutelli considers this most unlikely, as Portugal has just appointed a representative to the Holy See.

May Be a Red Sunday.

Madrid, Aug. 5.—A renewed and formal prohibition of the proposed manifestation of the clerical forces at San Sebastian, the summer capital, next Sunday, was issued yesterday by the Minister of the Interior. The organizers of the demonstration nevertheless persist in their plans and as the Republican leaders are arranging an anti-clerical demonstration at San Sebastian on the same day, great apprehension prevails.

The civil authorities are considering legal prosecutions against the organizers of the proposed Catholic manifestations and troops are in readiness to enter the summer capital at any time.

Britain's Power Questioned.

The Hague, Aug. 5.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Dealing with the first question before the tribunal as to the right of the United States to have regulations made for fisheries, Elihu Root said that the two nations approached this subject from entirely different points of view. Great Britain approached it from the standpoint of her sovereignty, while the States did so from their guaranteed right.

It was for the tribunal to draw the line between what is competent for Great Britain to do in the exercise of her sovereign power and what was incompetent for Great Britain to do with respect to the modification of American treaty rights.

He contended these rights could not be restricted or destroyed by regulations made by one who gave the rights, nor could the grantor alone be allowed to say what was reasonable, fair, appropriate and necessary for fisheries which the United States fishermen have been admitted to share in.

Turtle Hatched In His Stomach.

Pittsburg, Aug. 5.—William Douglass, of the north side, is dead as the result of a turtle's egg hatching in his stomach. A few weeks ago Douglass partook of some turtle soup. Four days after taking the soup he became ill and numerous physicians were unable to diagnose his disease. An autopsy was performed and a partially formed turtle, almost as large as a hen's egg, was found in his stomach.

Wheat Cutting at Brandon.

Brandon, Aug. 5.—Wheat cutting will be fairly general in this district by Saturday. Some are already at work. The crop will yield a fair average.

Railway Navvies Scarce.

Ottawa, Aug. 5.—Contractors along the line of the Transcontinental Railway and the G.T.P. are still making representations here as to the scarcity of labor. The relaxed immigration regulations have bettered conditions somewhat, but there is still a call for men.

Conservation of Fish.

Ottawa, Aug. 5.—Owing to the failure of the United States Congress to take action, the conservation of food fish in the great lakes will be delayed for at least another year.

TWO WORDS DEFINED.

Difference Between a Sanitarium and a Sanatorium.

The words "sanitarium" and "sanatorium" are popularly understood to have the same meaning and are generally used interchangeably when designating or describing places of refuge for sick people, but there is, in fact, quite a distinction between the meaning of the two words. In answer to a correspondent on this subject the Literary Digest says:

"The distinction between these words lies in the fact that they are derived from two different Latin roots. 'Sanatorium' is derived from the late Latin sanatorius, meaning health giving. The term relates specially to 'an institution for treatment of disease or care of invalids, especially an establishment employing natural therapeutic agents or conditions peculiar to the locality or some specific treatment or treating particular diseases.' On the other hand, 'sanitarium' is derived from the Latin sanitas, from sanus, meaning whole or sound. 'Sanitarium' relates more specifically to 'a place where the hygienic conditions are preservative of health as distinguished from one where therapeutic agencies are employed.' Hence it is the province of a 'sanitarium' to preserve health, that of a 'sanatorium' to restore it. Care should be exercised in combining the proper vowels in these two words in order to indicate correctly the derivation."

A Whistling Kettle.

A teakettle that whistles cheerily to let the housewife know that the water is boiling and that the gas may be turned down has been introduced in England and is meeting with favor. The kettle has no lid through which the scalding steam may issue, but is filled and emptied through the spout, which is sufficiently large. The absence of the lid not only prevents scalding, but keeps any of the steam from escaping, which means that the water will reach the boiling point much more quickly than in the ordinary kettle. In the spout is a stopper which contains the whistle, and this is the safety valve of the kettle as well as the means by which announcement is made that the water is boiling.

Klondike Treasures.

"Yukon territory, with the exception of a few towns on the fringe of the country, is still an unexplored wilderness," says a Dawson man. "No one knows what mineral treasures are still hidden in the wilds of the interior. It is believed by miners in Dawson that the gold mining of the country has merely been begun and that immense deposits of the precious metal are yet to be discovered. Coal in great quantities is believed to be in the interior of the territory. More people are coming to Dawson every year, and the town is as much a civilized place as Washington, with the exception that there are not so many comforts and conveniences."—Washington Post.

Even In His Day.

Croesus was complaining of the high cost of living.

"The worst of it, though," he grumbled, "is that I don't know whether it's caused by the tariff or an oversupply of gold."

Bitterly regretting the necessity for economizing, he canceled his order for a mess of ortolans' tongues and told the waiter to bring him an omelet of humming birds' eggs.—Chicago Tribune.

Not For Him.

"Dubley wants a comedy part," said the first member of the amateur theatrical club. "He thinks he'd be a success as a comedian."

"Nonsense!" exclaimed the other. "Why, everybody would laugh at him." —Catholic Standard and Times.

A Fine Word.

"Pa, what is the meaning of verisimilitude?"

"I don't know exactly, but it is a fine word to drop in where you can't think of any other that seems to be necessary."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Not Wholly Proficient.

Mother (speaking of his playmate to her own darling, just learning to whistle).—Can Harold whistle?

Four-year-old (contemptuously)—Whistle? No; he can only make the hole.—Harper's Weekly.

RIDING THE AIR.

The First Sensation That Comes In an Aeroplane Trip.

"All who have had the good fortune to ride in an aeroplane," said one of 'em the other day, "unite in their description of their first sensation. There is no jerk in the starting, though the machine may leap forward with a powerful swoop. Then comes—with some—a brief sense of nausea, a feeling as if the ground were dropping away from beneath.

"A slight thrust of the lever lifts the flying machine's head; the ground drops away still faster. Then, as the aeroplane soars higher, its occupant's eyes adjust themselves to the proper focus, and the surface of the earth below seems to be ripping past at railway speed.

"By this time you have forgotten the clack of the noisy motor, the flap and whir of the propellers, the grinding of the chain and sprocket gear that drives them. All vibration has practically ceased, and you float along with a sense of springy ease and buoyancy such as you can gain from no other means of locomotion. That you are flying fast you know only from the roar of the wind in your ears and the slight difficulty you have in filling your lungs with air—the same sensation one gets in racing against the wind in an automobile on a good highway.

"Then comes the first turn. The machine rises to it, taking its own angle sideways, just as an automobile leans on the banked curve of a racing track. You have no sense of leaning sideways, though—no feeling that you must tilt yourself as you do when an automobile turns a corner, for you sit upright, the aeroplane slanting of its own volition to the necessary angle and slanting you with it.

"A glass of water set on the floor of the flier could be carried round curve after curve and still not lose a drop."—New York Telegraph.

COTTONSEED FLOUR.

The Wonderful Qualities Claimed For the New Product.

A Texan writer says cottonseed flour is to be added to the nation's dietary. It has been tried, and it is said to be an excellent food. It contains 54 per cent protein, 7.17 per cent starch and practically no fat. It is alleged it has a nutritive value more than five times that of wheat flour, nearly three times that of lean round of beef and from three to thirty times that of many of the best known and most commonly used articles of food.

By the addition of cottonseed flour to the national dietary millions of dollars will be added to the income of southern cotton growers and the tendency of some of the wheat operators to interfere with the price of bread will be checked. To the discovery of the nutritive values in cotton the country is indebted to Patten, whose attempt to monopolize "the staff of life" led many scientists to make inquiries and conduct experiments with a view to obtaining a food that might be a substitute for wheat or an auxiliary of the wheat supply. That it should have been found in cotton is somewhat surprising to those who thought the possibilities of this wonderful plant had been exhausted when cottonseed oil had been introduced. Great is King Cotton, that can both clothe and feed mankind.—Los Angeles Herald.

Her Baby Boy.

"If you have any doubt as to the healthfulness of Bulgaria and the sturdiness of its people, look at this picture." This message was inscribed on a picture postcard received a few days ago from Pavelsko, a little village in that country. The picture shows a peasant woman standing at a rustic hedge, spinning flax by the most ancient method, with the fiber held over her shoulder by a forked branch. Behind the woman stands a stout man of more than the average height, wearing a full gray beard. Under this picture is the legend: "Baba Vasilka, 126 years old, and her baby boy, Todor, who is now 101 years old. They have always lived in Pavelsko."—New York Tribune.

Forbidden Tinder Boxes.

Six large factories and three smaller workshops in Austria are working at high pressure, writes our Vienna correspondent, to meet the orders for the tiny pocket tinder box which many smokers are now using instead of matches. The production is between 8,000 and 10,000 daily. In Spain, Portugal, France and Roumania the import of the tinder boxes is forbidden. Italy puts a tax of 1s. 3d. on each box in order to make the price of the tinder box equal to that of the number of matches, estimated at 3,000, that would be needed to replace the new apparatus. The minister of finance in Austria is considering the question of taxing the boxes.—London Mail.

The Right Way to Water a Lawn.

Lawns are frequently damaged by the droughts of summer, and they are also badly injured by the pernicious watering they too frequently receive. There is only one way to water a lawn. That is to soak it so that the soil will be moistened for a foot or more deep and watering will not be needed for a week. Most people water a lawn every day whether the grounds need it or not, but they give only enough water to wet the surface. This practice results in the plants producing their working roots near the surface, and when the family goes away for the customary two weeks' vacation in the summer the lawn burns up brown.—Suburban Life.

TO KEEP A WIFE'S LOVE.

Simple Rules Warranted to Produce a Darby and Joan Life.

If your wife does not love you as she did when you were married, you must have fallen off in your attentions. Remember that a wife is only a sweetheart a few years later. Make believe that she is still your sweetheart.

When you go home from work have the maid send your name up just as in the old days. A wife likes these little attentions, and if she is the right sort she will send down word that she will be down in a few minutes. Then put a five pound box of candy in a prominent place and wait patiently. When you hear her coming, run to meet her and kiss her in a manly way as if you had waited all day for the privilege. Then give her the candy. If there is but one chair in the room let her sit in it while you stand. Now tell her the events of the day in the office in a witty way that will appeal to her love of fun.

When the dinner bell rings hand her a bunch of American Beauties, pull out her chair for her and tie her napkin round her neck yourself. Then, with a low bow, seat yourself opposite her and begin to praise the food. Ask her to make sprightly remarks and laugh heartily at them. Urge her to tell you about the cook's doings. Just before dessert show her the orchestra seats you have bought for the opera that night.

Never light a cigar until you ask her whether she objects to smoke. She may always say no, but there is no telling when her taste may change, and no gentleman will smoke when his wife objects to it. Give her twice as much as she wants for an allowance and always forestall any requests she may be about to make.

In this way you will retain your wife's love and forever lead a Darby and Joan life.—Charles Battell Loomis in Delineator.

The Modern Daughter.

"What time did you get to bed last night, Matilda?" inquired the young woman's father.

"Parent," replied the haughty girl, "if you will address me by my right name I will endeavor to answer your somewhat abrupt query. I do not answer to Matilda because my name is Mathilde."

"Very well, Mateeld, go ahead with your answer."

"I do not know what time I retired," the fair girl responded. "Mr. Robinson Jones offered to remain here until the appearance of the comet."

"Good gracious," cried the excitable parent, "it must have been half past three!"

"For that," said the girl with calm indifference, "you must blame the comet."

And she swept haughtily from the room.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

His Dilemma.

"Don't you think," gurgled the sweet young thing sentimentally, "that those opening lines of Tennyson's 'Break, Break, Break,' are awfully sad?"

"Yes," replied her swain, who dabbled in Wall street, "but not half so sad as 'Broke, broke, broke!'"

And he gnashed his teeth as he remembered his promise to take her to the opera next night.—Young's Magazine.

I would not be a butterfly;
  I envy not the bird.
The wings that lift him to the sky—
I hope to have some by and by,
  But that may be deferred.

Mere wings, for all the poets say,
  Would be more toil than gain,
But when the thing has "come to stay,"
When it's quite safe, I hope I may Possess an aeroplane.

The stranger beating at my door
  Whom I have cause to shun
Would not annoy me as before.
I should not shiver at the bore
  Or tremble at the dun,

But lightly to my rooftree spring
  And on mine airy craft
Serenely from his presence wing,
Leaving him there to knock and ring
  Till he were dead or daft.

And then to sally far and wide,
  To see as from a cloud
The haunts of privacy or pride,
Places one wants to see inside
  Because it's not allowed;

The grounds about the ducal hall,
  The parvenu's abode,
The park, the palace, most of all
The nunnery behind the wall,
  So baffling from the road—

In truth, 'twould be a dear delight
  These hidden realms to see;
But, oh, it is the secret night
When the advantages of flight
  Mostly appeal to me!

There is a certain man I hate.
  With divers plot and plan
I have schemed early and schemed late,
Seeking a just and adequate
  Revenge upon that man.

Yet one by one they came to naught.
  Some were too gentle; some
Involved the risk of being caught,
Which wouldn't do at all. I thought
  My chance would never come.

But now—some night I hope to go
  In one of these machines,
Armed with a good stout bomb, and, oh,
Rapture! With any luck I'll blow
  That man to smithereens!

Peterboro Crew Could Not "Come Back."

Peterboro', August 4.—For some reason or other that is not explicitly stated, it is said, the striking crew of the G. T. R., Toronto flyer, which leaves Peterboro' at 7.10 in the morning, have not been taken on their train, although they expected to go back with the other men who resumed their duties on the settlement of the strike. The men of this train, Conductor Haskill, Baggageman Monk, are the only Peterboro' employees of the road who have not been taken back.

They were informed by Trainmaster McMillan that their services were not required at present, and he acted on instructions from Divisional Superintendent Lynch.

What the cause of this turn of affairs is, is not definitely known, it is claimed. It is stated that the strike breakers were taken on on a three months' contract, and this is given as the reason, but it seems strange that this should apply to certain trains and not to others.

This condition of affairs existed at several points on the Grand Trunk system.

Many Local Strikers Still Out of Work.

The situation at the station here in regard to old employees returning to work is not satisfactory to all concerned. Whilst the yardmen who were on strike have resumed their former positions, comparatively few trainhands have been taken back, although all have reported for duty.

In the meantime freight trains are moving quite regularly, both eastward and westward.

Good for Booth,

They had a meeting today and publicly expressed appreciation of their employer's generous action.

A Bad Mix-Up.

Lindsay Warder: While coming from Toronto on the express Saturday evening Conductor Wheatley got himself into a bad mixup. After leaving Toronto he collected all the tickets, but he forgot to consider how the people were going to return home. The passengers became anxious and asked him for their return stubs. He was puzzled for a few minutes, but Roadmaster Hee's came to the rescue and put him on the right track. He had a lovely time sorting out a couple of hundred tickets and returning them to the proper people. This is only one of the many peculiar incidents that has been occurring among the company's new conductors.

A Notable Visitor.

Hon. Dr. Rheaume, Provincial Minister of Public Works, accompanied by his son, was in the city yesterday. The Hon. gentleman later in the day left in the Government boat Navarch for a trip down the bay on business connected with the department. Capt. Hunter, local Inspector of Game and Fish, accompanied the party.

Girls Still Missing.

The two girls, Myrtle Bird and Vivian Melvin, who yesterday morning unceremoniously left the Children's Shelter here where they were being cared for, have not yet returned. Their homes are respectively at Peterboro' and Campbellford, and it is possible that they have gone there.

Case-Tenny.

On August 2nd, a quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Tenny, when their daughter, Carrie Alice, was united in marriage to Charles Watson Case, M.D. After spending a few days in Canandaigua, N. Y., they will return to Onstead, Mich., where they will reside.

Contract Awarded For Electric Plant At Local Pumphouse

The special committee of the City Council, which was appointed some time ago to consider the matter of installing an electric plant at the pump house, has had several sessions. Last evening another meeting was held, which resulted in definite action being taken. It was decided that a motor of 115 horse power be installed, also a pump having a capacity of 70,000 gallons per hour. For the installation of the same the Canada General Electric Company and the Canada Foundry Company, which is virtually one concern, of Toronto, was awarded the contract, the same to cost $2,660. As soon as the contract has been drawn up and signed by the corporation and the company, the work of installing the new plant will be proceeded with. It is confidently expected that when the proposed plant is in operation a considerable saving will be affected.

J. C. Eaton Will Use Hastings Marble.

Mr. J. C. Eaton is erecting a fine new million dollar residence in Toronto and the marble to be used in the interior decorations will be taken from the Bancroft quarries. These quarries are being operated by Hodge & Son, of Toronto, Mr. T. H. Morrison, of Bancroft, being the local manager. The marble from these quarries is proving to be of a very fine quality and, it is claimed, is equal to the finest Italian marble.

A Word of Warning.

Post office box holders should remember that if the post master makes a mistake putting mail into wrong boxes, the postal regulations require people to examine their mail before leaving the office and should they find a piece not addressed to them they must return it at once or be liable to a fine of $200. The postmaster is exonerated from the mistake.

Fire in Trenton.

Trenton, August 4 — Mr. Geo. A White and sons sustained a severe loss in the destruction by fire of a large amount of material such as shingles, roofing material, linseed oil binder twine, cement, etc., stored on premises back of Mr. White's residence. The fire must have got considerable headway before being discovered, as it was noticed by two firemen at the Gilbert Hotel Corner, who gave the alarm. At about the same time Mr. Douglas White was awakened and was just in time to save the two horses and three rigs in the barn. The firemen worked very hard, having to drag the hose from one section of the fire to the other. Loss about $8000 partly covered by insurance. Besides the stables and store sheds the fire consumed a vacant house belonging to Mr. White and also gutted a house owned and occupied by Mrs. Heagle. An automobile owned by a Toronto gentleman which had been stored under the shed since the day previous was totally destroyed.

Charbonneau Paid Costs & Was Let Go.

END OF CASE AGAINST A BROCKVILLE MAN WHO WAS CHARGED WITH INTERFERENCE BY G T. R.

Before Magistrate Masson this morning, Arthur V. Charbonneau, of Brockville, who was recently a G. T. R. striker, was charged with having, on July 21st last, unlawfully interfered with a G. T. R. employee in the discharge of his duties

Mr. E. J. Butler appeared on behalf of the G. T. R. and Mr. Carnew for the accused.

Mr. E. Brewer, a car inspector, in his evidence stated that on the morning of July 21st he came into Belleville yard with a freight train, bound eastward Charbonneau met Brewer when he got off the train and advised not to go any further with the train. At that moment some five or six other strikers surrounded Brewer and he was prevented from getting on the train, which was pulling out

Four other G. T. R. employees swore that Brewer was unable to get upon the train owing to being surrounded by strikers. They did not, however, see Charbonneau use any violence towards him.

Charbonneau, in his evidence denied that he was in collusion with the other men, whom he did not know He simply spoke to Brewer and advised him not to proceed any further with the train.

After argument the Magistrate intimated that, as the strike was over, the matter might well be settled by Charbonneau paying the costs, which he did and was allowed his liberty.

BANK MEN IN COURT

Magistrate's Decision in Lindsay Conspiracy Case Postponed.

A. B. MGill, J. J. Fleury and J. L. Coulter of Lindsay Branch of the Home Bank Face Charge of Attempting to Impair Reputation of Rival Concern — They Acted In Good Faith, Says Their Counsel.

Lindsay, Aug. 5.—"It is a serious matter. I want to look into the evidence carefully," said Magistrate Alex. Jackson yesterday afternoon in deferring until Wednesday morning next his decision in regard to the accusations brought by the Farmers' Bank of Canada against three former employes.

The formal charge reads:

"That A. B. McGill, J. J. Fleury and J. L. Coulter, of the Town of Lindsay, in the County of Victoria, and at other places in the Province of Ontario, in the year 1910, prior to the laying of this information, did unlawfully and wickedly conspire, confederate and agree with one another and each with the other by deceit and falsehood and other fraudulent means to defraud the Farmers' Bank of Canada, and to injuriously affect the credit and standing of the Farmers' Bank."

Magistrate Jackson declined to try the case, but held merely a preliminary investigation. Crown Attorney Devlin was assisted by H. H. Dewart, K.C., of Toronto, former county crown attorney there, and who is acting as counsel for the Farmers' Bank. Thos. Stewart, counsel for the accused, objected, but was told that, as it was only an enquiry, it was permissible. For the same reason the defence submitted no evidence. The court was crowded.

The allegations that McGill, former local manager of the Farmers' Bank; Fleury, his accountant, and Coulter, former manager at Nestleton, conspired to resign from the Farmers' Bank and spread certain information calculated to cause depositors to withdraw, and to send their custom to the Home Bank, into the service of which the defendents entered, the Home having but recently opened up a local office. It is claimed that the defendants approached depositors, some of them late at night, and intimated that the bank and its management was not especially "safe." As a result, some $50,000 was withdrawn, some of which has been returned, but most of which has gone to the Home Bank, of which McGill is now manager.

Mr. Dewart first examined J. G. Fitzgibbon, chief inspector of the Farmers' Bank, as to the soundness of the bank's stock. Witness said he had never heard of it selling below 25. Evidence was inter submitted that defendants had told certain persons it had been down to 11 and 10. The inspector said that not 100 shares had changed hands in the past four months. The stock paid dividends at 4 per cent. per annum, the last payment being on July 4. An action for $150,000 had been brought against the Farmers' Bank at Syracuse, N.Y., but it had been set side, thrown out by the grand jury, no injunction or judgment being given against the bank.

During the day several men told of having been advised to withdraw their deposits. Gordon Dickson of Belleville, who succeeded McGill, said that on June 29, when he arrived at Lindsay, McGill had said there'd been a run, and that he hadn't said a word against the bank. Dickson told of McGill coming into the Janetville office with a check and passbook belonging to a depositor, James Baxter, and demanding the money. He also said that Fleury, then in the Home Bank, brought in eight or twelve checks; signed by customers of the Farmers' Bank. Roy Evans, now manager of the Farmers' Bank at Nestleton, said that Fleury, after going to the Home Bank, brought fifteen or twenty checks to the Lindsay office on accounts in the Farmers' Bank, amounting to seventeen thousand dollars. It was then Evans had informed the head office, although McGill had tried to prevent him.

The defence as outlined was that McGill had persuaded his friends to deposit their savings in the Farmers' Bank, and that, hearing certain rumors he had become alarmed and had simply given his friends a warning. Coulter had also persuaded some of his friends to deposit in the bank so he helped spread the alarm. They felt that having got the men to deposit with them that they would be blamed if anything happened. McGill had heard that the stock was away down around $11 per share. The par value is $100.

He also heard about an injunction that had been filed in Syracuse, N.Y., against the bank for $150,000. Added to information that alleged that other branches were not doing well, McGill thought the institution was in dangerous shape.

McGill had decided that the depositors would blame him rightly if, having heard those things, he did not put them in a position to protect themselves.

"McGill, in good conscience, resolved that, having persuaded his friends to put money in the bank, and feeling doubtful as to the safety of the money, it was his duty to put the men out of that position," said Thomas Stewart, counsel for the defendants "They put their money there through confidence in him, not through confidence in the Farmers' Bank."

The Dragon Screen

It Led to the Discovery of a Lost Fortune

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

When the last wagon load of furniture had turned out of the avenue into the highroad and the auctioneer had furled his red flag and driven away from the old mansion set among tall growing locusts Deborah Ames smiled quizzically at her niece.

"I suppose you think my heart's broken, Polly," she said quietly.

"I saved what I wanted, dear."

Polly Ames stared. "You are trying to be brave, you dear thing!" she cried impulsively. "If you had only listened and had let me go to work you could have saved all the things that you have always had about you."

"And of which I am dreadfully tired," interposed her aunt, with sudden energy. "Larkin says the things brought two hundred and fifty, and that will keep us a year, Polly. You see, father left the place free and clear because he did not want his daughters to work for a living. He said the income from the securities would be sufficient to support us for life. But we were never able to find any trace of them. You remember how poor mother and I searched for the papers up to the very day of her death, and I look and look now, though I am very doubtful whether father ever had them, and yet"—

"I could teach music," said Polly mutinously for the hundredth time in the past year.

"My dear," cried Miss Deborah for the hundredth time, "your grandfather Ames left an ample fortune—enough to educate you and support us for the rest of our days."

"Where is it, then?" Polly saw her own flushed face in the long mirror and beside it Aunt Deborah's tired countenance, and her tender heart smote her. "Don't let us talk about it any more tonight, Aunt Deb. You will sleep on the davenport tonight? You sold the very beds, you know," suggested Polly gently.

"Come with me, my child. You have not made a trip to the south garret this many a day, I'll warrant," smiled Miss Deborah.

In this attic were many strangely sheeted forms that crowded the small space.

Carefully Miss Deborah withdrew the dusty sheets and, rolling them into balls, disclosed a closely packed mass of furniture.

Polly gazed open mouthed. "What is it, Aunt Deb? Where did you get it? Why—it's solid mahogany! Oh, the dear tables—and the highboys! Chippendale—and Sheraton—and real colonial!" Her pretty nose was poked here and there among the treasures, and her charming face was reflected from a dozen dim mirrors.

Miss Deborah smiled sadly. "It is my very own, Polly, dear. It was left to me by my great-aunt Hester, and it has remained stored away here for twenty-five years. I planned to give this to you and Dick for a wedding gift, but I shall need it for awhile. After I am gone"—

Polly stopped her sentence with a kiss. "After you are gone, indeed!" she cried indignantly. "You know that you are to live with us as soon as ever Dick makes enough money to start a home. What a beautiful house we will have—eh, Aunt Deb?"

She waltzed the stiff backed spinster about the limited space until Miss Deborah's flying skirt caught in a projecting nail and dragged clattering to the floor a tall screen whose frame was of carved ebony paneled with heavy Chinese embroidery, now faded and dull.

Polly picked it up with a little exclamation of delight. "What is this, Aunt Deb? Why have you kept this lovely screen hidden?"

"Great-aunt Hester left it to my father, dear. He was very fond of it, and for years it stood close to his desk. When he was quite helpless we used it to encircle his chair and ward off the drafts. It grew quite old and shaky and needed mending, and as no one but a skilled workman could mend the delicate carving it was placed up here after father's death, and of course nothing has been done to it since. All the broken bits of carving are in that little bag tied to the top," explained Miss Deborah.

"Can't I take it downstairs, Aunt Deb? I'm sure Dick can mend it—he is so clever. And I will mend the broken embroidery."

"Very well, dear. Tomorrow Norah's husband will come and move this furniture downstairs; tonight, I fear, we must sleep on the davenport. It is growing late, Polly; let us get downstairs and see about supper."

Together they dragged the heavy screen down to the parlor, where Polly once more fell into ecstasies over its delicate carving and fine inlay of ivory and mother of pearl.

After supper came Dick Fraser, and Polly waited for him in the deep veranda and told him of the sale of Miss Deborah's furniture.

Dick flushed hotly and sank into a low chair with a quick gesture of impatience. "It's a darned shame!" he cried angrily. "Here am I, a great, strong, husky chap, sitting around waiting for people to come and be cured of their ills, while Miss Deborah needs a man to go to work and pull her out of her financial difficulties! I wish I'd never studied medicine. I wish I'd learned to be a carpenter—or something else!"

"Fiddle-de-dee, Dr. Fraser!" cried Polly impudently. "If it were not for you what would become of all the poor sick people in Little River?"

"What has become of them now?" inquired Dr. Fraser. "They don't fill my waiting room. They don't jingle my telephone bell, nor do they call me up in the dead of night. I wish they would!" he ended viciously.

"It's been a healthy winter," comforted Polly, "and you know Dr. Brown is going to sell his practice and go away, and there will be a chance for you then."

"I'm afraid not, honey. If I could buy the doctor's practice and his automobile and his whole outfit I'd be made, but what's the use of talking? Let us go in and see Miss Deborah. Perhaps I can help her a bit. You must be at sixes and sevens."

"Norah has worked like a major. We shall camp tonight, and tomorrow we are to have—never mind! If you come over to tea you shall have a lovely surprise!" promised Polly as they entered the house.

When they sat around the cozy little fire in the back parlor Polly brought in the dragon screen and showed it to her lover.

"Of course you can mend it, Dick," she said confidently.

Dr. Fraser did not reply. He was examining the fine carving with the eye of a lover. His skillful fingers itched to handle brush and glue pot and restore to its original beauty the dragon screen.

"I shall mend the embroidery," explained Polly, thrusting inquisitive fingers into the various holes and rips in the panels. "Look at this scaly old dragon, Dick! He is fairly peeling off."

"And this dull green eye needs to be brightened," remarked the doctor absently.

Polly brought a basket of silks and sat down near the light and gravely matched her skeins against the faded embroidery of the screen. Miss Deborah, knitting near the fire, watched her with tender interest. These two young people were the very mainspring of her existence now that so much of her life had become merged in the past.

The light shone on the dragon screen, and the golden dragons glittered until it almost seemed as if their scales moved.

"How father loved that old screen!" mused Miss Deborah.

"Will it not be lovely to have it around once more?" asked Polly, turning her head, and then the screen slipped from her grasp, and she caught wildly at the panel on which she had been working. She caught a torn fragment of one of the golden dragons, and the silk, rotten with age, fell apart in her grasp, showing the white cotton lining.

Dick jumped to catch the screen, and as he righted it there slipped from the torn panel a long, legal looking envelope bearing some memoranda in a crabbed handwriting.

"By George!" shouted the young man excitedly. "What have we here—treasure trove? Polly, girl—catch—it's yours."

Polly's eager fingers caught the envelope and gave one glance at the superscription; then she flew across the room to Miss Deborah's side.

"The lost securities!" she cried. "See, Aunt Deb; grandfather has them labeled. How do you suppose they came to be in such a place, and suppose we had never found the screen?"

"Suppose I had not sold the furniture!" quavered Miss Deborah as she opened the bulky envelope and extracted the beautifully engraved certificates. "Do look at these, Dick—I'm so excited I can't read a thing! Father must have slipped them in there absentmindedly those last days before he was taken ill."

In a very awed voice Dr. Fraser read the list of valuable securities, and when he finished with a long drawn whistle of astonishment Miss Deborah and Polly were weeping in each other's arms.

"Won't the old house look perfectly lovely?" Polly was sobbing. "All the beautiful old fashioned furniture from the garret and"—

"And Dick shall have the south wing for his offices, and the carriage house can be made into a very respectable garage," added Miss Deborah, straightening her spectacles.

"What?" demanded Dr. Fraser very independently. "I couldn't, Miss Deborah—Polly—I want to earn my own home."

"You will buy out Dr. Brown's practice," said Miss Deborah decidedly. "You can pay me back some day if you will. But you can do more real good by becoming my resident physician than waiting there on the hill for the patients that do not come."

"Polly," pleaded Dick, "I'm trying to keep my independence. Back me up. You don't think I ought to accept this from Miss Deborah?"

"Aunt Deborah," corrected Polly sweetly. Then, "If you marry me at all, Dick, it must be exactly as she say, for—it will make her awfully happy, won't it, Aunt Deb?"

Miss Deborah arose and, coming to them, clasped her long arms around them both. "I never had any children of my own," she said huskily; "you two are all I have. Don't keep me waiting much longer for my happiness!"

Then the three heads came together, gray and black and golden, and the dragons on the screen seemed to writhe and twist and wink their green eyes very knowingly as if they knew Miss Deborah would have her own way after all.

Landslide Caused Fatal Wreck.

Middleton, N.Y., Aug. 6.—A landslide on the Erie Railroad, five miles west of here early yesterday caused the wreck on an eastbound fast freight train and the loss of three lives. The landslide is believed to have been due to a heavy rain, which loosened the hillside soil and caused large quantities of rock to crash down upon and block the tracks.

Soldiers Contributed.

Toledo, Aug. 6.—The Sixth Regiment, en route from Columbus, where they had been on strike duty for a week in the street car riots, have raised a purse of $500, which will be forwarded to Mayor Duffy at Columbus with instructions that the money be given to the destitute families of the strikers.

Call Them "Murphies."

A Toronto journalist was spending some days in Northern Quebec where he desired to air his knowledge of French. He arrived at a small inn where the occasional tourist found a resting-place. There was a waitress of the heavy-footed order, who attended sullenly upon a table of hungry sportsmen.

"Avez-vous des pommes de terre?" asked the Toronto man in such French as he could muster. There was no response. Once again he said pompously, "Avez-vous des pommes de terre?"

The girl looked with impatience upon the would-be Gaul and said angrily: "Aw, go on—what's de matter wid the pratatoes?"

WANTED HIS CHILD.

Father Charged With Attempted Abduction of Boy In Toronto.

Toronto, Aug. 6.—After a hurried flight from Toronto a year ago, Thomas F. Hamilton, typewriter salesman of St. Louis, Mo., returned to the city yesterday and was arrested last night by Detective Mitchell, at 12 Harvard avenue. He is charged, upon a warrant dated March of last year, with abducting his own six-year-old son, Almer, from the custody of his mother, Mrs. C. E. Hamilton, 67 Cecil street, in January, 1909. He is also charged with doing actual bodily harm upon the mother in August of last year in a second attempt to kidnap the boy.

The story has been a dramatic one. Since Mrs. Hamilton divorced her husband in the United States in 1907, until in January of last year, he abducted the lad in the crescent at Knox College, when he was on his way to school and took him to St. Louis, where the mother went in March and regained possession of the child. In August last a man came to board with Mrs. Hamilton. That night her husband drove up in a taxicab and, save for the intervention of the driver, would have again succeeded in getting possession of the child.

The driver refused to run his machine with the boy on board, and he was returned to the mother and Hamilton fled.

A further charge of assault was then laid by Mrs. Hamilton.

Yesterday he was seen in Harvard avenue and last night was got at the home of a relative there.

He was admitted to bail in the sum of $2,000 despite the protests of the wife, who declares that she fears he will again attempt to secure the boy. As Detective Mitchell was taking Hamilton from the house last night, a taxicab drove up and a man entered to tell Hamilton to get out, as the police were after him.

Strathcona Wins Shield.

Ottawa, Aug. 6.—The first winner of the Earl Grey challenge shield is the town of Strathcona, Alberta. The conditions of competition were that the shield was to go to the town or city in Canada which had the largest number of cadets in proportion to its population. The population was figured from January 1, 1910, and the number of cadets from the actual strength of the corps on May 24 last.

Strathcona has a population of five thousand and has 150 cadets. The second place goes to a county in Quebec. Towns of less than 5,000 are not considered, but must include the surrounding country in the contest.

It is quite a coincidence that the first winner of this prize should be the town which bears the name of the man who has done so much for the cadet movement in this country.

Expects to Reach 120.

Boston, Aug. 6.—Prof. Luther O Emerson of Hyde Park, who wrote the music to William Cullen Bryant's "We are Coming, Father Abraham," and who has just entered on his ninety-first year, declares that he expects to live at least thirty years more.

"You know I had a brother who lived to be one hundred and sixteen years of age, and I want to go him a few years better," he said. "My uncle, Ezekiel Pratt, was born in 1687 and died in 1803, and at the age of one hundred and one years was a farmer and swung the scythe as well as a younger man. My grandmother on my mother's side lived to be ninety-five years, also. Therefore, you see, I am naturally of a long-lived family."

Decimal System for Australia.

Melbourne, Aug. 6.—The House of Representatives, by a vote of 35 to 2 adopted the resolution endorsing the idea of the adoption of the decimal system in Australia. It was decided to endeavor to seek the approval of the imperial conference for the adoption of the system in the Empire.

LAURIER IS WRECKED

Premier Emerges Unhurt From Disaster in West.

His Special Train Collides Head on With a Freight Train While Going East From Moosejaw—Engineer Is Believed to Be Underneath His Engine—None of Premier's Party Are Hurt.

Regina, Aug. 6.—While proceeding at over fifty miles an hour the special train of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, en route from Moose Jaw to Regina, collided with a westbound freight about nine o'clock last night at a point three and one-half miles west of Pense, a small town thirteen miles west of Regina. The engines were telescoped and the freight cars derailed.

The Premier, who was sitting in a chair at the time in his own car, was thrown violently to the floor, but immediately got up and informed the members of his party that he was uninjured. Others of his party were badly shaken up, but no one was seriously hurt. The crews of both engines jumped as soon as they saw that a collision was inevitable, except the engineer of the freight train, who is believed to be buried, and probably dead, beneath his engine.

The windows, mirrors and tableware of the Premier's car and in that of Hon. George P. Graham, Minister of Railways, as well as in the press car, were shattered, and things generally badly jumbled. The Minister of Railways, who was in his own car, suffered a wrenched knee, which did not, prevent him hurrying back to the Premier's car. The conductors on each train at once took the necessary precautions, and sent out signalmen in both directions.

Dr. George H. Ramsey of Pense, who was driving near the scene of the wreck, was told by a pressman what had occurred, and at once proceeded to the scene of the accident to render what assistance he could.

William Campbell, a waiter in the press car, was injured internally, and Ed. Cook, conductor of Sir Wilfrid's train, had one rib broken.

The scene presented by the two great engines, caught together in what appeared an attempt on their part to overlap each other, was spectacular and impressive. To one of the pressmen the engineer of the special stated that at Belleplaine he was going at the rate of sixty miles an hour, his train being some seven minutes behind time. How the accident occurred and how the freight came to be where it was he was unable to say. He only knew that he had the right of way over all other traffic.

Transplanted Part of Eye.

Philadelphia, Aug. 6.—A rare operation, involving the transplanting of a portion of the cornea from the eyeball of a man to that of a woman who had been blind since infancy, resulting in the restoration of her sight, has been performed at the Medico-Chirurical Hospital, and doctors are watching the case with much interest. It will be several weeks before it can be determined definitely whether the restoration will be permanent, but at present doctors say all indications point to success.

The operator was Dr. L. Webster Fox, professor of ophtalmology at the college, and one of the leading eye specialists in this city. His patients were two, a young man employed at Baldwin's locomotive works, one of whose eyes had been pierced by a piece of steel and the sight destroyed, and a young woman who had been blind since infancy. One of her eyes had been removed from its socket and she was unable to see with the other.

The cornea of her eye had become opaque through disease.

Dr. Fox decided to remove a piece of the cornea from the man's eye and place it in that of the young woman. The operation was performed about twenty days ago.

When the bandages were removed it was found that the young woman could see for the first time in her life. Her sight was not as good as that of the persons near her, but for a distance of five feet she could see distinctly.

Princess May Wrecked.

Victoria, B.C., Aug. 6.—Barely giving the wireless operator time to flash a message summoning assistance, the handsome C.P.R. liner Princess May, Capt. John McLeod, with nearly a hundred passengers, went to the bottom of Lynn Canal shortly after two o'clock yesterday morning, consequent on her having run on a reef at Sentinel Island during a dense fog, making a big hole in her hull. Not a life was lost, thanks to the coolness and bravery of the officers, but the escape from a terrible disaster was a narrow one, as the vessel filled very rapidly.

London, Aug. 6.—Sir George William Buchanan, Minister at The Hague since 1908, has been appointed British Ambassador to Russia. He will replace Sir Arthur Nicolson, who is now Permanent Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

DOWNEY IS APPOINTED

He Gets Superintendency of Asylum at Orillia.

Member for South Wellington In Local House Will Retire From the Political Arena—Has Been a Great Campaigner and Is an Expert on Municipal Matters — Worked Hard In Checking Tuberculosis.

Toronto, Aug. 6.—Official announcement was made yesterday that Joseph Downey, M.P.P. for South Wellington, has been appointed superintendent of the Asylum for the Insane at Orillia. Mr. Downey has resigned his seat in the Government to take over the new appointment. The new position is worth about $2,500 a year, and carries with it a fine house and supplies. It is considered to be one of the most desirable offices in the gift of the Government.

"Everybody appreciates Mr. Downey's ability both generally and in connection with the special legislation pertinent to this especial office," said Premier Whitney yesterday afternoon. "He is a man who has a wide grasp of municipal affairs and I do not doubt that his late constituents will miss him very much."

Mr. Downey has held a seat for the riding of South Wellington since 1902, when he redeemed the riding for the Conservatives. He was for years editor of The Guelph Herald, but two years ago resigned that position to take up special writing. His literary style is known for its originality and force, and as a speaker he has a reputation for eloquence, while there are few his equal as a campaigner. Flowers of speech fall naturally from "Joe" Downey's lips, but he is capable of aggressive utterances also. His campaign for legislation aimed at checking the spread of consumption, was vigorous and determined, even though its end was a squelching by the Premier.

JOSEPH DOWNEY, M.P.P.

Mr. Downey was a member of a commission which two years ago investigated jail problems with a view to applying more humanitarian principles. The establishment of the industrial farm at Guelph may be traced in part to the commission.

Joseph Patrick Downey is his full name. He is a Roman Catholic, born of Irish parents in Wellington County in 1865. He entered the service of The Guelph Herald as a boy of 15, and in 1885 took editorial charge. He interested himself in politics early, and blossomed out as a full-fledged "stumper" in 1899, when he helped to defeat the Greenway Government in Manitoba. When he was nominated for South Wellington the hope of capturing the Liberal constituency was not great, but he went in with 227 majority, and has since stayed in. Now that he is out of the running the riding promises to be a hard battleground.

The Divorce Microbe.

London, Aug. 6.—Prof. F. P. Wilson's paper contrasting divorce in Canada and the United States at the International Law Conference referred to the ease wherewith divorce is obtained in the United States where divorce become a primary necessity of life. The divorce microbe might be present in Canada, but its ravages are not yet serious. In the subsequent discussion, Cephas Brainerd, New York, expressed some irritation at the Canadian criticism of his country, which he said is founded on insufficient information.

Train Ran Away.

Stroudsburg, Pa., Aug. 6.—A freight wreck, in which two men met death and two others were badly injured, occurred at Analomink, on the Lackawanna Railroad, about four miles north of this city yesterday.

The cause of the wreck was the running away of the train, composed of 62 loaded cars, on the Pocono Mountains, the steepest grade on the road. The air on the engine gave out and the engineer could not hold the train.

Subsidy Not Renewed.

Kingston, Jamaica, Aug. 6.—The abandonment of the efforts for a renewal of the steamship subsidy between Great Britain and Jamaica have been announced, neither the home nor colonial Government being prepared to renew it on the present basis and the shipping companies decline to accept less than $200,000 a year. It is believed that Jamaica will endeavor to arrange a new fast service in conjunction with Canada.

Silver and Gold
Is making it Famous

When you use WONDER-SHINE, the dreaded half-day cleaning your silverware becomes but a pleasant half-hour.

Without any rubbing or scrubbing the tarnish disappears and the original brightness is restored, but neither your silver, your temper, nor your fingers will suffer as when you use "rub on" preparations of abrasive powder, or acid paste polishes.

WONDER-SHINE is not rubbed on, the silver is simply dipped in.

Like all great discoveries, the process is very simple.

CURRENT EVENTS.

"Trainmen find getting job back a slow progress," says the Montreal Star; adding "Mr. Murdock says everything is all right." Certainly, with the Boss, but not with the men who have been victimized by the Bosses. The Star adds: "A large number of the old trainmen have already handed in their names and addresses at the Bonaventure Station, and they are duly put on the waiting list for such vacancies as may be found in the ranks. Very few have yet been re-engaged, and the statement of Mr Berry that all the men will probably all find themselves drafted back into the service "within three months" has brought little comfort to the men who went out at the command of the Union officials. A possible three months of idleness in the busiest portion of the year is a bitter pill to swallow."

Moral.—Don't be fooled again by these Bosses.

Madrid, August 4—Before King Alfonso left here on his trip to England he gave to Premier Canalejas full power to deal with the dispute between the Government and the Vatican over religious questions. The Premier was empowered to take what measures he deemed advisable. It is evident he has the courage to exercise it.

A hundred and sixty thousand immigrants, says a despatch from Ottawa of the 4th inst., came to Canada in the six months of the calendar year ended June 30. The final figures are not yet ready at the department, but the above is the approximate total. Of this number, the proportion is about 90,000 Americans, and 70,000 British and Continental.

The constant occurrence of outrages, the result of strikes, render life and property unsafe. An "open shop" is in the view of some people a crime punishable by fire and death. Instances of this view of the question are occurring daily. The new Philadelphia and Reading coal docks at Superior, Wisconsin, have been dynamited and partly wrecked. They were constructed by a firm working under the "open shop" system. A number of other engineering works constructed under the same system have lately been dynamited in other parts of the country. There are many more repetitions of this incident indicating the existence of a conspiracy to destroy, even at the risk of life, all work done by "open shop" working. When is this to end? Not until somebody is hanged.

Still another outrage. A telegram from Winnipeg of the 2nd inst., says: Twenty-three freight cars standing on a siding in the west yards of the Canadian Northern were destroyed last night in a fire of doubtful origin. The company blame the blaze on striking car men, and have issued a positive statement that the fire was incendiary. The loss is estimated by the company at $25,000. The company claims that the fire was preceded by an attempt at riot by bands of strikers. The truth seems to be that a few foreigners among the strikers were near the gates and got into an altercation with the special police, but that no violence resulted. Two strikers were arrested for trespassing and inciting riot. It is needless to say the strikers deny having anything to do with the burning of the cars.

At Regina, speaking to the representatives of the Grain Growers' Association, says the Montreal Gazette Sir Wilfrid Laurier is reported as saying that if the United States were ready to meet this country next fall in the matter of reciprocity he thought an arrangement could be reached. This is what was to have been expected from the associate of U. S. Congressman Hilt and Erastus Wiman in the old days when the Canadian Liberal party's platform included a plank favoring unrestricted reciprocity between Canada and the United States. The Washington diplomats at the coming conference should not, after such an utterance have much difficulty in fixing up for the Canadian representatives' acceptance a brick to look just like gold

Broken Health Brings Wrinkles

HOW ALL WOMEN CAN PRESERVE GOOD HEALTH AND GOOD LOOKS

Too many women and girls look old before they should. In nine cases out of ten it is a matter of health. Work, worry, confinement indoors and lack of exercise cause the health to run down. Then faces become thin and pale; lines and wrinkles appear, there are headaches, backaches and a constant feeling of tiredness.

Women and girls who feel well look well. Therefore improve your health and you will look better. It is a fact that thousands of Canadian women and girls owe the robust health they enjoy to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They feel well and enjoy life as only a healthy person can.

The simple reason for this is that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new, rich blood, which strengthens all the vital organs, brings brightness to the eye, a glow of health to the cheek, and bracing strength to every part of the body. Mrs. Warren Wright, Una, Sask., says: "I feel that I owe a debt of gratitude to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that nothing I can say in their favor will fully repay. I was so reduced in health and strength that I was hardly able to walk at all, and could do no work whatever. My blood was so thin and watery that my lips and finger tips resembled those of a corpse. I had almost constant headaches, and the smallest exertion would set my heart palpitating violently, and often I would drop in a faint. Nothing I did seemed to help me in the least, and I felt so far gone that I never expected to recover my health. I was in this critical condition when I read in a newspaper of a cure in a case like mine through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I decided to try them. I got a half dozen boxes and before I used them all there was a great change in my condition. My appetite returned, the color began to come back to my lips and face, and my strength was increasing. I continued the use of the Pills for some time longer and they restored me to the pink of perfect health. While using the pills I gained twenty pounds in weight. My cure was made in the summer of 1909, and I am now enjoying better health than ever before."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do for other weak and worn women just what they did for Mrs. Wright, if they are given a fair trial. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Dangerous Job.

What is the most hazardous job in Canada? A rather interesting question. Mining has its dangers, railroad accidents are numerous every year, but neither of these occupations are attended with so much peril as lumbering, according to the view of a British Columbia newspaper. The British Columbia man who has done the investigating says that more lumberjacks are killed every year in his province than men in any of the so-called "extra-hazardous trades." This fact is not generally known because obituaries of these victims appear but seldom in the newspapers. News from the logging camps buried in the bush does not filter out regularly. When a big tree knocks a man out, there is no reporter on the scene; sometimes it is weeks before word of the accident is received.

Radium vs. Lance As Cancer Cure.

Mail and Empire

Before the British Medical Congress, Dr. Gilbert Barling, an eminent professor of surgery, declared that the knife remains the only dependable agency in the treatment of cancer. This bad news. We know the knife for a broken reed in most cases of this dread disease. Our despatch tells us that an equally eminent medical man, Dr. Louis Wickham, of Paris, also spoke, but on the subject of his discourse it is dumb. We may be sure, however, that Dr. Wickham dissented from the view expressed by Dr. Barling, or rather that he would find it necessary to qualify his assent for Dr. Wickham is the world's leading authority on radium therapy.

Wickham on Cancer.

What Dr. Wickham thinks about radium and cancer is well set forth by Dr. W. H. B. Aikins, in the Canadian Practitioner and Review. To dismiss his experiments as simply "promising" to use Dr. Barling's word, is much too cavalier, for many cases are cited of cures effected. However, Dr. Wickham says: "To speak in a general way of the cure of cancer by radium without specifying and explaining circumstances is to make use of inexact and unscientific language." One canont say that radium is a cure for cancer, nor that it is not a cure, any more than he can say excision is a cure or not a cure. It can be said that for certain kinds of cancer radium has been found effective, while in the other kinds it has been proved a most valuable assistant to the surgeon's kit.

When Radium Cures.

"In carinoma of the skin radium has been very successfully used by Dr Wickham and others. This species of cancer is not so terrifying as the internal cancers, although it is none the less fatal if permitted to grow. That it has a smaller roll of victims is due not to its less deadly nature, but to the fact that being an affection on the surface of the body it is more readily noticed, and is usually treated before it has made great progress. In such cases, where the cancer is "localized, superficial, non-inflammatory and of rather small dimensions," radium is of great benefit. Dr. Wickham says that the medical man treating such cases with radium, "can without exaggeration assure the patient of a cure." It is necessary that the patient should return to the physician once a month for a long period, in order that the first trace of a relapse, may be detected.

Curative Waters.

The truth is that the rays from radium have a selective action on certain diseased tissue elements, as Dr. Aikins says, affecting them much more powerfully than they do healthy tissues, and eventually causing their destruction. But Dr. Wickham warns medical men that in all other cases than that of carcinoma of the skin, it is their duty, before applying radium, to decide if other agents will not give better results. Often surgery can do better, as for instance, in excision of the breast for an operable cancer, but even in these cases radium must be recognized as an auxiliary to to the knife more valuable than the "x"-rays because it possesses greater penetrating power. It is said that even in cases of internal cancer, many doctors have had gratifying results by using radio-active waters. The Heidelburg Institute of Cancer Research as the result of much investigation "gives a strongly grounded hope that we may look forward to a permanency of cure in many cases."

Specific for Rodent Ulcer.

As far as rodent ulcer is concerned radium is almost a sure cure. Sir Frederick Treves says that two treatments lasting an hour each are sufficient. The late King Edward was thus rid of a rodent ulcer. Epithelioma is another deadly variety of cancer that has frequently yielded to radium treatment. These results would probably be admitted by Dr. Barling and other opponents to radium as a rival to the knife. As far as deep lying malignant tumors are concerned, Wickham, Dominici, Degrais, Abbe, Wilson, Tomkinson, Roux, and Caan all claim to have effected as cures; but it is equally true that been recorded of cases previously claimed as cures; but it iseq ually true that other cases of absolute permanent cure are on record; and speaking of recurrences, it is a notorious fact that the records of surgical cures are by no means free from them. Radium must be admitted to be something more than promising as a cure for cancer; and when it is considered that its great costliness limits its use to a few cases, its triumphs are all the more noteworthy.

The Coronation Oath.

The Bill changing the form of oath taken by the King on assuming the responsibility of Ruler of the British Empire has passed all its stages and received the approval and signature of His Majesty.

The oath as amended is in the following terms: "I do, solemnly, sincerely, in the presence of God, profess, testify, and declare that I am a faithful Protestant, and that I will, according to the true intent of the enactment, secure the Protestant succession to the Throne of my realm, uphold and maintain said enactments to the best of my power."

How will this change in the wording of the oath be interpreted in the future? Will it not lead to a discussion as to what constitutes a faithful Protestant, which a Sovereign has to swear he is when he ascends the Throne?

The general reader, on studying the wording of the Oath, will come to the conclusion that no longer will it be necessary for a King to be a member of the established church of England or Scotland. If a "faithful Protestant" he may be a non-conformist, Methodist, Baptist, or any other Church or Creed, so long as it is not the Church of Rome. The meaning of the word Protestant applies to almost every denomination other than that ruled by the Pope, though there are among Episcopalians a few of the clergy who repudiate the word "Protestant" as applicable to the English church, on the ground that the Episcopal Church is the original Church of God, and that the Church of Rome is but an off-shoot of the original. In addition to these, there are bodies which reject the claim of the Pope to the headship of the Christian Church which never participated in the Lutheran revolt, and there are at least sections of churches which do not claim the name Protestant for themselves. Then there are Jews, who are Protestants in the eyes of the law, though they are not Christians. There might be some curious discussions raised on the matter if those who try to think exactly were to take it up.

Considering the importance of this question, affecting, as many think it does, the stability of the Throne, in its character of Protestants, many wonder at the unanimity with which Parliament approved of the new form of declaration, being in striking contract with the controversial feeling which was at first aroused throughout the country. In Scotland, the land of John Knox, the opposition to the bill was particularly keen, and members of Parliament were deluged with petitions from religious and other bodies protesting against the change. The non-conformists claimed that there should be no reference to the "Church of England as by law established," and showed strong opposition to the original substituting clause, which read: "and declare that I am a faithful member of the Protestant Church as by law established in England." The amendment was accepted by the Premier, thus scoring a victory for the non-conformists.

The first reading of the bill passed the House of Commons on June 28 by a vote of 382 to 42, and the second reading was agreed to on Wednesday last without a division.

It has been passed by the House of Lords and sanctioned by the King and is now the law of the Empire.

Wonders of Wireless.

With the passing of the wireless telephone and the wireless telegraph from the experimental to the practical stage the next progressive step in wireless transmission will be a trans-Atlantic service. In the tower of the great Metropolitan building in New York, is wireless equipment specially constructed to span the thirty-eight hundred miles of land and water lying between New York and Paris.

The antenne, or aerial equipment in Paris, which will grasp out of the ether the click of the instrument in the 700ft. tower of the Metropolitan building, extends high in the air above the 900ft. Eiffel Tower. The station in the famous tower of France is the highest in the world and the Metropolitan is the second. In the Paris station will be installed the same powerful equipment that is now used in the Metropolitan tower.

Dr. De Forest promises to be in wireless communication between New York and Paris within the very near future. He firmly believes he will soon be able to accomplish the feat of spanning a space of nearly 4,000 miles because while experimenting at the Eiffel Tower in the summer of 1908 he "picked up" wireless messages from the station at Glace Bay, Nova Scotia.

At this time the inventor also established connection by means of his wireless telephone with a vessel of the French navy in the Mediterranean, a distance of 600 miles.

In a lecture on "The Wireless Age" the famous inventor explains the principle of wireless communication, tells about his many interesting demonstrations in every part of the world, and gives details regarding the operation of the wireless telephone and the sparkless wireless telegraph. Few persons probably are aware that the Radio (wireless) telephone system is already operating telephones in land stations and on vessels of the Great Lakes.

It was in New York recently that Dr. De Forest demonstrated the wireless telephone, which attracted widespread attention. Mme. Mazarin, star of the Manhattan Opera Company, sang into the transmitter of the wireless telephone in the laboratory of Dr. De Forest at 103 Park Avenue. An audience heard and applauded the singer more than a mile away. Her voice was carried by ether waves to be heard in receivers in the station in the Metropolitan building.

In January, 1909, music was transmitted direct from the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, to over a score of wireless stations miles away and solos were heard distinctly as far distant from New York as Bridgeport, Conn. On many vessels in and out of the harbor the music was heard by the wireless operators. Especially was the music appreciated on board of the Royal Mail Packet "Avon," when two hundred guests of the general manager of the Royal Mail line in America heard Caruso's voice reproduced.

The United States government equipped its vessels with wireless telephones during the voyage from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The equipment was most successful. Dr. De Forest, while in Europe in 1908, equipped several vessels of the Italian navy and made a record demonstration by sending distinguishable sounds by phonograph from the Eiffel tower to a vessel at Marseilles, more than 600 miles distant. During the Glidden automobile tour in the United States this summer the cars will be equipped with wireless telegraph instruments, the invention of Dr. De Forest and the various cars will be in communication with a radius of twenty-five miles.

The new noiseless telegraph, also the invention of Dr. De Forest, is an instrument he calls the radiotone. The first record made was the exchanging of messages between Key West and New York, and its most notable triumph was the sending of two long radiograms from the Metropolitan tower, New York, to the Railway Exchange Building, Milwaukee, through all interference and during the most adverse weather conditions, a feat never before accomplished. The radiotone noiseless telegraph using only a two Kilowatt generator communicates with Key West and Milwaukee, while the United States Government station at Key West requires a thirty-five Kilowatt generator in order to send back its answer.

Truly the wonders of wireless are astounding and yet the inventors tell us that the art is only in its infancy.

All About a Comma In the Lord's Prayer

In the British House of Commons the other day Lord Hugh Cecil asked whether the attention of the Home Secretary had been drawn to the alteration made in 1891 in the punctuation of the Lord's Prayer in the Book of Common Prayer, and whether there was any authority in the "Annexed Book" of 1662 or otherwise for the punctuation now used by the King's printers and the University presses. In reply Mr. Winston Churchill said that he had noted the change, that he had carefully consulted various authorities about it, and that he was advised that it would be inconvenient and confusing to reproduce in modern type the exact peculiar punctuation of the "Annexed Book." He added that the punctuation was varied in different editions of the Prayer Book and that it varied even in the different places in which the Lord's Prayer occured in the "Annexed Book." In deciding which punctuation they should adopt in the petition, "Thy will be done "in earth as it is in Heaven," Mr. Churchill presumed that the King's printer and the University presses considered the structure of the Greek original. Personally, he said, he agreed with Lord Hugh Cecil, but had no power to issue instructions for a return of the former punctuation. To bring that about it would be necessary, first, that the King issue Letters of Business to Convocation; second, that Convocation pass a recommendation in conformity therewith; and, third, that Parliament pass an Act.

This question and answer in the House drew a letter to the Times from Canon Beeching, of Westminster Abbey, condemning the alteration made by the Conference of the Three Presses in the punctuation of the petition given above. The insertion of the comma after "done" is, he says, an "arbitrary and wanton "change," as it "ruins the rhythm." The scholarly editor of Milton's Poetical Works and of Tennyson's "In Memoriam" is very competent to pronounce on questions of rhythm. Sir Charles Alfred Elliott, however, points out in a letter to the Times that the new punctuation helps to bring out that meaning of the prayer shown by the following arrangement, given in Moulton's "Literary "Study of the Bible."

"Our Father Which art in Heaven,
  Hallowed be Thy Name,
  Thy Kingdom come,
  Thy will be done,
In earth as it is in Heaven."

This arrangement is intended to show that the last line modifies each of the three clauses immediately preceding it, and not simply the last of those clauses. Rev. Dr. Gedge, an Honorary Canon of Peterboro, who also is well qualified to speak in such controversies, likewise differs with Canon Beeching. He adduces the fact that the Vulgate reads, "Fiat voluntas tua sicut in celo et in terra," which corresponds to the Greek order of the words. Canon Glazebrook, of Ely, another Biblical scholar with a trained ear, does not agree with Canon Beeching that the "welter of unaccented syllables" is disagreeable, and in the discussion of the matter he shows a precise knowledge and nice sense of metre and phonics. In another letter to the Times, Canon Beeching takes notice of these points, emphasizes his main objection that the alteration was made without authority, and says that the admitted fact that the sense is affected as well as the rhythm only strengthens the case against the printers. As to the Cambridge theory that the phrase, "in "earth as in heaven," belongs in the original to each of the three preceding petitions, he merely says that he has never been convinced by it.

COLLEGE GIRL TRIES TO BE A SERVANT

She Visits Intelligence Offices and Obtains a "Place" Where General Housework Proves Difficult

Anne Forsyth, a college girl who tried to be a "hired" girl, tells some of her experiences to readers of The Delineator for September in the first series of articles, "Seven Times a Servant."

It was the second of March—I remember the date perfectly—when I bought a maid's black dress and tried it on, says Miss Forsyth. It looked very well, too. I had thought until then it would be unpleasant to wear black. Being somewhat thrilled with myself in the dark uniform, I put on the rest of the things—shabby hat, torn jacket and mangy brown muff. It made very little difference about my hair, for the hat pushed low on my forehead entirely covered it. When my hands were hidden in the half-worn gloves and poked into the muff, I had only to say "Hannah Johnson," and look in the glass at a new woman.

The name "Hannah Johnson" would be difficult to explain; it was not exactly consisten with my theory of equality for all who work. As much from pride as from any other reason, I had determined to hide my identity, for I had no scientific reason for social experiment.

Having put on my black gown and chosen a new name, I went out into the street to walk up and down in order to become accustomed to my new self. I had thought some would discover me, and was both relieved and flattered when I was not even suspected of playing a part. I was a clean, honest-looking girl, nothing more, and two days later I had my first place.

It was general housework, but the agent told me any girl should be thankful for a situation in tiny apartment and only two in family. I hesitated, for, to tell the truth, I was frightened. General housework requires so many different accomplishments! One must perform next; cook dinner and still keep neat every branch of domestic service passably well—scrub the floor one moment and appear at the door, a tidy maid, the and fit to serve it before it is cold; wash and iron, dust and make beds.

Getting Even.

When Governor Tweedie was a member of the New Brunswick Legislature, an act was passed regarding the revision of the voters' lists which was strongly opposed by the Opposition on the ground that it gave an undue advantage to the party in power.

Hon. Mr. Tweedie made light of these objections, and pointed out that even if the majority of the revisors in certain parishes happened to be supporters of the Government, in other parishes matters might be reversed, so on the whole everything would work out satisfactorily as in the case of the Irishman's picture.

A visitor, he said, once went into a house in Ireland, where he noticed a large picture of the Pope on one wall, and a picture of King William on the other.

"I suppose you think it strange," said the woman of the house, "but my husband is an Orangeman and I am a Catholic, so when he hung King William on the wall I got a picture of the Pope to put forninst him."

"Do you ever have any trouble over the matter?" inquired the visitor.

"None," was the reply, "barring the twelfth of July when John comes home full and jumps on the Pope. Then I get up early in the morning and take King William down street and trade him for a bran new Pope, which I hang up in his place before John gets around." When John gets up he thinks he must have jumped on King William by mistake so he goes off and buys a new one and that is the end of the matter."

Castles In Spain.

A few weeks ago were chronicled the claims of one Mrs. C. A. Campbell, who calmly informed Canadians that the Ottawa authorities owed her a billion dollars' worth of land—the Plains of Abraham among other slices. Now we have a little national reciprocation to record. C. W. Heise, a 25-year-old Toronto chap, clerking in the G.T.R. freight department for a living, says that one hundred and thirty million dollars' worth of Philadelphia legally belongs to him, his cousin Edward Quance, and eleven other heirs. One hundred and two years ago, these gentlemen's grandfather, Col. Baker, possessed an estate as large as an Ontario farm right in the heart of the town. An enterprising man was the colonel, possibly liking his native Hamburg better than America. And so he leased his acres for ninety-nine years; happy in his ignorance that boulevards and street cars sometimes boost real estate values as high as diamonds. The lease expired three years ago. Messrs. Heise and Quance were on the job at once. They have been knocking the evidence into shape. Lawyers have helped them scale the colonel's genealogical tree. They have traced the warrior back to the hour that he set sail on the billows from Hamburg for the New World. Their castles in Spain for some time have looked bright. But a little maddening "if" has cropped up.

Got His Whole Job.

A constable died two years ago at Worcester, Eng., and not only did his successor take his clothes and number, but also his beat. He went to lodge with the widow, and now has married her.

He Got His.

"A wise lawyer is a silent man. The fewer unnecessary questions he asks the better for him," says Secretary Root. "A little girl taught me this early in my practice. Her widowed mother came often to my office about the settlement of her estate. Sometimes she brought her daughter, a beautiful girl of ten with red curls. One morning after a long conference with the mother I noticed that the child seemed uncomfortable. She evidently thought I was paying too much attention to her mother. I patted her on the head and said: 'You are a beautiful girl. Don't you want to come to my house and be my little girl?' She answered very decidedly: 'No, I don't. And I don't want mother to either.'"—Housekeeper.

The Radio-activity of Snow.

There has recently been published in Paris a resume of the results obtained by French scientists from their study of the radio-activity of the snow that fell at Boulogne during last winter. It has been known since 1904 that newly fallen snow is radio-active, but the subject has not before been so fully examined. The investigators announce that snow quickly gathered after its descent to the earth is highly radio-active. Radio-activity disappears almost entirely after the lapse of two hours, however. Snow which has fallen on the soil appears to retain its radio-activity a little longer than that which has come to rest upon the roofs of buildings.—Harper's Weekly.

RUSHING IN TROOPS.

Government Fears Demonstration In San Sebastian.

Madrid, Aug. 6.—Alarmed by fears that the proposed demonstration of the clerical forces at San Sebastian, the summer capital, will assume the character of an uprising, the Government yesterday commenced to rush troops into San Sebastian. A regiment of hussars left Madrid for San Sebastian yesterday, followed by another regiment of cavalry and two battalions of chausseurs. A regiment of the infantry was also ordered to San Sebastian from Vittoria.

Both Gen. Weyler, the captain-general of Catalonia, and Count Sagasta, the Minister of the Interior, will go to San Sebastian, to be in immediate charge in case of disorder.

The Government believes that the Carlists and the members of the religious orders, which are numerous in Northern Spain, are openly inciting their followers to violence. The governors of the Basque Provinces and the adjoining Province of Navarre yesterday issued orders to the mayors of all the municipalities in these provinces to warn the Roman Catholics against assembling or entering the city of San Sebastian with arms, and that the most energetic measures would be taken to repress any attempt at a manifestation.

Catholics Gathering.

Bilbao, Spain, Aug. 6.—Since the Government has ordered the railroad companies not to furnish special trains for the proposed demonstration at San Sebastian Sunday, the Catholic adherents are already commencing to leave for the summer capital upon the ordinary trains.

Blame Freemasons.

Rome, Aug. 6.—That the Freemasons are at the bottom of the strained relations between the Vatican and the Spanish Government, and that they find in Canalejas, the Spanish Premier, a ready tool, is the declaration of Cardinal Ferrari. He says:

"The whole thing is the result of the anti-clerical wind which swept over France, crossed the Pyrenees, and is now blowing through Spain. The Church has won more difficult battles in the past, and it must not be forgotten that the nations that have quarrelled with her have brought on their own ruin."

LIFTING THE SCALP

An Art Not Confined to the North American Indian.

ALLIED TO HEAD HUNTING.

Some Indians Removed the Skin of the Entire Head, Including the Hair and Beard of Their Victim—Ears and Hands Also Served For Trophies.

The art of scalping has declined owing to the severe pains and penalties dealt out to its practitioners in the various states of North America. It was in a certain sense a product of European settlement, for it would never have become so widespread had it not been for the white man.

Scalping is commonly considered a custom belonging exclusively to the North American Indian. This is a mistake. It is found in South America, and Herodotus mentions it as having been practiced among the Scythians. But as the old Greek traveler's book was not published until 1502 it is probable that scalping appeared to the early explorers of America as a new thing. It was first described by Francisco de Garey, who in 1520 came across it in his ill fated expedition to Panuco. He found that the Indians removed the skin of the entire head, including the hair and beard. In 1535 Jaques Cartier wrote an account of a scalping party which is more typical of the custom as usually found. From this time on it is described by many writers, notably Captain John Smith and Champlain.

The Indians themselves were uncertain as to the use of keeping an enemy's scalp, except that they felt it would hurt him in some way. Some said it put him in the power of the owner of the scalp, others that it banished him from the happy hunting grounds, while still others believed that it annihilated him.

In the opinion of George Frederici, whose monograph may be consulted in the Smithsonian institution report of 1906, scalping is a modification of head hunting, a practice indulged in by many savages. There is a primitive notion that the possession of a token or portion of a man gives one a power over that man. To keep the head of an enemy puts him in your power, the savage thinks. But it is often inconvenient to carry so large a thing as a head. A smaller token is therefore substituted. This statement would seem to be borne out by the following facts:

Many American Indians did not follow the practice of scalping, notably those of the north, adjoining the Eskimo, the Frazer river Indians and the Algonquins of New Jersey. Nearly all of these practiced head hunting. A transition period is represented by the Caddoes of Texas, where the men took the scalps and the women at a more convenient period collected the heads. Some tribes in California secured, instead of scalps, the eyes of their enemies, which were preserved in some way, while others in Mexico selected the ears for their trophy, probably following the lead of the Spaniards, who lopped off ears as punishment for crime.

The Hudson river Indians used to preserve hands, probably in imitation of the Dutch, who in the so called Esopus war gave a bounty for Indian hands. Around the sources of the Missouri the Lewis and Clark expedition found the custom of preserving scalps replaced by that of preserving fingers.

In northern Mexico the custom of scalping prevailed, but toward the south it was replaced by head hunting. In South America there are two localities where it still flourishes. One of these is northern Argentina and Paraguay, where it gives signs of being indigenous, as it differs in many ways from the practice of North America. It is also found around Guiana, probably introduced by the Indian slaves brought from Florida.

The Huron-Iroquois have been accredited with the invention of scalping, but unless it arose independently in several places it much more likely originated in Florida, where it was first discovered by Europeans. Contact with a higher grade of culture gave a tremendous impetus to the custom.

Previous to the Spanish discovery the weapons of the Indians had been very simple, being manufactured from stone, bones, shells or even reeds. The tribal wars, though numerous, were seldom bloody, and with such primitive means the braves found it both awkward and dangerous to remove the scalp of a fallen enemy.

But the Europeans brought with them firearms and iron knives. The former increased a hundredfold the number of those killed in battle, while the latter made the process of scalping an easy one. Besides this, the whites encouraged the custom by offering bounties for scalps.

The first premium of this nature was offered in 1637 by the Puritans, who gave a payment for every Indian head, the custom of scalping not having yet reached New England. But by the time of King Philip's war it was in full blast, and in 1675 the Connecticut legislature offered large prizes for scalps. One Hannah Dustin received £50 and other substantial gifts for having secured with her own hands the scalps of two Indian men, two women and six children.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

CHAPTER XI.

The Wages of Sin.

Death let it be. How? Death would not come at a bidding; it could never be easy or without pain. Yet, how much easier than life that must be full of scorn and shame and misery for him!

He went to the window of his library and looked out; the sun shone brightly, the sky was blue and cloudless, the laughing summer air clear and calm; could he leave it all? Could he say farewell to sun and sky, to trees and flowers, to al that he had found so pleasant in life — the smiles of women, the mirth, the gayety and song?

Ah, yes, sooner than live to be deprived of all — to drink the dregs of life after having tasted its warmest and most glowing wine

"Death!" He said the word over to himself, and the sound of it chilled the warm blood in his veins

He had never seen but one man die, and that was Alan Wayne. He remembered the strange solemn beauty of that face. What would his be like?

He laughed a bitter, discordant laugh. After all, according to those words of Esther's, he was but going to pay his wages. He had sinned, and the wages of sin is death.

What would they say when they came back with their offer of paltry money and found him dead? There is dignity in death. Even Lord Damar, the man he had befriended, would be the first to see he had been no coward at last.

Would any one mourn for him? Not Lady Blanche; he could see the droop of her scornful eyelids when they told her the news. Not Edith Westerne, who had hunted him to death. Esther would; in that supreme hour he recognized her goodness, her truth, and her fidelity. Esther would be he what he might. Esther's life would end with his. He looked again at his watch; in ten minutes the hour would be ended, and the fair-haired, handsome soldier, whom he had hated for his triumph, would come to patronize and pity him. Never! Better any death.

With slow and noiseless footsteps he quitted the library and went up to his own room. On the stairs he met his valet, a man who had served him faithfully, and who now looked shyly at him, for there was some strange rumor in the house that all was not well with its master.

The valet told afterward, with tears in his eyes, how Paul Lynne had stopped him, speaking in short, quick gasps and hurried breath.

"Stephens," he said, "Captain Chandos is coming to see me. Ask him to come straight to my room. I will wait for him there."

Stephens looked somewhat surprised at the idea of receiving a gentleman in a sleeping room; but it was not his business. He said nothing. Then his master, drawing from his finger a diamond ring, gave it to him, saying:

"You have served me well, Stephens; keep it for my sake"

The valet opened his eyes still wider, he evidently thought his master out of his right mind; still, he took the ring with many thanks.

Then Paul Lynne opened the door of his sumptuous bedchamber and passed forever from the sight of man

SOUTH AMERICAN PESTS.

Giant Snakes and Deadly Insects That Render Life a Torture.

Relating his experiences during explorations in Bolivia to the Royal Geographical society, Major P. H. Fawcett remarked that voyages up the Amazonian rivers were not without their dangers.

There are anacondas (giant snakes), crocodiles, electric eels, sting rays and the perania, a small deep bodied fish with razor-like teeth and an unappeasable appetite for blood. Men unfortunate enough to fall into the Paraguay, where the perania is most prolific, may be picked clean before they can be rescued.

The anaconda is ubiquitous, moves by night and has a weird cry. The major's party killed one sixty-five feet long, and another party reported killing one monster that was eighty-five feet in length.

Insects are legion and render life a torture. Mosquitoes are the least offensive. "In places one is covered from head to foot by bees, inside one's clothes and outside, in one's ears, nose, eyes, hair and mouth if it is opened. Feeding by day under such circumstances is out of the question." There is a whole list of dreadful and obscure diseases, and the Brazil nut tree, dropping its heavy fruit from 100 or 150 feet, often breaks the traveler's head. There is also a tree which drops a colorless liquid which causes the body it comes in contact with to swell and gives acute pain.

There are rumors which cannot be disproved, since no one knows the heart of the continent, of a white race with blue eyes and red hair. There are also tales of strange beasts and huge and ancient ruins, so that South America may well hold for the explorer surprises greater than those of the African pygmy and okapi.—London Mail.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS.

Cured by Music and Rhythm After Hospital Treatment Failed.

The wonderful results which can be obtained from the scientific use of music and rhythm in infantile paralysis were the subject of an impromptu demonstration recently at the Tiny Tim Guild, an institution in the City road, London, for the treatment of paralyzed children who are considered incurable at the general hospitals.

The first patient was a boy of six, whose right arm had been totally paralyzed following an attack of acute infantile paralysis. A drum and his zeal for beating it in time so as to become a professional drummer when he grows up have been his salvation. What massage and electrical treatment alone could not do constant working at his drumming has accomplished, and now the paralyzed arm is almost as useful as the other.

A second case was a child of three, who six months ago was totally paralyzed in both legs. Her treatment consisted of "marching" to an inspiring tune played on the piano while seated on the edge of a low wooden chair.

"The secret of the treatment," Miss Hawthorne, the founder of the guild, explained, "is to build up the strength of the paralyzed muscles and nerves of children by encouraging them to use their limbs in the way each individual likes best. The music keeps their interest up and prevents their becoming tired and bored."

Railway Kissing Barred.

The French government has decided to prohibit the exchange of kisses on railway platforms. Notices have been posted as follows: "Defense de s'Embrasser—It is strictly forbidden to exchange kisses upon the platforms or in the waiting rooms or upon the steps of the carriages of the state railways, owing to the delays frequently occasioned by the prevalence of this dilatory practice, which is calculated to disturb the proper running of the traffic upon the system by retarding the departure of trains and which is thus fraught with inconvenience and even danger to the public, as the first condition of safe traveling is punctuality. Persons discovered kissing will be liable to prosecution."

Trespassing of Aeroplanes.

A correspondent of the London Times has a plan to prevent trespassing by aeroplanes. He says: "Motorcars are bad enough, but they do not come into one's house or garden. With aeroplanes total strangers may drop in through the roof for a little chat at any time. I fear the law cannot protect one against such intrusion. If aviation becomes popular I shall have spikes with long strong prongs fixed on the chimneys of my house and the word 'Danger' painted in large red letters on a flat part of the roof. If any flying machines come down in my garden I shall send for the police to remove the occupants, whom I shall sue afterward for any damage to my trees or shrubs."

True Charges.

She—Did you see where some man declares that women are not honest? He—Well, he's right in saying so. She (fiercely)—When did you ever know me to do a dishonest thing? He (tenderly)—When you robbed me of my peace of mind and stole my heart, you dear little thief!—New York World.

IF YOU FALL OVERBOARD.

Don't Mind Your Clothes, but Turn on Your Back and Float.

Mr. Handley advises the swimmer who falls overboard fully dressed to first turn on the back and float and while in that position to remove the coat and the shoes and then keep on floating. He points out that a swimmer can float indefinitely, but may easily tire of swimming and, tiring, may be seized with panic, which will drown the best of watermen. "In floating," says Mr. Handley, "one can shout all one likes to attract the attention and still retain one's strength. And will not the chances of rescue be decidedly better if one lies comfortably awaiting developments or propelling oneself gently by an easy back stroke than after using up one's energies in treading water or in making violent efforts to reach land by swimming?

"Of course this advice is hard to follow, because it is contrary to every instinct of self preservation to quietly await developments after an unexpected and unwelcome immersion. Still, training will accomplish it. As, however, it is impossible to train the body in this case, and the mind must be relied upon to offer the right suggestion at the psychological moment, one should prepare by mentally rehearsing what is to be done in case of a spill. Just picture to yourself the contingency of being thrown unexpectedly into the water and school yourself to turn immediately on your back in a floating position, at least until you have had an opportunity to recover from the shock and to size up the situation. Then you can decide comfortably on the course to follow.

"Don't let panic seize you. Let the fact be always uppermost in your mind that clothes have no tendency to drag you under water; that they are a help rather than a hindrance if you only know how to take advantage of the assistance they offer. Never forget that, clothes or no clothes, your body floats naturally, so that you can stay above water almost indefinitely if you will only keep your wits about you, and the cases are rare indeed in which assistance does not come within a comparatively short space of time."—Recreation.

Vienna Schoolboy Suicides.

The great number of suicides among schoolboys in Vienna on the day of the distribution of the half yearly certificates in the Austrian secondary schools has seriously alarmed the minister of education. The day is an anxious one for both parents and children, who await the decisions of the examiners with bated breath. A boy's failure to pass his examination always suggests failure in the final matriculation, which means that the boy is forced to perform the full term of three years' military service. Rather than face their parents after failure many boys shoot themselves. An inquiry opened by the minister has resulted in orders being issued for the relaxing of the strain in the schools. Two half holidays are to be granted each week to be devoted to games, rowing and shooting being specially recommended.

Python Stew and Crow Pie.

A group of naturalists in Paris recently "enjoyed" a dinner which consisted of an ostrich egg omelet, a python stew, roast African gazelle and crow pie. Guests say, according to reports in the London papers, that the ostrich eggs tasted like any other eggs. The serpent stew proved to contain large bones, with small pieces of gelatinous and entirely tasteless meat attached. Roast gazelle was as good as roast lamb. The crow pie was black, bitter and nauseating, and only a few brave men swallowed their portion. The menu also contained, written within parentheses on the card and eaten apologetically, roast beef and new potatoes. At dessert pieces of the serpent's skin were distributed as charms among the women.

Rameses I.

Rameses I. was the first king of the nineteenth dynasty in Egypt and ruled for a brief period about B. C. 1355. Beyond the fact that he waged war in Nubia, where he left an inscription and constructed some of the buildings of the Karnak, little is known of his reign. His mummy was found in 1881 at Deir-el-Bahri. His son, Seti I., built the Memnonium at Kurnah in honor of his father's memory.

This Flour for Summer Bakings

Now are the "dog days" when Digestion is never up to the standard.

Yet Nutrition is needed even as much as in the winter time—but we like it in lighter, daintier, more tempting, digestible form.

And, Madam, that's precisely where a flour like FIVE ROSES can serve you best of all.

Better than any you have yet used, it makes your bake things light, and porous, and tooth-teasing.

LAKE OF THE WOODS MILLING COMPANY KEEWATIN

FIVE ROSES, you see, brings to your table the highly nutritive gluten of the sturdy Manitoba wheat—supplies it in a pure and easily get-at-able form.

The sweetness of FIVE ROSES is the natural sugar of this golden grain.

Here are the elements that make your bread sweet, and fresh, and light — when these qualities are most necessary.

Why shouldn't you coax the sluggish summer appetites when you can do so in a healthy way?

But there's only one FIVE ROSES, Madam.

HIS AUNTIE JULIA.

She Is Really a Wonderful Woman In Her Own Way.

A GREAT HAND WITH YARBS.

She Can Brew Them Into a Medicine That Hits the Spot Every Time and Is Better Than a Doctor's Visit. How She Made Old Pulsifer Jump.

"My Aunt Julia is really a wonderful woman," exclaimed the low browed man, placing his feet on the manager's desk. "She hasn't any diplomas from medical colleges, but when it comes to curing a sick man she can give the ordinary doctor a start of ten years and beat him around a block. Aunt Julia has firm faith in yarbs"—

"You mean herbs," interrupted the professor.

"I don't mean anything of the kind. I mean yarbs. You go over to Aunt Julia and mention yarbs, and her eyes will brighten up and she'll ask you to sit down and eat a piece of pie, but if you began talking about herbs she'd paste you one with her trusty saucepan and knock off a corner of your scalp. Aunt Julia is pretty touchy about some things.

"One day old Mrs. Doolittle blew into the house to spend the afternoon, and Aunt Julia happened to say that something happened in Aprile. Mrs. Doolittle thinks she knows more than Webster's unadulterated dictionary because she taught school about 150 years ago, when she was a young woman, and she called my aunt down and said that there was no such word as Aprile.

"'You mean April, my dear,' says she.

"'I don't mean any such doggone thing,' says my aunt. 'I mean Aprile, and if you don't like it, Mrs. Doolittle, you can lump it, and be blamed to you.'

"Well, they fanned away for five minutes or so, and their language began to make the shingles fall off the roof, and I was thinking of sending in a hurry call for the cops, when Mrs. Doolittle left the house by way of the window and jumped three fences without touching them in her haste to get home. A lot of saucepans and other household utensils whizzed past her ears and seemed to stimulate her.

"That's the sort of woman Aunt Julia is. Now, if you want to go over and talk to her about herbs I won't interfere.

"If there's anything my aunt delights in it is doctoring people. She hasn't a bit of use for drug store medicines. She brews her own remedies, and she doesn't think anything will help a sick person unless it tastes like the royal palace of Abyssinia. A dose of her colic medicine will make a man's insides feel as though he had swallowed a porcupine.

"I had the colic last summer, and the medicine she made for me had smoke on it. I can taste it yet. Sometimes I dream that Aunt Julia is handing me a spoonful of her colic medicine, and then I always wake with a yell. She is an old fashioned woman. She gathers her yarbs at certain stages of the moon, and when she is brewing her medicines she mutters incantations and makes passes with her hands and does a lot of tricks that make your blood run cold. But her remedies hit the spot.

"Old man Pulsifer, you know, was a hopeless invalid for a year. He sat in a wheeled chair, and his wife fed him with the fire shovel, and all the members of the family were kept so busy waiting on him that they hadn't time to wind the clock or prime the pump. He said he had paralysis of the worst kind, and everybody believed him. Aunt Julia went over there one day and looked at the old man's tongue and poked him in the ribs and tapped him with a tuning fork and said she could cure him up so quick it would make his head swim.

"'If you can cure that man so he'll be of some use in the world,' said Mrs. Pusifer, 'I'll give you the silk crazy quilt my grandmother gave me when she was dying.'

"Aunt Julia gathered a lot of yarbs at the dark of the moon in the southeast corner of a graveyard and stewed them over a slow fire, and the broth she made from them would have warped the armor plate of a battleship. I knew by the smell of it that it was the real stingo, and you can't imagine how glad I was that I didn't have to take it. When she went over to dope old Pulsifer she insisted on my going along to help hold him down.

"The old man didn't want to take it. Anybody could see that. He got a smell of the stuff when Aunt Julia took the cork from the bottle, and a pale green sweat broke out on his brow. But I seized him by the top of his head and pulled his mouth open, and my aunt poured down about forty kilometers of her redhot dope, and when it had sizzled into his stomach he let out one warwhoop and streaked out of doors like a professional Marathon runner. When we found him a couple of hours later he was standing in the creek, which was full of ice water, trying to get his vitals cooled off.

"I defy any regular practitioner to make a quicker cure than that."—Walt Mason in Chicago News.

Easily Said.

"Some of these tongue twisters are really very hard to enunciate—for instance, 'the sea ceaseth and it sufficeth us.'"

"That 'th eathily thaid," lithpingly thmiled Mith Elithabeth. "You thimply thay it tho: 'The thea theatheth and it thuffitheth uth!'"—Life.

And several members of the Board appear to think they are not necessary at present.

A Generous Turf Patron.

The Earl of Lanesborough, military secretary to His Excellency the Governor-General, and for a long time before coming to Canada a member of the staff of H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, is one of the most skillful horsemen and authorities on horses in Ireland. He has, of course, many times met Richard Croker, the former Tammany Boss, and describes him as a most generous patron of the turf, whose going to Ireland has done much to encourage horse breeding and horse racing. His lordship, the other day, was shown at the Rideau Club, in Ottawa, a characteristic article from an American paper dilating upon the supposed high place Mr. Croker has attained in fashionable society in Ireland and describing his pending dethronement from that imminence. His lordship read the article through and remarked: "I am not surprised that Mr. Croker was anxious to leave his own country if they publish such a lot of stuff as that. He does not even aspire to what is really the highest Irish society, but no doubt enjoys himself with his monied friends who have similar tastes to his own, and who can blame him?"

He Doubted Her Sincerity.

"I cannot give you a favorable answer until you have talked with my father."

The young man seized his hat.

"What's your hurry?" the fair girl asked.

"I take no chances," replied the youth. "I am going to see your father before you can get to him."

And he hustled from the room.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Board of Education Had Discussion On School Sites.

SOME MEMBERS MUCH OPPOSED TO EXPROPRIATION PROCEEDINGS — MATTER FINALLY LEFT OVER TO A FUTURE MEETING

At a special meeting of the Board of Education, held last evening, the absent members were Messrs. E. J Butler, F. E. O'Flynn, C. M. Reid, Jas. Wallace and W. P. Hudson.

Mr. W. S. Morden, chairman, presided.

During the session considerable discussion took place in reference to securing a site for a new Public School and the result was that the matter was laid over for a week for further consideration.

Mr. J. L. Tickell resigned his position as a Trustee owing to the fact that the firm of which he is a member had received the contract for supplying seats, tables and chairs for school buildings.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From the Governor-General of Canada, acknowledging the receipt of the resolution passed by the Board expressing regret at the loss the Empire had sustained in the death of the late King Edward the Seventh.

From Mr. J. L. Tickell, tendering his resignation as a member of the Board.

From Mr. W. B. Deacon, President of the Board of Trade, asking that the Board endeavor to have the technical education commission hold a session in this city.

The chairman of the Board stated that he had written to the members of the commission requesting them to hold a session here.

A motion prevailed that the rules of the Board be suspended and the 7th order of business be considered namely, motions.

MOTION.

Mr. Johnson moved, seconded by Mr. Mallory, that the resignation of Mr. Tickell be accepted.

The motion prevailed after some members had expressed regret that Mr. Tickell had found it necessary to resign.

REPORTS.

The Sites, Buildings and Repairs Commitee recommended that the tender of J. Lewis and Co., of $24.50 for cleaning of stove pipes in the various schools be accepted.

It also recommended the purchase of the property on the west side of George street, running to Turnbull street, containing 1 1-3 acres, from the General Trust company, on behalf of the Bell Estate, for the sum of $1350; also that an effort be made to procure the Parker property adjoining, and if satisfactory arrangements cannot be made, steps be taken to expropriate the same and have matter referred to arbitration.

The committee further recommended the purchase from Henry Taylor, of two acres of land on the north side of Pine street for a Public school site and if the price asked seems unreasonable for the said two acres that the necessary steps be taken to have price fixed by arbitration as provided for under the School Act passed the 13th of April, 1909.

The Printing and Supplies Committee recommended that the tender of Tickell and Sons company for 263 single seats and 12 tables and a number of small chairs for the Kindergarten classes, being the lowest, be accepted.

The committee also recommended that Mr. Joshua Lang be awarded the contract for the supplying of slate blackboards for Queen Victoria, Station and Octavia street schools.

Board went into committee of the whole on reports, etc., Mr. Deacon in the chair.

The Sites, Building and Repairs Committee's report was first considered.

The recommendation that the John Lewis Company's tender of $24.50 for cleaning stove pipes and putting same up in the various schools was accepted.

A discussion ensued in reference to the recommendation that certain parcels of lands be procured on George street as a public school site.

Mr. Pennett said the Sites, Building and Repairs Committee had visited several sites and spent considerable time in referene to the matter. The committee considered the George street site was the best place for a school in that section of the city.

Col. Ponton stated that a year ago the Bell estate property could be procured for $1,100. The power of expropriating should be carefully considered before it is exercised. He contended that there was no necessity of taking a home from an honored family of this city. There were many acres of land untenanted in various parts of the city, which could be procured. Why not, if expropriation is to be resorted to, expropriate Mr. Corby's barn, north of the Bell property.

Mr. Johnson was opposed to the Board expropriating the Parker homestead. Some consideration should be given to the lady who is occupying the premises, and not take the home away from her.

Mr. Wills said he had heard it mentioned that Miss Parker was contemplating closing it up and disposing of it. The committee had looked over the Corby property, but considered the other portion of the site, south, was much more preferable for a school site.

Mr. Morden stated that he and the committee understood that the Parker property was for sale. The committee had no intention of ignoring Miss Parker in this matter.

Mr. Rabbitts was in favor of endeavoring to procure the barns on Mr. Corby's property rather than take away the Parker homestead.

Mr. Ponton moved, seconded by Mr. Ketcheson, that the consideration, re purchase of the George street site, of the report be postponed for one week, and the Board meet at 8 o'clock on Monday morning, at the Lingham property, to examine the same and other properties. —Carried.

The clause in the report in regard to purchasing 2 acres of land on Pine street, from Mr. Henry Taylor, was also laid over for a week.

The tender of Greenleaf & Sons for wiring of the chemistry building at the High School for $80 was, on motion, accepted.

The Printing and Supplies Committee's report was amended by having a clause inserted that all seats procured be of the adjustable make.

Mr. Joshua Lang was given the contract for supplying of slate blackboards for the schoolrooms needing same.

The committee rose and reported. The report was received and adopted. Board adjourned.

City Council in Special Session.

SPECIAL COMMITTEE'S REPORT RE PUMPHOUSE ELECTRIC POWER WAS ADOPTED— DONATION OF $100 TO CAMPBELLTON SUFFERERS — SEWERAGE MATTERS.

A special meeting of the City Council was held last evening, presided over by Mayor Marsh.

The principal business transacted was the consideration of the special Committee's report re the instalation of an electric plant at the pump house.

The recommendation that one electric motor and a pump be installed by the Canada Foundry Company, of Toronto, was accepted and the necessary specifications, contracts, etc. were ordered to be prepared.

A motion was unanimously adopted that the Mayor telegraph $100 to the Campbellton, N. B., fire sufferers.

The Parks Committee were authorized to distribute upon Victoria Park the stones and dirt taken from the excavation for the Dundas street sewer which would not be required for filling in.

Mayor Marsh and Ald. Lott, chairman of Public Works, were appointed a committee to receive tenders for all sewers that are advertised to be constructed.

Hard on Tramps.

Vagrants and tramps will no longer get a term in the county jails, as the department at Toronto has issued instructions to all police magistrates to commit tramps to the central prison. The tramp nuisance must be stamped out and as all committed to Toronto have to turn out daily and do road construction work in Northern Ontario or on the new prison farm it is expected there will be a less number of tramps.

Had Narrow Escape.

Napanee, August 5 — A serious accident occurred yesterday morning about noon, on Dundas street. An auto came along and frightened a horse, which started to run away and collided with a farmer's rig standing in front of A. S. Kennedy's grocery store. Benjamin Foote, Violet, was in the rig, which upset, and the horses dragged Mr. Foote quite a distance inflicting nasty cuts about the head and bruises to his body. Although no bones were broken, Mr. Foote lies in a very critical condition at the home of his daughter, Mill street. The horses were captured a block away without any serious damage being done. No one who witnessed the accident expected to see Mr. Foote alive the next minute, but going over the crossing the wagon bounded and freed him or he would have been dragged to death.

"I HONESTLY BELIEVE 'FRUIT-A-TIVES'

The Greatest Cure For Rheumatism In The World"

KNOWLTON, QUE., Oct. 12th. 1909.

"For many years, I suffered from severe Rheumatism, and the attacks were very distressing and prevented me from doing my ordinary work. I tried many remedies and physicians' treatments, but nothing seemed to do me much good, and I was becoming very anxious for fear I would become a permanent cripple from the disease.

I tried "Fruit-a-tives" and this medicine has entirely cured me and I honestly believe it is the greatest Rheumatism cure in the world."

E. E. MILLS.

Such a statement could not be bought from a man like Mr. Mills. He thinks too much of his good name, to sell it or sign it to an untruth. Mr. Mills tried "Fruit-a-tives" after all other treatment failed—and "Fruit-a-tives" cured him of Rheumatism. In the goodness of his heart, he wrote the above letter in order that sufferers in all parts of Canada would know that there is one remedy that actually does cure Rheumatism. This testimonial was entirely unsolicited on our part. We did not know that Mr Mills was taking "Fruit-a-tives" until we received the above letter.

It is a case like Mr. Mills' that proves the marvellous powers of "Fruit-a-tives" in arresting and curing disease. It may be stated, without fear of contradiction, that "Fruit-a-tives" will positively cure Rheumatism when properly used.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices and is the greatest Rheumatism cure known to modern science.

Contrary to the general belief that hard woods give more heat in burning than soft, Government experts have found by tests that linden, a very soft wood, has the greatest heating power, with fir, another soft wood, next.

A glass bottle may be cut off easily by tying around it a piece of string saturated in kerosene, lighting the string and allowing it to burn until the bottle is heated, then plunging the bottle into cold water.

A combination baby carriage and crib, invented by a Michigan man, has wheels that are easily detached when it is used for the latter purpose.

Water may be heated in a wooden barrel out of doors by inserting the ends of a pipe coil through one side of the barrel from the outside and maintaining a fire under the coil.

Taxis Were Condemned.

New York, Aug. 6.—A half-dozen taxicab inspectors, headed by Chief Inspector Brennan, swooped down on the St. Regis, the Gotham, Manhattan and Belmont Hotels and the University Club taxicab stands Thursday evening, and twelve taxicabs were "condemned," either for having meters that registered what is termed the double fare or for having meters without lights, so the passenger could not see what was being charged.

Deported From Brockville.

Brockville, Aug. 6.—Immigration Inspector P. Devlin of Kingston, yesterday deported from here to Morristown, Robert D. Kile, an American, who was liberated from jail after serving thirty days for stealing a sum of money from a passenger on the steamer Rapids King, while the boat was at Prescott.

THOUSAND LOSE JOBS

That Many Trainmen Must Seek Elsewhere For Work.

Those Who Have Committed Acts of Intimidation, Says Supt. Morley Donaldson, Will Not Be Taken Back—Grand Trunk's Loss Will Be Nearly a Million Dollars by a Conservative Estimate.

Ottawa, Aug. 6.—Supt. Morley Donaldson of the Grand Trunk, made the following statements after his return from Toronto yesterday.

"The opinion in Toronto and all along the main line is that the strike settlement is an absolute victory for Mr. Hays and the G.T.R. One thousand men will lose their positions over the whole Grand Trunk system as a result of the strike.

"The men who will lose their positions, will do so because they have committed acts of intimidation, or the like. The others will be taken back as rapidly as possible. The men who have come on during the strike, however, will be allowed to stay as long as they wish, and where the places are filled by these new men, men who were on strike will just have to be patient and wait."

About twenty of the Ottawa strikers were taken back to work yesterday.

Grand Trunk's Loss.

Montreal, Aug. 6.—The Grand Trunk statement issued yesterday of the traffic earnings of the ten-day week which closed July shows a decrease of $448,320 in the receipts. They were $719,307, as against $1,167,357.

This only reveals a corner of the economic wreckage caused by the strike. The official statement covers the period from July 22 to July 31, inclusive.

The strike began three days before July 22, and lasted two days after the 31st, so that $224,000 may fully be added to the amount of decrease in yesterday's report, making it $672,000.

The company's weekly increases for the beginning of the present year to the date of the ordering of the strike averaged over $140,000. This average is entirely obliterated for the 15 days the strike lasted, and makes the aggregate decrease in the company's earnings alone not far short of a million dollars, to say nothing of the direct additional expense involved by the company in engaging new men, in protecting men and property from possible violence, and in otherwise fighting the strike. Something was saved in wages and something in pensions, but the latter will not enrich the ordinary accounts of the company as the contributions to the pension fund will remain the same.

Discovery Caused Stampede.

Winnipeg, Aug. 6.—A number of enquiries by wire from points in Ontario, Quebec and New England States have been received in Winnipeg as to the correctness of the reported gold discovery north of Hudson Bay Junction.

All information is based upon the statement of A. Vagatsond, a Cree Indian, whose unreliability is proverbial. At the Junction his report is regarded as reliable, and practically every male resident of the Junction has gone out to the scene of the alleged discovery to stake claims, and the town is deserted, except by women and children. It is claimed that samples of almost pure gold have been brought into the town.

Chained to the Wall.

Chicago, Aug. 6.—Humane agents acting on an anonymous communication from neighbors, forced their way into a dark room in the home of Hugo Lang, and found a six-year-old boy, trembling and emaciated, locked to the wall with a heavy chain. The parents were arrested.

Neighbors assert that the boy had been punished so much that he crawls on all fours to his parents when they call, and that he has spent a large part of his life chained to the wall in the dark room.

Oliver Back From His Travels.

Edmonton, Aug. 6.—Hon. Frank Oliver returned to the city yesterday from Vancouver, he having made the long journey to the Yukon via the Mackenzie River route, a total distance of over 8,000 miles, in two months and two days, the fastest on record. He had no statement to make in addition to that from Vancouver concerning the report of his retirement from the Laurier Cabinet.

May Divide Diocese.

Winnipeg, Aug. 6.—The Provincial Synod of the Anglican Church for Prince Rupert Land will meet shortly in Prince Albert.

One of the most important problems which will be up will be the question of the division of the Diocese of Calgary, which includes the whole of Alberta, into two bishoprics with two bishops, one at Calgary and the other at Edmonton.

Thought Drowned, Turns Up.

Fort William, Aug. 6.—Reported drowned in the newspapers, and all but given up for dead, J. A. Johnston, a fur dealer, has arrived in the city to pay a visit to his brother, W. H. Johnston. He was thought to have gone to the bottom of Lake Helen, near here, about a month ago, when a canoe capsized.

Seven Lives Lost In Fire.

New York, Aug. 6.—Seven lives were lost early yesterday in a fire which destroyed a three-storey lodging house in the foreign section of Jamaica, Long Island. The blaze started in a hallway, the only exist, and spread so rapidly that few of the inmates had any opportunity to escape.

Found Dead.

Ingersoll, Aug. 6.—Mrs. Elizabeth Elliott, who had been a resident of this town upwards of 65 years, was found dead in her house yesterday morning about eight o'clock. Death was due to apoplexy.

An automatic burglar-proof lock has been patented for freight trains. If broken, it sounds an air whistle and sets the brakes on the train.

Desperate Criminals at Large.

Ingersoll, Aug. 6.—Jack Roberts and his chum, Steadman, who made a daring escape from the London jail on Tuesday afternoon last, are still at large and undoubtedly in this town and community, baffling the best efforts of the local police force, assisted by High Constable Hughes of Middlesex, and Deputy Sheriff Waterworth of London.

Not only has he shaken hands with a number of citizens of this town, not only has he openly appeared on the main streets, but he has been within a stone's throw of the officers in pursuit of him and yet he eludes them at every turn.

It is stated that both men are heavily armed and will offer a stern resistance if cornered.

Big Fishing Organization.

Victoria, Aug. 6.—An option, said to have been taken by Mackenzie and Mann, on the entire holdings of the Pacific Whaling Co. on this coast, is expected to give Vancouver one of the largest fishing organizations in the world. The holdings of the Pacific Company are valued at upwards of $1,000,000, but the new concern will probably have several million dollars' capital behind it, and will expand the industry so that it will include both halibut and shark fishing.

Pelee Island Cable Out of Order.

Windsor, Aug. 6.—The huge telephone cable from Leamington, Ont., to Pelee Island, the most southerly point in Canada, the only means of direct communication with the mainland, is again out of order. The Canadian officials at Ottawa have been notified, and Supt. Selkirk has gone out in a tug to look for the break. It is thought one of the vessels got her anchor caught in the cable, causing the trouble.

A SERIOUS DINER.

The Way the Great Emperor Charles V. Ate His Meals.

The diary of a German gentleman, Bartholomew Sastrow, who lived in the time of the Emperor Charles V., gives us a good idea of the gastronomic customs of those times. Sastrow's description of the table habits of the greatest ruler in his day is very interesting.

Young princes and counts served the repast. There were invariably four courses of six dishes. The emperor had no one to carve for him. He began by cutting his bread in pieces large enough for one mouthful, then attacked his plate. He often used his fingers while he held the plate under his chin with the other hand.

When he felt thirsty he made a sign to the "doctor" standing by the table; then they went to the sideboard for two silver flagons and filled a goblet which held about a measure and a half. The emperor drained it to the last drop, practically at one draft.

During the meal he never uttered a syllable, scarcely smiled at the most amusing sallies of the jesters behind his chair, finally picked his teeth with quills and, after washing his hands, retired to a window recess, where anybody could approach him with a petition.

SALT WATER.

Deep Seas Are More Saline Than Those That Are Shallow.

The density of sea water depends upon the quantity of saline matter it contains. The proportion is generally about 3 or 4 per cent, though it varies in different places. The ocean contains more salt in the southern than in the northern hemisphere, and the Atlantic contains more than the Pacific. The greatest proportion of salt in the Pacific is in the parallels of 22 degrees north latitude and 17 degrees south latitude. Near the equator it is less, and in the polar seas it is least, from the melting of the ice.

The saltness varies with the seasons in these regions, and the fresh water, being lighter, is uppermost. Rain makes the surface of the sea fresher than the interior parts, and the influx of rivers renders the ocean less salt at their estuaries.

Deep seas are more saline than those that are shallow, and inland seas communicating with the main are less salt, from the rivers that flow into them. To this, however, the Mediterranean is an exception, owing to great evaporation and the influx of salt currents from the Black sea and the Atlantic. The water in the strait of Gibraltar at the depth of 670 fathoms is four times as salt as that at the surface.—St. James' Gazette.

Lore of the Clover.

Any one who carries about a four leaved clover will be lucky and will have the power of discovering ghosts or evil spirits. With it under the pillow the lover may insure dreams of the beloved one. A fragment in the shoe of a traveler insures a safe journey. Of the five leaved clover it is declared that if it be worn on the left side of a maiden's dress or fastened behind the hall door the Christian name of the first man who enters will be the same as that of the future husband. The power of the four leaved shamrock for good is familiar to all from Lover's pretty and once popular song, the speaker in which pictures what she would do should she find the magic plant:

I would play the enchanter's part and scatter bliss around,
And not a tear or aching heart should in the world be found.

—London Globe.

The Nature of Friendship.

Friendship may be fostered, but cannot be forced. Two are as one, not because it is in the will of either, but because it is in the nature of both. When souls of similar fiber encounter each other the gods preside at the meeting. I may not cockily say, "I will make this man my friend." He either is or is not my friend without any decision of mine or his. The ages have been shaping the two of us, and if we fit into each other well and good; if not, we know it instinctively and are worlds apart though we toast our shins at the same fire and bandy words till doomsday.—Richard Wightman in Metropolitan Magazine.

Consolation.

There had been a little quarrel after the honeymoon.

"And just look at my pretty linen collar," sobbed the young wife; "the tears have trickled down and wilted it out of shape. You haven't a bit of feeling."

"Indeed I have," laughed the big husband; "I'm going to fix things up."

"H-how, George?"

"Why, the next time I go downtown I am going to buy you a waterproof collar."—Chicago News.

The Two Periods.

The career of every successful man may be divided into two periods—first, when he is not given credit for what he knows and, second, when he is given credit for what he doesn't know.—Life.

Grand Trunk Trainmen Want Investigation of Settlement--- Will There Be a Bigger Strike?

(Intelligencer Special.)

Hamilton, Ont., August 8 — Local Union of Trainmen has sent to the International Union a request that the settlement of the G. T. R. strike be investigated by that body.

The members refuse to discuss the request, but say the investigations may result in interesting revelations and another strike on a bigger scale.

Crippen and Leneve Not up in Court.

(Intelligencer Special.)

Quebec, August 8 — Dr. Crippen and Miss Eeneve did not appear in court to-day as was expected.

This shows that they have no intention of fighting extradition to England.

The commitment under which they are held in jail reads for detention until they are deported to England, so that it will not likely be necessary for them to appear in court here again.

The Royal Edward, on which is Detective Mitchell, with the necessary papers is expected to arrive Wednesday.

Mackenzie & Mann Form Fishing Trust.

(Intelligencer Special.)

SITUATION IN MONTREAL.

(Intelligencer Special.)

Montreal, August 8 — Although vice president Murdock, of the Trainmen's Union, salys he is perfectly satisfied with the way the company is carrying out the settlement, many men who have not been taken back are greatly dissatisfied. They appear to feel that Murdock and other Union officials have left them stranded at the company's mercy.

A Kindly Act.

A Canadian gentleman of benevolent tendencies was approached by an impoverished friend—say Smith—who declared that a little financial assistance "would set him on his feet." Smith was of the artistic temperament and in no time was spending the little loan in riotous living.

His benefactor was amazed one day to behold Smith riding a spirited steed and altogether having a most enjoyable time.

"Confound Smith," said the benefactor testily. "I wish I'd never lent the fellow a cent. I don't mind putting a man on his feet, but I certainly do not bargain for setting him on horseback."

A Record Shipment.

The largest shipment of muskrat skins ever sent by a Canadian firm to European markets has just been consigned from Ottawa and left by the Empress of Britain from Quebec for Liverpool, whence it will be despatched to its ultimate destination. In the shipment there were 17,647 skins, with a weight of 2,580 pounds, packed in ten large bales.

Jason's Defect.

Don't be too critical. The other day I said to a fellow: "Jason, it doesn't show very good manners to whistle in the dining-room." "I know it," replied Jason kindly, "and I'll stop it if you quit eating potatoes with your knife and sucking coffee out of your saucer." The trouble with Jason is that he cannot take advice.

Troops Still on Guard.

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 8.—At a conference of military and city officials Saturday evening, it was decided not to release additional Ohio National Guard troops from strike duty at present, as a result of attempts made Friday evening to blow up two street cars. The cars carried no one save the crews. These escaped injury, but the cars were badly damaged. The 4th Regiment and the 9th Battalion (colored) were relieved yesterday.

The Carmen's Union have asked Governor Harmon to call a special session of the Legislature to revoke the franchise of the Columbus Railway & Light Co.

Serious Fighting In Persia.

Teheran, Persia, Aug. 8.—A serious engagement took place here yesterday in which there were many casualties. A Government proclamation, ordering the Nationalists to disarm within 48 hours, was ignored, and it was decided to adopt severe measures to enforce it. The German Minister vainly interceded with the Nationalists, who took up their position in the northern part of the city, under the leadership of Satar Khan, the Constitutionalist, and Bakir Khan.

Laying Out Port Mann.

SALVE FOR HIS WOUND.

A Strenuous Scene That Was Not on the Bill of the Play.

Giovanni Grasso, a Sicilian actor of unusual dramatic energy, was playing in Florence in one of his fiercest parts, where he had to stab his enemy with a dagger. Suddenly, in the heat of his passion, Grasso let the weapon slip out of his hand. It alighted in the pit on a man's head, cutting it slightly.

An indignant member of the audience flung the knife back to the stage, where it was dexterously caught by Grasso. Raising it aloft in his hand and as if it were accursed, Grasso smashed it in two and then stamped upon it.

Then, with a swift bound, Grasso was in the pit beside the injured man. The next minute he had climbed back to the boards, with the victim in his arms.

After settling him in a chair Grasso threw himself on his knees and began a long entreaty for forgiveness. This was rapidly granted by the much embarrassed playgoer, who on his side begged to be allowed to return to his seat.

But this was not to be until Grasso, weeping copiously, had bestowed no fewer than fifty resounding kisses on the man's blushing cheeks.

The action was greeted with loud cheers, and after Grasso had gracefully bowed his thanks the play was resumed and successfully concluded.—London Express.

Perils of the Hair Cut.

"Ouch!" cried the barber and something besides. He stuck the end of his thumb in his mouth and began sucking it.

"Cut yourself?" asked the man in the chair.

"No; it's an ingrowing hair," replied the barber—"an ingrowing hair under my thumb nail."

The man in the chair laughed.

"Fact," said the barber. "It isn't an uncommon thing either. In giving a customer a hair cut a bit of hair often lodges under the finger nail, and if it isn't removed it is apt to fester and get sore. Sometimes we don't even know it's there until it begins to get in its fine work. It hurts like the dickens sometimes. If you don't believe me, ask any barber and he'll tell you the same thing."—New York Times.

A Gun Club's Treasure.

Thirteen million cartridge shells, the result of eleven years of shooting by the members of a gun club, have been gathered into a huge pile by one of the leading sporting organizations of England. Eleven years ago one of the members conceived the idea of having the members save all their shells and deposit them on the pile. The shell bank is now the club's most prized possession. If a single man were to shoot one cartridge a second day and night it would take him about twenty-five years to discharge 13,000,000. The club maintains a vigilant guard over its precious shell pile.

Touching Verse.

At first she touches up her hair
To see if it's in place,
And then with manner debonair
She touches up her face.
A touch to curls behind her ear,
A touch to silken collar,
And then she's off to hubby dear—
To touch him for a dollar.

IN BRITISH CUSTODY

Crippen and Leneve Turned Over to Inspector Dew.

The Last Appearance of Prisoners In a Canadian Court Occurs at Quebec and Now They Are Ready For Removal to Great Britain—Throngs Hang About the Prison to Catch Sight of Crippen.

Quebec, Aug. 8.—Dr. Harvey H. Crippen and Miss Ethel Leneve, the young woman whom he brought with him across the ocean on his long but futile flight to escape the grip of Scotland Yard, made their final appearance before a Canadian court of justice. The two prisoners were brought before Judge Angers at 10.30 o'clock, when they were formally remanded in the custody of the British authorities represented by Detective Dew.

Dr. Crippen and the girl were taken from the jail to the Court House in separate closed carriages. The alleged murderer of his actress wife was accompanied by two guards in order to provide against any possible attempt to escape. The jail in which Dr. Crippen occupies a cell was the Mecca of hundreds of people yesterday, who walked around it in a vain attempt to catch a glimpse of the physician. Many people secured permits to visit the jail, and presented them in the hope that they might be able to see Crippen. Crippen attended Mass in the jail chapel at 9 o'clock. Attendance at Divine service is compulsory, and Crippen made no demur when informed that he was expected to go. He was escorted in between two guards, and sat apart from the rest of the prisoners.

Ethel Leneve spent the day in her cell looking out of its narrow window. When approached by Governor Morin in regard to attending the Anglican service she showed the nervous strain under which she has been laboring since here dramatic arrest on the Montrose. "Oh, I don't wish to go; please don't ask me," she pleaded with tears in her eyes. When Governor Morin reminded her of the prison rules her agitation was so great that she was allowed to stay in her cell.

Three cablegrams were received by the prisoners Saturday and Sunday, but no answers were sent. Governor Morin, through whom the messages passed, has not made known their purport. The story that Ethel Leneve declared she "hated Dr. Crippen" is emphatically denied. According to the attendants at the jail the girl never mentions Dr. Crippen's name.

It is stated that Miss Leneve received a telegram from a New York theatrical manager offering her $1,000 a week for an indefinite engagement in vaudeville, to begin immediately upon her release from prison in the event that she is set free.

Strike Leaders Endorsed.

Montreal, Aug. 8.—Members of the general committee of trainmen, yardmen and conductors, completed their work Saturday, and left for home in the afternoon. It was stated after the conference that the discussion was friendly, and that the committeemen were satisfied with the explanation given them by Vice-Presidents Murdock and Berry, and they endorsed the course taken by the strike leaders.

Discussion will continue between the railways and representatives of the men. Thirty delegates of the firemen's union are expected to arrive in Montreal to-day, for a discussion of a new schedule of wages. The conference is expected to be friendly, marking the close of the agreement and the opening of another on the basis of an increase of pay.

An Editor's Heroism.

Deposit, N.Y., Aug. 8.—W. R. Michaelis, publisher of The Chicago Staats Zeitung, was drowned at Oquaga Lake, a few miles from here, yesterday afternoon and his body recovered three hours afterward. Deceased was out in a boat with his little eight-year-old daughter, who lost her hat, and, in reaching out for it, fell overboard. The father jumped out after the child, and, catching hold of her, held her above the water until his strength failed. Parties in boats nearby rescued the child, but the father sank and was drowned.

Smallpox Confines Firemen.

Brantford, Aug. 8.—A general vaccination of the city commenced today, by the order of the Board of Health. There are 48 cases of smallpox, all of a mild type, and the authorities believe that vaccination, a matter in which there has been considerable laxity locally for some years, will prove an effective stop to any further outbreak.

Owing to a number of the central fire department being taken ill last week, the firemen are confined to the department, but they responded to an alarm Saturday night.

Borden Tour Begins Next Month.

Ottawa, Aug. 8.—R. L. Borden will open a tour of Ottawa Valley towns early next month. He will speak first at Renfrew and Arnprior.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Only three counties in Ontario are now affected with rabies.

William L. Rice, a millionaire lawyer of Cleveland, was murdered.

Daniel McEwen, a London horse owner, was brutally attacked and robbed in Detroit.

Two officers and five men were injured by an explosion on a United States submarine.

A young man made the flight by night from Cardiff to London, 150 miles, in a dirigible airship.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier addressed a number of gatherings on Saturday alone the line of the C.N.R. between Regina and Battleford.

The congratulations to Lord Strathcona on the attainment of his 90th birthday on Saturday, included messages from the King, the Queen, the Queen Mother, the Duke of Connaught and Premier Asquith.

Two persons were killed outright, three fatally injured and two others may die as the result of an accident in which a Southern Railway passenger train crashed into a large automobile near Birmingham, Ala., about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Incendiary Fire.

Brockville, Aug. 8.—At 5.30 yesterday morning the fire brigade was summoned to the three-storey Merrill Block on King street, occupied by C. H. Post, dry goods, and Charles E. Johnston & Co., house furnishings, with flats accommodating the cigar factory of Robinson & Burtrand, the Young Liberal Club, Lindsay's art headquarters and lodge rooms for various fraternal organizations. A watchman found the hallway, running from the ground to the top flats, with two flights of stairs in the centre, a mass of flames, which had originated under the second stairway.

The brigade confined the fire to the hall, but in extinguishing the flames, which had become embedded in the garret, the building was completely water soaked, which caused the principal damage, estimated at between $8,000 and $10,000, partially covered by insurance.

The police have under arrest a middle-aged man giving the name of Peter Marret of Toronto, who says he started the blaze about an hour before it was discovered. He gave himself up at police headquarters, and pointed out the spot to Chief Burke, where he touched the match in a bundle of papers under the stairs. The general opinion is that it was the act of an insane man.

Excursion Steamer Wrecked.

Vancouver, Aug. 8.—The steamer Seichelt, a small excursion boat running between Vancouver and points forty miles up the coast, was wrecked yesterday morning at two o'clock in Vancouver first narrows, at the point where the sister steamer Beaver was lost a quarter of a century ago. The Seichelt was passing Prospect Point in a thick fog and swung around in the tide, striking the rocks.

A dozen dozing passengers immediately began breaking the windows of the cabin, trying to climb to safety, and this commotion attracted the attention of the lighthouse keeper at the Point, only a few yards distant. He launched a lifeboat, and, making three trips between the steamer and the shore, easily rescued all the passengers. The boat stuck fast, and the life of no one was in danger at any time. Her engineroom fire being drawn, the live coals set fire to the engineroom woodwork, but this was extinguished at 3 o'clock. The vessel will probably be raised to-night.

Struck by Donkey Engine.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Aug. 8.—While working on the lower river bank, near the Ontario Power Co.'s power house Saturday night, Andrew Hendershot, a carpenter, was so badly injured that he is not expected to live. He was walking along the track when a donkey engine struck him, crushing his left ankle and inflicting a severe wound on the head.

Killed by a Grain Beard.

Ottawa, Aug. 8.—A young man working on a farm at Carp, while bundling barley, got a piece of the grain beard in his threat. As it pained him, he came to Ottawa, and it was taken out. Yesterday morning he was seized with a fit of coughing, and died of the hemorrhage at the hospital.

Bourassa's Anti-Naval Campaign.

St. Hyacinthe, Aug. 8.—Canada's naval policy was denounced here yesterday afternoon by Henri Bourassa, Jean Provost and other Nationalist speakers. It was represented as being un-Canadian, un-Liberal and contrary to the past principles of every political party of the Dominion.

Labor Organizer Drowned.

Ottawa, Aug. 8.—Eugene Cadieux, well-known as the International Allied Trades and Labor organizer, was found drowned in the Rideau Canal at two o'clock yesterday morning, near the locks. Cadieux, who was 27 years of age, had also held the positions of president and secretary of the association. He was to have been married next month.

Generals Were Wounded.

New Orleans, Aug. 8.—Generals Lara and Valdez of the Madriz army were wounded and the son of General Lara was captured at a battle fought at Chiriqui, near Juigalpa, Nicaragua, according to information brought to New Orleans by General Antonio Carales of the Estrada army, who was severely wounded in the last battle of Rama.

Is making it Famous

When you use WONDER-SHINE, the dreaded half-day cleaning your silverware becomes but a pleasant half-hour.

Without any rubbing or scrubbing the tarnish disappears and the original brightness is restored, but neither your silver, your temper, nor your fingers will suffer as when you use "rub on" preparations of abrasive powder, or acid paste polishes.

WONDER-SHINE is not rubbed on, the silver is simply dipped in.

Like all great discoveries, the process is very simple.

Notes From the Police Blotter.

There has not been an inmate of the police cells since Friday night.

Last evening, at 9.40, the police were called to Corby Park it being reported that some boys were acting in a disorderly manner. All was quiet when the officer arrived, the lads having decamped.

BASEBALL

Coleman's Flats Won Close Game.

There were all sorts of doings at the Belleville ball yard on Saturday afternoon, when the Coleman's Flats beat the Park Nine sharps in one of the closest and most exciting games ever tore off in this city. Talk about your thrills—in the last inning everybody was shouting in the key of G. Some folks were shouting because they wanted to see the Park Nine lads tie the score, while others were cracking their voices because they hoped they wouldn't. Taken altogether it was a joyous occasion long to be remembered, not altogether on account of the baseball, but also because of the large bunches of trouble which seemed to crop up for the umpire every once in a while. Talk about earning his pay—well, if Mr. "Jack" Truaisch had received as much as Jeffries did in that recent unpleasantness at Reno, he would not have been overpaid. If anybody asks you, the gentle game of umpire baiting has been played to the limit in this city. A few more pieces like those of recent date and umpires will be as scarce in Belleville as white blackbirds on Queen Victoria Park. And the matter is as ludicrous as it is inconsistent. The umpire is only a man. He is not a plaster saint with a stained glass halo who can do no wrong. All he can do is to do the square thing as he sees it and try to give everybody an even break. And it must not be forgotten that both sides agree to abide by his decisions before he strikes an attitude and begins to crack his voice calling balls and strikes. The least they can do then is to take their medicine. It has got to be so now in this city, that if an umpire makes a close decision at all, no matter which side it favors, some red-eyed pirate pries open his visage and hurls epithets at the umpire which reflects on everything he owns, from his corns to his relatives on both the maternal and paternal side. And the umpire, who, perhaps, in private life is a retiring and respectable member of society, begins to think that life is a horrible panorama, in which everybody, almost, is thirsting for his gore, and the chief joy some of his closest acquaintances could have would be to act as a coroner's jury in his case and bring in a verdict of "Justifiable homicide." This may be a little bit overdrawn, perhaps, but not more than a thousand miles or so. As to the umpiring of Mr. Truasich, to the unprejudiced observer it seemed that he was honestly trying to do his best. Another thing that calls for red-hot comment is the way the crowd is allowed to encroach on the field. The playing space should be roped off, and then the league officials should get special policemen, if they can't get the genuine article, and see that the players get a fair show. The baseball season in this city so far has been good, but the game will be killed as dead as the whale which swallowed Jonah if present methods are allowed to continue. And now, having got these matters off our mind, let's make a few remarks about the game. The Park Nine presented the same old line-up, but the Coleman's Flats had a new battery in the persons of Purtell and Campbell. The chap who handed up the benders was from Kingston, and he was right there with the goods. Philp, for the Park Nine, pitched his usual steady game, and was fairly well supported. The Flats were first at bat, and for three innings drew blanks. In their half of the third the Park Nine tore off two runs, owing largely to some juicy errors by their opponents. In the fourth the Flats straightened out Philp's curves and tied the score. They got another in the 5th, while the Park Nine boys were blanked. The latter pulled up even in the sixth and went one ahead in the 7th. In the 9th the Flats fell on Philp fiercely. Three of their men chased over the pan and then they blanked the lads from the wharf. Purtell, the Flat's pitcher, got out of a tight hole in this inning. The Park Nine had men on second and third and nobody down, but the Kingston chap kept his head, fanned two men and the other was out at first.

Pretty work. The Park Nine infielders were doing some swell ball playing all through the game. In the first half of the 9th the Flats made two more. They seemed to have Philp's measure. With the score 8-4 against them the Park Nine went in to do or die. McGuire, the first man up, was safe on an infield error. Thomas was next, and he exploded a fly which Orr caught off his shoe tops, then he shot the ball to first, but Thomas interferred with the throw and the umpire called McGuire out. Two gone, and the Park Nine looked to have as much chance as a snowball in the warm place. But you never can tell. The next man up knocked a fly, which Minns, the Flat's right fielder, in his anxiety, dropped. The next man hit safe. Two men on. Then "Crow" Connolly exploded a two-bagger and the other two runners scored. "Henniky" Reeves hit the ball in a line and the third run of the inning went in. A passed ball and Reeves was safely anchored at the third station. One more run would tie. Brennan was up. He banged the ball at Draycott, who fell all over it, but recovered it in time to get Brennan at first on a close decision. That settled it. The Flats had won by 8 to 7.

Ontario's Protest Disallowed.

At a special meeting of the Executive of the City Baseball League, held Saturday evening, August 6th, called for the purpose of deciding the result of the Ontario's protest, it was carried by a majority of said committee that the decisions rendered by the umpire at the game played on Wednesday, August 3rd, were final and binding on both teams competing, and that the umpire performed his duties in a capable and satisfactory manner.

The members of each and every team playing in every future game for the balance of the season are hereby given notice that the umpire is the sole and only person having jurisdiction over the diamond and players, and it is sincerely hoped that each and every team will govern themselves accordingly.—Com.

How Some Englishmen Were Treated in Canada.

(Sept of England Record)

The Glouchestershire Chronicle prints the following story of the experiences of a party of Englishmen that endeavored to enter Canada:

"In view of the fact that several young Glouchester men have recently emigrated to Canada, and probably others contemplating trying their fortunes in the Dominion, the following story of the experience of a party of Englishmen (including a nephew of Mr. S. Meors, of Lower Guiting), who recently sailed for Canada will be read with interest:

Mr. Gerratt, of New Bastorn, says:—"A short time ago thirteen of us were engaged to go into Messrs. Penman and Company's Canadian hosiery mills at a town called Paris, Ont. We were engaged by the month at six dollars a week, and to pay our fares back again in two years. We sailed on the Victorian on May 13, landing at Quebec on May 20.

When we got to the Customs Office we were asked several questions as to employment, how much money had we, etc. We told them we had our passage paid out, together with a guarantee of several years' work. One of our party had 16 pounds, another 6 pounds, and we all had a little money.

A Week in an Immigration Hospital

"After answering these questions we were detained in a room several hours. At the end of that time we were marched out, and without any explanation of any sort we were put in a carriage. We enquired where we were off to, and the officer then said we were going to catch the 1.30 train for Paris (our destination.) Having no cause to doubt his word, we meekly submitted to being driven off. We were driven for a matter of three miles, when the driver pulled up at what was called an 'Immigration Hospital.' There we were detained for a full week without any explanation of any sort, and we were fed on tea, sour bread, and salt butter. We sent several messages to the firm we were going to, and we firmly believe the messages never went out of the place, as we had to trust to them to do the posting and telegraphing, giving them the money. We could not post them ourselves, as we were kept prisoners all the time, and watched day and night.

Numbered Like Convicts

"We endured it for a week, when on the Friday (May 27) the official of this place shouted out numbers (we were all numbered like convicts). They told us we were going out, and when we asked where to, he replied, 'to our destination' again deceiving us. Well, we were put in a carriage and drove straight to the Custom's Office where our luggage was put on, and then we were driven on to the boat, the same we went out on. We were sent back without an explanation of any description. We passed the three doctors and got the medical stamp.

"Since we have been in England we have learned that the firm heard nothing from us, although we gave the officials the letters and telegrams. The firm also gave us several messages, but we never heard a word from them. Thinking it possible that we were detained through insufficient cash, the firm sent the custom officials 250 dollars for our release, but they returned it, and told them they were sending us on.

The next thing they heard that we were half way across the sea.

"This is one sample of how Englishmen are treated at Port Quebec."

PAROLED MEN DO WELL.

Only 65 Out of 3,100 Men Forfeit Their Liberty.

Dominion Parole Officer Archibald has just made an official visit to the penitentiary at Kingston. This is the first visit of Mr. Archibald since his severe illness last winter, and his many friends in Kingston were delighted to see him on the road to recovery. When asked as to how the parole system was working, and as to the number of prisoners who had been paroled since the inception of the system in Canada eleven years ago, Mr. Archibald said that he was at the present time making out a report for the department, but could perhaps give approximate figures. Since the system was established in 1899, he said about 3,100 prisoners were released on parole. Out of that number only about 65 had forfeited their liberty. That is a splendid record, Mr. Archibald said. Nearly 2,300 have won their full liberty and are in the enjoyment of good citizenship, showing that they were not criminals, but had yielded to temptation in moments of weakness, and afterwards deeply regretted their acts and repented in sackcloth and ashes. One thousand prisoners are still reporting. Last year 460 prisoners completed their paroles. Of the 3,100 prisoners paroled in eleven years, 1,800 were from the penitentiaries and 1,300 from the jails and reformatories.

The number of paroles has been steadily increasing, but Mr. Archibald thinks that the limit has now been reached. Last year the paroles totalled about 578, or about 100 more than in the previous year. In the prisons of Canada Mr. Archibald said that there were about one-third of the prisoners in whom the utmost confidence could be put if they were released on parole. There were probably from 15 to 20 per cent. who would be better incarcerated for life, as they were genuine criminals.

One year Mr. Archibald followed up the prisoners paroled, of whom there were 300, and found that they were earning a total of about $120,000. They had "made good," and were valuable citizens.

"Ode to a Hard-Tack."

Those who remember the "hard-tack," an adamantine form of biscuit served to the soldiers in the rebellion of 1885, will appreciate the force of the following poem, "Ode to a Hard-tack," read by Mr. T. W. Gibson, Deputy Minister of Mines, at the recent banquet of the Battleford Column. The lines were composed by Mr. Gibson while on service in the rebellion:—

O relic of the old red sandstone age!
O hardened bit of indurated granite,
Compact alone of water and flinty flour,
Thou mockest me!

Returning oft from picket or from guard,
Or from patrol, with leaden steps and slow,
With hunger famished and with famine pressed,
I've fallen upon thee, rifle-butt and heel;
With both feet have I jumped upon thee,
In hopes to separate a morsel I could eat,
But all in vain!

Hard as the nether millstone, or as steel,
As diamond, or as boiler plate unbreakable,
Thou foil'dst my rage!

In vain I'd gnash my teeth and use strong words;
I found thee still invincible;
No moth corrupt thee can, nor rust decay.

'Tis said that all things pass and cease to be,
And that the slow succession of receding years
Will bring all things created to an end.
It may be so, but in my heart of hearts
I feel that when the Angel Gabriel's trump
Shall sound the knell of mundane things,
Amid the crash of matter and the wreck of worlds,
Thou, Hard-tack, will remain unconquerable, serene,
Fit emblem of eternity!

Points in selecting a cow: If you are buying a cow, look for a long udder lengthwise of her body, very elastic, as this invariably means milk; a soft skin, large, roomy digestive organs, with broad ribs wide apart.

Tar Water.

Tar water was a cure-all in the eighteenth century. It was prepared by pouring a gallon of water on a quart of tar, and the dose was half a pint in the morning and a second glass in the afternoon. Its use became so fashionable that a contemporary noted: "It's as common to call for a glass of tar water in a coffee house as a dish of tea or coffee."

The Strike

Now that the strike of the Grand Trunk Railway men has been settled the question may fairly be asked, what has been the effect upon all parties interested? Trade and passenger travel was, to a great extent, demoralized. Financially, if estimates which have been made are correct, the Grand Trunk has suffered to the extent of some $1,000,000, and the labor organizations, in the amount they had to pay the men during the strike, in the neighborhood of $500,000. In addition to this, the men lost the difference between the amount received from the Treasury of the labor organizations, and that which they would have received in wages from the Grand Trunk company had they remained at work. This is not all, many of them have lost their places, as new men who came to the relief of the company during the strike are to be dismissed to make room for the strikers. The latter are to be taken back as vacancies occur. In this Mr. Hays is to be commended. It would be flagrant ingratitude on the part of the Company, were these men dismissed to make room for those who created the trouble. Those who have been guilty of interfering with the new men in the performance of their duty or who have been guilty of committing outrages, such as destroying property, obstructing the railway track or assaulting workingmen, are not to be re-employed under any circumstances. There is still another loss which many of the old employees of the Road have sustained, and that is the pension to which they would have been entitled had they not joined the strikers. This loss for their families' sake, is to be regretted, yet no sensible man will condemn the Grand Trunk officials for the policy they have adopted in this particular. Some, however, the Toronto Globe among the number, argue that these men should not be deprived of a pension to which, had they remained at their work, they would have been under, the rules of the Company, entitled to for life. To accept this reasoning as sound, would simply mean that the man who, on the order of an organization, puts the knife to a Company's throat, demands additional wages, and, if refused, throws up his position, joins a band of strikers who threaten ruin and bankruptcy to the Company, destroys property, and in some cases causes the loss of life should be rewarded with a pension. Is not this carrying what are deemed the rights of labor too far? It should not be forgotten that the position of the employees in the matter of pensions is not one of right. Provision for the pensions is made altogether out of the funds of the company, and the granting of the pensions is purely voluntary on the part of the company. The company is therefore at all times free to pay or withhold the pensions as it pleases, and for any reason it may consider sufficient. The men of their own accord or at the command of irresponsible Bosses who live and fatten upon the hard earned money of the workingmen, desert their work, and attempt the ruin of the company in whose employment they were, and could hardly expect to be rewarded therefor. In this Mr. Hays is also to be commended, in refusing to reward men with a pension who were responsible for the mischief which has been done.

What have the men gained in this strike? Very little more than was offered by Mr. Hays before the strike. They have received an advance in wages one year earlier than it was promised, and little more; a very slight return for what they lost.

The sooner the wage earners of Canada cut themselves loose from the thraldom of these Yankee organizations and Yankee Bosses who live in luxury and enjoy life at their expense, the better it will be for them the better it will be for them, their families, and the country.

An Avenger

A Story of an Assassination by a Russian Nihilist

By C. L. POINEER

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

I was making a tour of Switzerland on foot. All the luggage I had with me was strapped on my back, and in my hand I carried a light alpenstock.

One morning I started from Interlaken to walk to Thun. The road I took leads along the west bank of Lake Thun, or Thunder lake, one of the prettiest bodies of water in Switzerland. From the road one has a perpetual view of the Bernese Alps, the Eiger, the Monk and the Jungfrau, whose snowy peaks rising high in the heavens may often be mistaken for light clouds. The sun was shining on the lake, over whose bosom the little steamers running between Interlaken and Thun loaded with tourists were passing back and forth.

Not far from Interlaken the road passes through a tunnel in a perpendicular cliff that forms the bank of the lake. While walking through this tunnel I caught up with a youth who, judging from his pack, was making a foot journey the same as I. He spoke to me in German, the language of that part of Switzerland, but I signified that I did not understand him, and he repeated his question in French.

"How far is it, sir, to Thun?"

"Ten or twelve miles, I believe."

He was inclined to let me go on ahead of him; but, preferring company, I adapted my gait to his. He was apparently not more than eighteen years old. No beard had yet started on his face, and his hair and complexion were fair. I took him for a Swede or a Norwegian, though such light hair and skin are common in northern Germany. We walked on together, chatting and enjoying the beautiful panorama of the lake, the hills beyond and still beyond these the mountains. For awhile the young man was guarded in his speech. He then discovered that I was an American—he had supposed me to be an Englishman—and this seemed to awaken confidence, though it was rather a fellow feeling, for he kept me still in ignorance as to who he was or where he was going. I knew, however, from his conversation that he was highly educated and one of those persons who are born to think deep. I was astonished at his familiarity with the various schools of philosophy. That he was a dreamer as well as a thinker was apparent from ideas he advanced, which to me seemed a century ahead of the times.

At Meiringen we halted for luncheon, eating sandwiches and drinking beer at a table under the trees in front of a hotel. We rested for an hour after luncheon, smoking, I my pipe, my companion cigarettes (the usual form of a smoke in that country).

The subject that most interested him was America and how to get there. I told him that it all depended on where one started from and waited for him to tell me from what point he would begin. "The Riviera," was his reply. Whereupon I informed him that from any point on the Riviera—say Nice or Mentone—one might by a short railway journey reach Genoa, from which port steamers are constantly leaving for the United States. He seemed much interested in this and more so when I told him that I had engaged passage by that route myself. When I asked him if he had any intention of visiting my country he replied that he had not.

We reached Thun about 5 o'clock, and, after refreshing ourselves with a glass of beer in the gardens of the Kursaal, I went to my hotel, my companion going I knew not where. One meets all kinds of people traveling abroad, especially if one likes to form acquaintances as I do. Of all those I have met in any of my tours the person who made the most impression upon me was the young philosopher about whom I learned nothing.

I went by rail from Thun to Paris, from there to Nice, and from Nice to Mentone. I found at Mentone General A., who had been minister of the interior in Russia. Indeed, I stopped in the same hotel with him. Those who knew told me that several attempts had been made upon his life revolutionists, or, as they were then called, nihilists, and that he was closely guarded. During his incumbency in office he had sent hundreds of people to Siberia, besides those he had executed. He had been proscribed by the nihilists, they having vowed to kill him. I asked why he should dread his enemies so far from home and was told that they could work to better advantage beyond the Russian borders than within them. In Russia the government could act direct. In other countries more or less red tape was necessary to arrest a suspect, and before it could be done an assassination might take place. General A. was spending a season at Mentone for his health, being afflicted with some nervous disorder. It seemed to me that a man living in fear for his life would be likely to have nerve trouble. He was very regular in his habits, going out to walk in the morning and to drive in the afternoon, always attended by men in citizens' dress, who closely eyed every one who approached him.

Notwithstanding the precautions taken the general was assassinated at Mentone and at the time I was there.

It was in June and the days were long. About half past 8 o'clock one evening I went up to my room after dinner and, lighting a cigar, stood for a moment at my window, which was on the north side of the hotel. Several buildings were near, and from a window of one of them I saw a puff of smoke and heard a crack. There was nothing to be seen in the window, for the blinds were closed. If a shot had been fired it must have been from between the slats.

The occurrence did not make much impression on me, but an hour later, on going downstairs, I found the hotel proprietor, the servants, the guests, all horror stricken. On asking the cause I was told that General A. had been shot by some one who had fired a bullet into his room through an open window. Upon asking the time the affair occurred I was told that it was about half past 8.

I knew perfectly well that I had seen the smoke of the weapon that had done the deed and could point out the window from which it had been fired, but I held my peace. Some one had revenged a long list of barbarities visited upon those who had dared to attempt to build up an oppressed people, and I was not interested in taking any part in the affair. I inquired if it was known from what point the shot was fired and was told that it was believed it had come from a tree that grew near the general's window. By this I knew that I was the only person who had witnessed the firing. By giving the information I possessed the police would have a description of the person or persons occupying the room from which the assassin had done the work, and they would be pretty sure to make the arrest. I confess, sympathizing with the Russian revolutionists, I had no intention of enlightening them.

I was pleased, however, possessing such a secret, that the time had come for me to leave Mentone. My steamer was due to sail from Genoa the next morning, and I took a night train for that city. I stood, shortly before sailing, on the upper deck looking at the swarm of people, some hurrying aboard, some going ashore, all infected by that bustle usual to a steamer about to leave port.

A girl came up the gangway whose face was familiar to me. Where had I seen her? It bothers one to see a face without being able to place it, and this case annoyed me more than usual. However, since I could not recollect where I had met her I ceased to think about her, interesting myself in other persons. We soon passed out on to the bosom of the Mediterranean, and I rejoiced at the prospect of getting home.

During the next few days I looked for the girl whom I had been unable to place, both on deck and in the dining saloon. I did not see her till we had passed Gibraltar and steamed out on to the Atlantic. Then one morning, while walking on the highest of all the decks, where there were no other passengers, I suddenly came upon her sitting on the boards, leaning up against a projection that shielded her from the wind.

She turned white as a cloth.

At first I thought I would stop and ask her where we had met, but she turned her eyes away from me, and I saw that either I had made a mistake in appearing that I had known her or she had no desire to continue the acquaintance. But why had the meeting with me so affected her? I thought over every one I had met abroad—indeed, every one I had ever known—in order to discover if there was any with whom I had had trouble. No; the record was clear.

We stopped at Madeira and the Azores. I did not see the girl again till we had left the latter islands. But I had thought a great deal of her, and finally it suddenly flashed upon me who she was and where I had met her. She was the young man with whom I had walked from Interlaken to Thun.

After leaving the Azores I came upon her, sitting on deck where I had first seen her. I was about to pass her when she smiled at me. Of course I joined her.

"Now that we have touched at the last European port," she said, "I am willing to make myself known to you. We walked together one day in Switzerland."

"Is the costume you wore then or the one you wear now your legitimate dress?"

"The one I wear now."

I waited for her to explain, but she did not. So I said:

"Why have you deferred making yourself known to me?"

"Because I am a fugitive. Had I not had confidence that you would not betray me I should not have planned to take this steamer. Yet I was obliged to take it. You will not betray me?"

"How do you know that? If you have committed a crime it is my duty to betray you."

"I have committed no crime except in the cause of justice."

That was the end of the confidence she gave me. I did not wish her to give me any more. I knew all she could have told me. I wished that I did not know it lest I might be called upon to bear witness concerning it. I leave it to the reader to infer what I inferred. It is too terrible and too dangerous to be expressed in words.

I saw something of the girl every day or so on shipboard, but when we reached port I did not think it safe to be seen with her. I did not see her when she left the ship. For several days I eagerly scanned the newspapers, dreading to read of her arrest. Since I did not and have heard nothing of her since, I have concluded that she landed without detection. What became of her after that I do not know.

A fort built on a long, narrow island, at the entrance to Manila Bay, is called the "concrete battleship," because of its shape, and because it carries two ship's turrets, each with two 12-inch guns.

Any one of the 26 Atlantic type locomotives recently ordered by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, will haul on a level a train of 25 passenger, ten baggage, seven Pullman and eight postal cars.

STORY OF LAURA SECORD.

A Tale of Canadian Pioneer Life That Never Grows Old.

Undoubtedly Laura Secord is the greatest of Canadian heroines. She performed one of the most heroic feats in the annals of history. This was sufficient to make her famous, but the romance which colors the history of herself and her husband adds much to the glamor which has always been associated with her and her name. Further, the deed which she was called upon to perform was the kind which appeals to Canadian men and women. A nineteen-mile tramp by moonlight through an untracked forest and over unbridged streams comprises a journey, the strain of which every Canadian can understand and appreciate.

Laura Ingersoll was the daughter of Thomas Ingersoll, a United Empire Loyalist who came from Massachusetts to Ontario about 1795. He was the founder of the town which goes by that name. His daughter Laura was about twenty years of age when the family came to Canada. Shortly afterwards she married James Secord of St. Davids', who was afterwards a successful merchant in Queenston.

James Secord was a young man who had also shared in the sufferings of the U. E. Loyalists. His mother was one of a party of five women and thirty-one children who had arrived at Fort Niagara in 1776 destitute and starving.

In October, 1812, the American troops crossed the frontier but were defeated at Queenston Heights by Gen. Brock. James Secord helped to carry the dying general from the battlefield. In the final assault he himself was wounded and in the dusk of the evening was found and rescued by his wife who had gone to search for him. In June of the following year the Americans had for the first time gained possession of the Niagara Peninsula. The British had outposts at Jordan, Beaver Dams and other points, and the Americans were advancing against them. While entertaining a number of American officers in their home at Queenston, the Secords heard of the enemies' plan to seize the post at Beaver Dams the next day. The husband still suffering from his wounds was unable to make the attempt necessary to warn the troops at this point. His plucky little wife therefore, started off in the middle of the night on her dreadful journey. It was thirteen miles by road but the road was unsafe because of the American sentries and outposts. She must needs tramp through the bush, wade the streams or creep across fallen trees on hands and knees. She must needs also avoid the Indians who though working with the British, were not likely to respect a white woman whom they found wandering in such a fashion. However, the frail and delicate woman accomplished her nineteen-mile journey and tottered into camp in time to enable the garrison to prepare itself for the attack and to win a tremendous victory.

The Dictionary.

"Neither is a dictionary a bad book to read," says Emerson in his essay on books. "There is no cant in it, no excess of explanation, and it is full of suggestion, the raw material of possible poems and histories. Nothing is wanting but a little shuffling, sorting, ligature and cartilage."

Patriotism

The stomach is a larger factor in "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" than most people are aware. Patriotism can withstand hunger but not dyspepsia. The confirmed dyspeptic "is fit for treason, stratagems and spoils." The man who goes to the front for his country with a weak stomach will be a weak soldier and a fault finder.

A sound stomach makes for good citizenship as well as for health and happiness.

A FORCED MARRIAGE

Bred Complications That Were Long In Being Worked Out

By THERESA C. HOLT

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Nothing was known about Ralph Hayden, a young man who bought a small ranch in New Mexico, except that he was an Englishman. He was tall and well formed, with light hair and complexion and blue eyes. This, with a winning smile that uncovered white, regular teeth, made him in appearance very attractive. He had brought £2,000 with him from England, with which he purchased and stocked his ranch.

He had no sooner got settled than the neighboring ranchers called on him and invited him to their homes, but he accepted none of their invitations. This excited a good deal of talk among the women at the different ranch houses, all of whom were curious to know why the handsome Britisher would have nothing to do with them. The general verdict was that he considered himself too good for them. Nevertheless Hayden was hail fellow well met with all the men and soon became popular alike with ranchers and cowboys.

One day Hayden set out to go to a neighboring ranch. He was walking across a field when a bull espied him and bore down on him from the rear. Hayden, unconscious of his danger, continued on leisurely. Suddenly he saw a horsewoman leap a fence and rush upon him, swinging a lasso as she rode. Not understanding the movement, he stood still, regarding her with wondering eyes. Coming near him, she threw her lasso, but not at him. Turning, he saw that she had thrown the loop around the horns of a bull. Drawing his revolver, he quickly killed the beast.

The next thing he did was to raise his hat in a courtly manner to the woman who had saved his life and offer his thanks. She was a girl about twenty years old. A coil of hair was falling under her sombrero, having been loosened by the jump she had made over the fence. Her costume was a jacket cut Mexican fashion and divided skirts of the same material.

"Had it not been for you," said Hayden, "I would probably now be either dead or dying. The bull would have taken me in the back and broken it. I shall esteem it a favor if you will name the way in which I may best show my gratitude."

"You are Mr. Hayden, I believe?"

"I am."

"Do you know what a woman loves best?"

"I do not."

"To get ahead of other women."

"Well?"

"Come and see me."

"You have a charming frankness. I shall certainly call upon you. You must be that Miss MacDonald of whom I have heard so much."

"I am Kate MacDonald. I bid you good morning."

Kate MacDonald was a feminine free lance. She could ride, shoot, hurl a lasso as well as any man in the neighborhood and had a way of looking out of a pair of honest eyes that invited confidence. She was tender hearted in the extreme. She called a spade a spade and had a sovereign contempt for people who said one thing and meant another.

Ralph Hayden called upon her at her father's ranch the same evening. When he arose to go she said to him:

"Tomorrow afternoon I shall expect you to ride with me. We will go past the principal ranches hereabout in order that the women may see us together. After that I shall resign all claims upon your attention."

"And I shall not be allowed to visit you again?"

"As often as you like, but not from any obligation to do so."

A month later one evening Ralph Hayden, after pacing the floor for an hour, swayed by conflicting emotions, went to Kate MacDonald's home, told her that he loved her so deeply that he could ruin himself for her and begged her to marry him.

"What do you mean by ruining yourself for me?" she asked.

"I am pledged to marry a girl in England."

Kate started. This was indeed a blow. Her sense of honor revolted at his deserting another for her.

"Does she love you very much?" she asked.

"I don't know. I suppose she loves me, though the marriage is to be under certain contingencies."

"What are they? No, don't tell me. Go away. I need time to think this over."

He obeyed the order. For several days there was no communication between them. Then he wrote her, recalling all he had said, closing with the words: "I was demented. There is but one path for me to follow, and only a fool and a knave would follow any other."

No answer came to this. One evening about a week later Kate MacDonald, attended by half a dozen cowboy friends and a parson, rode up to Ralph Hayden's ranch house. All dismounted and entered. One of the cowboys acted as spokesman:

"Anything Kate MacDonald wants goes. She's made up her mind to marry you. If you decline you run a gantlet and other such torture as Indians use. Here's a man to do the job." He pointed to the parson.

"I'm not afraid of your torture," said Hayden, "but I'm ready to go through the ceremony."

Not a word was spoken by the contracting couple except to make the replies required by the marriage service. When it was over Kate MacDonald led the way out, and all mounted their horses and rode away.

The next day Hayden disappeared.

From this time forward Kate MacDonald, or Kate Hayden, was a changed woman. She no longer galloped over the country taking fences and ditches by the way. She never attended any of the social gatherings held among the neighboring ranchers. The only feature eminent before her marriage she retained was her tender solicitude for those who were in trouble. The Hayden ranch remained in care of a keeper, who offered it for sale. Nothing was heard of its owner. A year passed. By that time Kate Hayden had come to see her act in its true light and wrote a letter to her husband, telling him that if he wished to be free from her she could easily obtain a divorce on the ground of desertion. Not knowing where to send her letter, she asked the keeper of the Hayden ranch for her husband's address. He told her that he had been instructed to give it to no one, but he offered to forward the missive, and she accepted the offer.

Sufficient time elapsed for a letter to come from almost any part of the globe, but none was received. Months passed, and still no word. The young wife, wife in name only, became a broken down woman. It was not the equivocal position in which she stood before the world, but the fact that she loved the man she had treated in a manner which every day seemed to her more unmaidenly and barbarous. This, added to that dreadful silence, was killing her. She was not sure even that he lived. Her parents, her neighbors, endeavored in every way to draw her from her despondency. Her friends the cowboys gathered in groups to discuss the man whom they considered to blame for her condition and even debated the question of sending one of their number to find him wherever he might be and give him the chance of returning to his wife or swallowing a dose of lead.

But no such method of restoring her happiness, of course, ever reached the young wife's ears. She gradually sank till those about her began to shake their heads and predict that she would at last fall a victim to her unfortunate affair. The Hayden ranch was finally sold. The intelligence was kept from her as long as possible, fearing that this breaking the last link that bound her to her husband would have an increased effect upon her. But when the new owner took possession of the property it was impossible that she should be kept in ignorance any longer. As was feared, it destroyed her last hope.

One morning when the daily stage arrived at the relay house Ralph Hayden hurriedly alighted, ordered a horse and, mounting, galloped away. Half an hour later he was seen to ride into the MacDonald ranch house. The news spread over the neighborhood. The ranchers and the ranchers' families discussed the arrival and wondered what the next move would be. The cowboys convened in special meeting, and it was solemnly agreed that if the Britisher went away without his departure being satisfactory to his wife they would waylay him and force him to fight each one of them successively till all were killed or he bit the dust. Some of them fingered their revolvers nervously in anticipation.

It was not long, however, before very startling news was given out at the ranch house. Hayden had returned for the bride he had been forced to marry; he was not only Ralph Hayden, but Sir Ralph Hayden and heir to one of the fairest estates in England. Then all the women exclaimed at once:

"Goodness gracious! Kate Mac is Lady Hayden!"

The afternoon this news was circulated the cowboys agreed that they would go in a body to the MacDonald ranch house, learn of its truth, and if it were so give three cheers for Sir Ralph and Lady Hayden. Learning of their intention, many of the neighbors repaired there to see the fun. Lining up before the house, the boys began to call for their favorite. Presently she appeared, leaning on the arm of her husband, pale and thin, but with that same old smile on her lips which had made them her slaves. A yell arose and cries of "Tell us about it!" She pointed to her husband, who said:

"Boys, it was all a mistake. I made several, and our Kate made one. I let complications in England interfere with me and my wife's happiness; but, thank God, they are past, and we are all happy."

This brief speech was received by three cheers from the cowboys, assisted by the neighbors present. Then the assembly were invited into the house, and the bottle was passed.

After a few weeks' sojourn the couple left for England, leaving the following explanation:

An English girl with a large estate had agreed to marry Ralph Hayden, a younger son of Sir George Hayden, if within a given time he should, through the death of an invalid brother, inherit the title. After his American marriage Ralph Hayden had returned to England and found the girl he had been engaged to marry conditionally had fallen in love with another man, whom she was about to wed. The returned ranchman smarted a long while under the marriage into which he had been forced. Meanwhile his brother lingered in bad health and finally died. Then the new incumbent sailed for American to bring back his wife.

In several eastern cities street cars are being tried that have a rail running through the center for standing passengers to grasp instead of the usual straps. More persons can be carried than in the customary manner and at greater comfort.

In Nuremburg, Germany, there still are in use more than 1700 houses that were built in the sixteenth century and more than 3500 erected in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

The tour of the crown prince will bear an official character, and arrangements have already been made with the British Government for his reception in India. He will also visit China and Japan. His consort, the Crown Princess Cecilie, will not accompany him.

A GOLDEN LINK.

The Tip That Was Transformed Into a Wedding Ring.

By A. M. DAVIES OGDEN.

"Follow this path, ma'am, and you will find the house," explained the coachman as he drew up before the stately stone gates of Ellesmere abbey. "Carriages are not permitted inside the grounds, but vistors on foot can walk through and view the lake and terraces."

The path, leaving the driveway, led between sturdy oaks, through whose branches the flickering sunlight fell in golden shadows—oaks that had stood for generations, the pride of the county. Mrs. Lincoln and her daughter walked slowly forward, exclaiming in delight at the grand old trees, until a sudden fork in the path caused them to halt in some perplexity.

"Although, as the caterpillar said, if you don't care where you are going, it cannot matter much which way you go," laughed Ethel Lincoln. "And both look attractive," she added. As they hesitated a young man, clad in knickerbockers and carrying a gun, came down one of the paths. Mrs. Lincoln looked relieved.

"Here is a gamekeeper or poacher or something," she said. "He can probably tell us which is the best way to go."

The man, who had stopped on seeing the two ladies, now came toward them, lifting his battered cap.

"Can I be of any service?" he inquired. His voice was prepossessing, and Mrs. Lincoln assented.

"We are anxious to see the house and the lake," she said. "Could you direct us how to reach them?"

"The right hand path will take you directly to the house," he answered civilly. "And the lake—the lake is a bit out of the way." He paused a moment, then went on, "I belong here, and if you would care to have me show you about"—

Mrs. Lincoln smiled kindly.

"If you would be so good."

Ethel Lincoln, wandering somewhat behind the others, was enchanted with the place. The lovely mere, laden with heavy white lilies, the brilliant hued parterres, the cool green terraces, all evoked deep breaths of admiration.

"It is like a page from a novel," she declared. "I never imagined anything so romantic. It's—it's perfect," abandoning a vain search for suitable adjectives. The gamekeeper looked pleased.

"It is indeed a fine place, miss," he said. But Mrs. Lincoln glanced longingly at the house.

"How I would like to see the interior," she said. "Is it quite impossible?"

The man considered.

"It is not usually allowed," he answered. "But I will ask the gardener."

The gardener, when appealed to, looked up in surprise.

"Why—I don't know," he declared doubtfully. "You"—

"Don't you think they might make an exception this once?" interposed the gamekeeper hastily. The gardener, a faint twinkle creeping into his eye, nodded.

Mrs. Lincoln turned away.

"If it is against the rules, of course we would prefer not to enter," she said quietly. "Thank you just as much. Only I happened to know Lady Ellerslie well many years ago and should have been glad to see her home."

"Indeed," said the gamekeeper respectfully. "You might have a chance next week then. Lady Ellerslie's son is giving a garden party on Thursday, and if you send a card to Lord Ellerslie I have no doubt that he will be glad to have an invitation sent you."

"Thank you; perhaps we may do so," said Mrs. Lincoln. "Will you be good enough to call my carriage now?"

As he turned and beckoned the coachman Ethel Lincoln sighed.

"How beautiful it all is!" she exclaimed. "Really I could marry Ellerslie just to live here." The gamekeeper, his face unmoved, stepped forward.

"May I help you in, madam?" he asked decorously.

Mrs. Lincoln, slipping her fingers into the tiny gold purse swinging at her wrist, pulled forth a coin and, without looking at it, held it toward the man. To her surprise, he flushed and drew back. But at sight of the look of unconscious dismay on the girl's face his half uttered protest died and he quietly accepted the money.

As they drove homeward Mrs. Lincoln laughed.

"No wonder that man stared," she said. "These English coins are so much alike in size that instead of a shilling I gave him a sovereign. But how abnormal for any foreigner to hesitate at a tip! Shall we send Ellerslie a card, Kitten? I suppose he would hardly remember us, and it is many years since his mother died. Do you think it would be worth while?"

"I suppose not," agreed Ethel, not, however, without a secret twinge of disappointment.

But the next day, on returning from their drive, the innkeeper met them. In his hand were a letter and a card.

"His lordship was here this afternoon," he said, "and asked if you were the lady who had lost this locket," producing a small gold ornament. "If you were, I was to give you this letter."

"Why, I must have dropped it yesterday," exclaimed Mrs. Lincoln in surprise, tearing open the envelope. It contained a card of invitation and a few lines on a crested sheet of paper.

> My Dear Mrs. Lincoln—From the name engraved on the locket which was found in the grounds yesterday I judge you must be the old friend whom my mother so loved. Will not you and your daughter do me the honor of coming to the garden party I am giving next Thursday and let me have the pleasure of renewing an old acquaintance? Faithfully yours,
> ELLERSLIE.

When on Thursday afternoon Mrs. Lincoln and Ethel drove under the porte-cochere of Ellerslie abbey already the lawns and terraces were dotted with bright frocks and parasols, while from a gay marquee came the strains of a military band. Ethel's spirits rose.

"I feel that I am going to have a good time," she declared. "My new gown is becoming, my hat perfect, so cheer up, mumsie."

"Mrs. and Miss Lincoln," shouted the flunky, and into the great hall, paneled to the roof with oak and hung with the family portraits of three centuries, they passed. A gentleman turned from the nearest group of people and came forward. Tall, slim, frock coated, with a white flower in his buttonhole, there was yet no mistaking him. For a moment Mrs. Lincoln stared; then a slow smile curved her lips.

"So it was you—you all the time," she declared. "You were the gamekeeper." The man looked repentantly back.

"I really didn't mean to," he pleaded. "You see, I only expected to stop a moment and pass on. But then that seemed uncivil, and so"—

"And so you merely deceived us instead," laughed Mrs. Lincoln. "Ethel, dear, this is Ellerslie, bad as ever."

"No, no," he protested. "It was my cap that deceived you, not I. At first I hardly appreciated the situation, and then—it seemed too late. And I never hoped to see you again. But when you spoke of my mother I began to think who you might be, and of course the name on the locket settled it. Indeed, I was innocent."

Mrs. Lincoln laughed.

"Certainly you took the tip badly enough."

"But I still have it," he asserted, "and always shall, if only as being the first money I ever earned."

As host Ellerslie's duties kept him busy through the afternoon, and it was not until the long shadows lay wide across the lawn that he was able to follow the direction in which his eyes had often strayed and join Ethel where she stood under a huge Japanese umbrella.

"I have been talking to chaperons until I am exhausted," he urged. "Do take pity on me and let us make an escape. Oh, no, it is not yet late," as the girl hesitated. "And there is the view of the mere that you have not yet seen," he added mischievously.

Ethel smiled and let him take her parasol from one of the group of men about her.

"Don't keep her too long, Ellerslie," said one in rather an injured tone.

Ellerslie shook his head. "I cannot promise. Miss Lincoln and I have much to discuss," he laughed.

But as they paused on a little rustic bridge commanding a view of lake and woods stretching away to the red sunlit sky Ellerslie seemed to have suddenly lost his desire to talk. When finally he turned to her there was an odd little glint in his eye.

"Well," he said, "do you like it?" waving his hand toward the picturesque reach of wood and water.

"Indeed I do," she answered earnestly. The glint in his eye deepened.

"Then you are prepared to keep your word?"

"My word?" said the girl, startled.

"That you would marry Ellerslie to get all this." He pulled a coin from his pocket and gazed meditatively at it. "This precious coin—I fell in love with a girl when it was given to me. Wasn't it an odd thing to do? But I am so delighted with the fact that I am going to have this bit of gold made into the best thing I know of, and that is a wedding ring. Shall I? Do you think she might wear it in time?"

Although he spoke jestingly, there was an undercurrent of seriousness in his tone which the girl was quick to catch. For a moment a new, strange shyness kept her silent; then she spoke.

"Of course I am hardly competent to advise on such a subject," she began demurely, "but," with a swift upward glance that suggested bewildering possibilities, "there could certainly be no harm in having the ring made."

It was several years before Ellerslie admitted to his wife that as Mrs. Lincoln had dropped him the coin she had dropped the locket and that he, willfully and deliberately, had concealed it. To his astonishment, however, Lady Ellerslie only laughed.

The Reason Why.

A wilfully literal answer is sometimes the most impudent kind of retort. Of such nature was the reply made by General Early and quoted below from "The Confederate Scrap Book," a collection of cuttings gathered by Mrs. Lizzie Cary Daniels and published after the civil war.

During the march of General Lee's army through northern Virginia to Maryland General Jackson happened to notice a number of stragglers in General Early's division, and that night he sent him a note:

> General—General Jackson desires to know why he saw so many of your stragglers in the rear of your division today.
> A. S. PENDLETON.

Old Jubal replied:

> Captain—In answer to your note I would state that I think it possible that the reason General Jackson saw so many of my stragglers on the march today is that he rode in the rear of my division.
> J. A. EARLY.

"Stonewall" Jackson [illegible] smiled when he read the note [illegible] no further inquiries.

'TWIXT LOVE AND DEATH.

Millie Averted a Tragedy and Brought About Happiness.

By MARTHA M'C.-WILLIAMS.

If Millie had not worn her blue gown the story might have been different. Whether it was the color or the fluff of it or the way it clung to and molded her slim suppleness nobody could say, but the fact was patent—somehow it transformed her from a very pretty girl into an elfland queen. Millie was, you see, a Spanish blood, with velvet dark eyes and hair of the palest gold. Small wonder in the blue gown she swept John Eustace off his feet and made him forget some things he ought to have remembered—his betrothed, Alice Ellison, for example.

Alice was as good as her plentiful gold, but stubby, dull colored and on the surface dull witted. She was, above all things, dutiful. Duty was, indeed, the early root of her love for John. If she had not happened to be born the Ellison fortune would have gone to John's father, Ellison Eustace. Her father had married in a fit of pique when he was on the edge of seventy. He lived to see his daughter nine years old and to impress upon her that she must marry her second cousin and so keep the money in the Ellison blood.

John, five years older than Alice, had accepted his fate philosophically. Until chance flung Millie across his path he had never repined. An only child and motherless, he had grown up his father's intimate comrade. Thus women, especially young women, had never worn for him the roseate glamour of unschooled youth. Still his father had by no means tried to put an old head upon young shoulders nor to breed in his son contempt for womankind. It was only that love and women were pushed to the background, reckoned mere episodes beside the rush and scurry of truly manly pursuits. Marriage was honorable in all men; marriage with Alice would be thrice honorable, safe and profitable. Thus when she came to eighteen John had a certain satisfaction in putting the ring upon her finger and even chafed a little over the fact that by her father's express desire she was to stay single until she was one and twenty.

He honestly believed himself in love and truly felt for her a tender fondness that had begun when, a sturdy little lad, he had guided her tottering baby steps. He meant always to guide, guard and cherish her as became a gentleman, even though in his swelling visions of the future she was no more than a dumb, submissive shade. If she would never be a brilliant figure, still less would she be one of whom a husband must needs be ashamed. Indeed, he was altogether a little more than content with the ordering of things until six months before his wedding day he came under Millie's spell.

He saw her first upon a spring morning full of hot, shining and languid ruffling airs. Dew still sparkled on the grass, and overhead in the green gold of new leafage robins fluted delicately the joy of life and love. To his enchanted eyes Millie embodied the shining, the bird song, the softness of the south wind, the warmth of the sun. What they said is immaterial. For two hours they walked together over the ragged lawn turf or stood in rapt contemplation of newly open roses. And then in a safe seclusion of greenest shade he drew her within his arms and kissed her, not lightly, but as one who takes what is supremely his own.

Then followed a heavenly fortnight. Eustace masterfully pushed out of his mind all thought that might mar this new bliss. He rarely spoke of his love and after that first kiss was sparing of demonstration. There was no need of it when each understood so perfectly what was in the other's heart. Yet at the end of every day's comradery Eustace had a sense of something impending ever drawing nearer. He refused to let himself look further than the next day's end, but somehow, somewhere, he knew he would be called to pay a bitter scot.

His chiefest care was for Millie. No harm must touch her, however it fared with him. She was so young, so innocently gay, so innocently foolish, he was doubly bound to protect her, even against himself. It was heaven to see her bloom and sparkle at his approach. She left herself so artlessly undefended now and again there came a lump in his throat. A man who could speak, who could even think lightly of her, would deserve death twice over.

So the idyl drifted through hours sunlit and starlit. Perhaps it was some ill star in its course that brought home Joe Cantrell, Millie's brother, who lived out in the big world and knew its ways. He came unannounced just as dusk fell down, making his way through the devious side path all tangled with sweet shrubs. When Millie met him a little later her eyes were starlike, her cheeks of damask bloom. But sight of her could not win him from icy anger. He never explained anything. "You will be ready to go back with me two days hence," he said, frowning heavily. Millie got very white, but went silently toward the stair foot. As she was mounting it her brother said, with a taunting laugh, "Next time you choose to kiss and fondle a man take care that I am not in sight or that he is not engaged to marry another woman."

She knelt, shivering, by her bedside until she heard him go out after a leisurely supper. And she was still kneeling when he came in, stamping heavily, well toward midnight. He stopped beside her father's high black secretary, flung down the lid with a bang, then after a minute came upstairs, still moving ponderously. But his footsteps did not mask another sound—the clicking of pistol locks. Intuitively she understood—he had strolled over to the Country club, picked a quarrel with Eustace and would have him out at daybreak next morning.

No thought of appeal to him stirred in her. Instead there came a firm determination matching his own. She knew her name had not been mentioned in the quarrel quite as well as she knew herself its real root. The men must not fight. She could not have her brother's blood upon her conscience, still less her lover's. There was but one way to stop them, a way bitterer than death. Still, she set her feet toward it unfaltering.

She got up and sat by the window, watching with noteless eyes the wheeling stars, the waning moonlight. But at the first pale dawn light she was tensely alive. Below she heard a stealthy stir, the cautious opening of a door, with muffled voices and cautious steps outside. She got up and crept to her brother's room. Lighted candles still glittered there. Upon the table there was a brief will, the ink not dry in the heavily scrawled signature. Beside it was a briefer statement: "Let it be understood of all men if I die I shall have died in a man's quarrel, founded on no personal grudge, but resenting unjust aspersions upon my native state." She almost smiled over it. The native state counted to Joe for so very little in the ordinary course of life.

Twenty minutes later, just as the sun peeped over rimming trees, she came out in a little clearing upon a wooded hilltop and saw two men standing weapon in hand, face to face, ten yards apart. Three other men a little way off had scared, white faces, but neither combatant had lost wholesome color. Millie sprang between them, white as a dawn wraith, but with eyes like glowing coals. She flung up her arms and said clearly: "Fire, gentlemen! If anybody deserves death I do!"

"Millie, go back!" Joe Cantrell thundered. Eustace dropped his pistol and leaped to the girl's side. In her ear he whispered brokenly: "Darling, let him kill me. It is the best way out of it all."

Millie shrank from him a little. "There is no need for bloodshed," she said. Then, raising her voice so the seconds could hear: "I call all here to witness that I have not been deceived. I knew at the very first of John Eustace's betrothal. We have done no wrong to anybody. We—we love each other because we cannot help it. Oh, it is hard that my own brother brings me to such open shame!"

"Come home," Cantrell said roughly, flinging away his pistol and clutching her arm. Eustace caught the other hand, saying: "Stay with me, Millie! The whole world may go if I have you!"

"Goodby," Millie said, drawing away her hand. "I shall love you always, John, but your wife need not be jealous."

• • • • • • •

By the strange orderings of fate that was a true word. John Eustace went straight to Alice and told her all the truth. She gave him back his freedom and would have given him half her money only he would not have it. But he could not persuade Millie to marry him until Joe, the masterful, had wooed and won Alice Ellison and her fortune.

Castle Ashby and Its Texts.

Castle Ashby, the residence of the Marquis of Northampton, stands alone among all the "stately homes of England" as embodying in its architectural features texts of Scripture in solid masonry set out for every one to see in the most prominent places possible. The porter's lodge at the entrance to the mansion bears on its cornice the inscription in Latin, "The Lord preserve thy coming in," and on the inner cornice the text, "The Lord preserve thy going out." The same ideas have been carried out in the design of the balustrades of the terraces surrounding the lawns and flower beds, which make the gardens of Castle Ashby among the most beautiful in the country. The mansion itself is unique, as all its pediments are composed of texts of Scripture in Latin. Commencing at the south end of the west wing is the inscription in bold letters, "Except the Lord, the Keeper, keep the house, in vain he watches who keeps it." Then follows another inscription dated 1624, the year the house was completed, "Except the Lord build the house, they have labored in vain who build it." Along the outer balustrade we read: "Blessed are they who fear the Lord, who walk in his ways. Praise ye the name of the Lord. Amen."—Treasury.

Blind Tom.

Blind Tom was born near the city of Columbus, Ga., of slave parents about the year 1846. He belonged to General James N. Bethune, at that time editor and proprietor of the Cornerstone. Being blind, Tom would stray away from home and was often found in the woods, roaming around and listening to the birds. It was in his whistling imitations of the bird songs that his wonderful musical ability was first revealed to his master. He could repeat perfectly anything that he heard in the line of music. As to his idiocy, it is generally understood that, his musical ability aside, he was very near being a "natural." Outside of his love for music he seemed to be quite stupid, and if not an idiot he was dangerously near being one. Blind Tom is still the standing puzzle of the psychologists.—Exchange.

DAY QUIET IN SPAIN

Threatened Religious Riots Fail to Materialize.

Clerical Leaders Call Off Their Projected Demonstration as a Result of the Heavy Patrol of Soldiers—"Death to Spain, Long Live the Pope" Is Cry of Isolated Groups—Peasants Disarmed; Sent Home.

San Sebastian, Aug. 8.—The Government's rigorous measures and the formal renunciation by the Catholic junta of the threatened demonstration in this city insured comparative tranquility yesterday, and a largely attended bull fight was the chief incident of the day. From daylight the streets were patrolled by cavalry, infantry and gendarmes, while heavy bodies of troops were held in readiness in the barracks at Miramar Palace, where the Queen Mother and the royal children are in residence.

The gravest incident occurred Saturday evening, when groups of Catholics assembled, shouting "Death to Spain, long live the Pope." Thousands of indignant people rushed towards the manifestants, and only the personal intervention of the governor, at the head of a platoon of police, prevented an attack. Nearly 150 arrests were made.

Many amusing scenes were witnessed. Priests, leading trudging bands of peasants, took to their heels when they found the city in the possession of the military. The peasants, all their courage gone, were disarmed and easily persuaded to return to their homes. In some cases the soldiers were compelled to supply food to the poor people, who had come into the city to rail at the Government.

The local authorities are convinced that the Catholic demonstration masked a Carlist plot.

Catholics are extremely indignant at the Government's repressive measures.. Senor Urguijo, the chief organizer of the movement, declared yesterday that the purpose of the manifestation was peaceful. There were to be no speeches, and those taking part were to be unarmed. But, he said, when the Government treated the matter as if it were civil war, he had called off the manifestation, to prevent bloodshed. He said that it was their intention later to take part in peaceful manifestations at Pamplona, in the Province of Navarre, and at Vittoria, in Alava, to prove that the anti-clerical policy of the Government was opposed by the Spanish people. "Even the Queen Mother is bitterly hostile to it," he added.

The authorities declare that the monks have taken an active part in fomenting the agitation, and it is charged that they have distributed arms among the people.

The Vatican Optimistic.

Rome, Aug. 8.—The feeling at the Vatican yesterday was optimistic. Hope is entertained that an understanding with the Spanish Government will soon be reached. It is pointed out by the Vatican that Premier Canalejas must be grateful to the papacy for restraining its followers from disorders which might lead to civil war.

The Vatican and Cardinal Merry del Val personally instructed the bishops and prominent personages throughout Spain to prevent demonstrations and disorders, it being desired to demonstrate that the holy see is anxious to maintain peaceful relations in the affairs of the peninsula.

Another reason for the cinciliatory attitude of the Vatican is the fact that the organizers of the proposed demonstrations are for the most part Carlists and any movement might eventually take on a revolutionary and anti-dynasite character, which the Vatican is determined shall be absolutely excluded from the present question.

A semi-official communication issued by the Vatican yesterday says that the relations with Portugal are normal. A new Portuguese ambassador to the holy see has not been appointed, it is explained, because of the recent change in the Cabinet at Lisbon.

The Pope Writes Alfonso.

Cowes, Isle of Wight, Aug. 8.—King Alfonso appeared reassured by the cheerful news yesterday from San Sebastian. It is understood that the Pope has written him an important autograph letter on the subject of the clerical conflict. The King made his customary round of social calls yesterday. His plans are unchanged, and he will go with Queen Victoria to Eaton Hall on Wednesday, as the guest of the Duke of Westminster, remaining there until Friday.

Killed Four Men.

Asheville, N.C., Aug. 8.—The jury in the case of the State v. James B. Allison, charged with the murder of Floyd McGhee, on July 5, returned a verdict of murder in the first degree. The convicted man will be sentenced to death Monday. The killing is alleged to have been brought about by McGhee's attentions to a woman. Allison, who is 40 years old, has killed four men in the last twelve years. He has heretofore escaped punishment by pleading self-defence.

Peary's Boat on Fire.

New York, Aug. 8.—Commander Peary's ship, the Roosevelt, which carried him north on his last successful dash to the Pole, caught fire early yesterday while lying in her berth in the East River, supposedly from spontaneous combustion in a rubbish heap. The night watchman, who turned in the alarm, was able to put out the flames unaided before the arrival of the fire company. The damage will not exceed $25.

Struck Oil In Busy City.

Pittsburg, Aug. 8.—Oil has been struck in the midst of the busy hum of this city. Within a few feet of a street where the trolley whizzes by every few minutes, a well was brought in on the north side and during the day flowed sixty barrels. The oil is of high grade, and is found in the hundred-foot sand.

A Queer Mail Delivery

One of the most remarkable mail routes in the world is that which a letter journeys in getting from Beebe Plain, Vt., to Beebe Plain, Quebec, Canada. While the two offices are within ten feet of each other—are located in the same room, in fact—a letter mailed from one office to the other must make a trip of 294 miles—67 miles in Canada and the rest in the United States.

The plain, old-fashioned store building, which is situated on the international boundary line, contains both the United States and Canadian offices. There are separate entrances to each, but both are in the same room, have the same lobby, and there are no partitions to mark the division between the domain of Uncle Sam and the possession of King George.

"If you mail a letter from the Vermont side addressed to the Quebec side," says the postmaster, "it goes from here to the junction, then to Newport, then to White River Junction and back to Lennoxville, Quebec, over the Boston & Maine. There it is transferred to the Grand Trunk and goes to a southbound mail pouch, and comes to Stanstead Junction, and then back to this same building, a distance of 294 miles.

"If we wish to mail a letter from the American side to Derby Lane it must go to White River Junction, and then come back over the official route."

IS NOW IN RUINS.

B. C.'s First Government House Is Fast Disappearing.

Scarcely twenty miles from Victoria, British Columbia, as the crow flies, but almost as far removed as the Pole for all the acquaintance which residents of this Provincial Capital have with it, or with the circumstances of its erection and occupancy, one of the truly historic buildings of British Columbia is fast crumbling with decay. Unless action is soon directed toward the preservation of this landmark of pioneering days and of the infancy of popular Government on Vancouver island, the obliteration of the first Government House erected and occupied as such in this westernmost colony of the British Empire must within a few short succeeding years be made complete.

At present the strong, rough-hewn, low walls still stand staunchly, though many gaping wounds bear testimony to the severity of Time's assaults. Doorways and windows yawn vacantly; the roof and the main chimney, of country-rock, have fallen in; and moss and creeping vines strive with a pitiful bravery to veil and even make beautiful the hideousness of ruin and forgetfulness. In one end of the abiding place in time long past of gubernatorial dignity and splendor, a couple of alien miners have, with a patchwork of coal-oil tins, evolved a nondescript and grotesque habitation; while what was once the governor's garden humbly bears tribute to the productiveness of the soil in the thrift of the Chinese squatters in yearly dividends of onions, beans, and potatoes. Two or three times a season, perhaps, some hunter, ranging far afield, pauses for a moment either to look at the crumbling threshold or to take toll of the two neglected apple trees which sentinel the portals, planted by the governor's winsome daughters in the long ago.

Gone are the stalwart miners with their high hopes, and abiding faith in nature's bounty—the campers of the argonaut army—the sights and sounds of exuberant and optimistic mining camp activity. What was in 1864 and 1865 the busiest community in Western America, just such a typical camp as Bret Harte pictures in his Nevada classics, has once again reverted to the wild. The ruins of the Government House, fragments of slowly decaying flume, worm-eaten rockers, crumbling cabins, and an occasional Chinese miner,—the vulture of the mining camp whose day is over,—these remain to mark the brief but spectacular chapter in Vancouver island's history when all eyes were turned toward the confluence of the Leech River and the Sooke, and Leechtown, at the junction, was for the nonce the focal point of public interest.

Dr. Brown, who was among the first to explore the interior of Vancouver island, and who made a somewhat celebrated journey across, sent the news of the discovery of gold "in one of the forks of the Sooke River," and his despatch, dated July 21, 1864, created much excitement, not only in Victoria, but all along the gold-fever-stricken coast.

Nuggets as high in value as $70 were picked up, and as much as $35 a day was earned. It was estimated that $30,000 was taken out of Leech River in little more than a month after the excitement had its birth. The discoveries drew hundreds, if not thousands, of people from Victoria and beyond to the district, and for a short time the population of Leechtown and thereabouts considerably exceeded that of Victoria. Naturally the head of the Government found it both interesting and desirable to follow the people, and the community of miners erected a substantial and picturesquely placed large house of logs for the comfortable accommodation of Governor Kennedy and his two fascinating daughters—the young ladies who, with some little ceremony planted the two apple trees still sentinelling the doorway, and still bearing good fruit even in their neglected and gnarled state.

The claim is thus supported that this was the first Government House erected as such upon Vancouver island—the governor formerly having made his official home in the Hudson Bay Co.'s stockade, or later, in the residence originally erected by the first Attorney-General of the colony, Mr. Carey, for his own occupancy. This served as the official residence of Colonial and British Columbia governors until its destruction by fire during the brief regime of Lieutenant-Governor McInnes. The present stately Government House was subsequently erected upon its site.

Epoch-Making Saskatoon.

Quite recently there was some voting in Saskatoon. Thirteen bylaws made a big program and large excitement. With twelve of the bylaws the citizens agreed; especially one which has taken them two years to smooth out the wrinkles. This proposition was to allow a corporation called the Saskatchewan Power Co. the right of harnessing the river near Saskatoon, handing over to them the job of turning the factory wheels of the town. The power plant will go up—cost one million dollars; guaranteed to sell the juice at the rate of between thirty and thirty-five dollars. Altogether, this power scheme is quite the most metropolitan feature which has developed in Saskatoon during its history. Which is saying a great deal. Seven years ago, Saskatoon was a hundred people in shacks connected with the outside by a very shaky and erratic stub railroad. In 1908, there were seven thousand people in the town—double what there were in 1906. In three years the assessment jumped from $750,000 to seven million.

JOHN BROWN, SON OF A FRONT OF SIDNEY FARMER, MET SAD DEATH YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

A sad and fatal accident is reported from Sidney. It seems that, about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, John Brown, 19 years of age, whose father, Mr. Allan Brown, is a farmer living between here and Trenton, was attempting to board a freight train about two miles east of Trenton when he slipped and fell under the wheels. An arm and leg were severed, and other injuries inflicted. The poor lad, who was very popular, died soon after the accident.

City League Wants Police Protection.

Pe'leviile, August 8th, 1910.

To the Editor of The Inetlligencer:

Dear Sir:—As you are well aware, the game of baseball has taken a new lease of life in Belleville this year, an excellent article of ball is being played and hundreds of our citizens are being entertained twice weekly by this pastime, among the spectators at every game being many ladies.

The object of this letter to the press is to bring before you the matter of "Police Protection." It is only natural, since all five teams are composed of local players, that interest at times will run high, and some people at such times, being unable to control their feelings, insist on surrounding the umpire to air their grievances thereby making his task the more difficult as well as stopping the game and making an unpleasant scene for those who come to enjoy clean baseball.

In last Saturday's game Mr. Jack Truaisch, the umpire, had great trouble with spectators, and it spoke volumes for that gentleman's calm demeanour that the game went as smoothly as it did. He deserves great credit for sticking to his guns when he must have been disgusted with the conduct of some of the spectators. If the police had been present, I think everything would have been very orderly.

We had police protection in a game or two this year, but lately no police have been present, and their absence has been keenly felt. It is to be hoped the press will take this matter up, as it is one that interests all lovers of clean sport in this city.

Thanking you for allowing me space in your valuable paper for this letter,—I am, yours very truly,

Edward Lee,
Chairman Executive City League

Getting Ready for A Big Season.

The Griffin Amusement Co., through its new local manager, W. L. Hurley, wishes to announce to the patrons of the Family Theatre that the vaudeville bills which will be presented from this date on, will be of a higher standard than heretofore attempted.

Mr. Hurley was with Mr. Griffin on his tour of the Middle Western States looking for good acts for the Canadian circuit and states that all the vaudevillians approached succumbed to the flattering terms held out to play in the Griffin houses.

Residents of Belleville will undoubtedly be glad to know that the local manager is arranging for the successful plays, now appearing in New York and Chicago, to visit this city while touring Canada during the coming season.

This week's bill presents, Derrill, a singer and dancer of merit, and the great "Jackson" a cartoonist, combined with the animated pictures and illustrated song.

Tar Macadam Being Put Down in Picton.

AND EX-ALD. SINCLAIR THINKS BELLEVILLE FOLKS MIGHT WELL LOOK INTO THE MATTER WITH A VIEW TO IMITATION.

To the Editor of the Intelligencer:

While passing through Picton on Saturday morning last the writer noticed that this neighboring town is showing the progressive spirit by having a permanent pavement placed on their main street. Knowing Belleville's great need along this line, I stopped long enough to make some enquiries and came away satisfied, that, while the process of building seemed simple, the materials used being broken and crushed stone, sand and tar, the result would be a first-class roadway, one that we in Belleville would be glad to possess in exchange for our present Front street. This work in Picton is now being done under the supervision of an expert who is constantly on the job, his workmen being the regular corporation employees and a steam roller very much like our own is used on the job.

Now Sir, having seen this work being done, I would suggest that a deputation of our City Council visit Picton, at once and see if such a pavement would not for years to come, meet the requirements of Belleville's Front street.

D. V. SINCLAIR

P. S.—Arrangements might be made with Mr. Black to take our whole Council to Picton by boat, the cost would be very little, considering the importance of this matter.

PRINCE REFUSES TO WED SISTER; SIAM SHOCKED,

KING CHULALONGKORN BOWED DOWN BY SON'S DEFIANCE OF SACRED PRECEDENT.

San Francisco, August 6—The Crown Prince of Siam is adding gray hairs to the head of his royal father, King Chulalongkorn, and has set the country by the ears generally by defying the traditions of a long ancestral line and refusing to marry his sister.

According to the Rev. William C. Dodd, a Presbyterian missionary who arrived yesterday, all Siam is agog over the Prince's announcement. From time immemorial, the missionary says it has been the Siamese custom for the Crown Prince to wed his sister or, if he has none, then a half-sister or, if he has none, then a cmfwyp the daughter of one of his father's numerous wives. The present Crown Prince has asserted his independence by publicly declaring that he intends to have but one wife and that one of his own choosing.

Contrary to the general belief that hard woods give more heat in burning than soft, Government experts have found by tests that linden, a very soft wood, has the greatest heating power, with fir, another soft wood, next.

A glass bottle may be cut off easily by a string saturated in kerosene, lighting the string and tying around it a piece of string saturated, allowing it to burn until the bottle is heated, then plunging the bottle into cold water.

A Mystery

The Wagon Train That Was Lost In the Mountains

By B. CRITTENDEN LYTLE

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Years ago, when there were no railroads between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, a wagon train was lost in the Sierra Nevada mountains. It was last seen by some Indian hunters. Searching parties went out to find it without success. At last it was given up and forgotten.

The leader of the party was Edward Earle. He was a widower with a little daughter, Elizabeth, whom he had left in the east in care of his sister. Elizabeth was five years old when her father was last heard from, but she took a deep interest in the story of his disappearance. What to older people was a mystery was to her a child's story similar to those she read in her fairy books. It did not occur to her that there was anything more wonderful in the disappearance of a wagon train consisting of half a dozen teams and ten or twelve people than in changing a man into a frog. In other words, she did not realize that the one really happened and the other was impossible.

But as Elizabeth grew beyond the age to be impressed by the imagination this story of the lost wagon train began to grow upon her. Had it not been given to her by those in whom she had confidence she would not have believed it. A man might disappear to return many years after with an explanation. But how could wagons, horses and men all go out like a candle?

Elizabeth was the only person who fancied that her father would some day come back. Her elders did not oppose her in this, though they did not pretend to agree with her. But as time wore on she realized that the case of the wagon train her father conducted was like that of a ship going down under some marine catastrophe, carrying with it every living person. There came a hope that her father had left some message for her which she would some day receive. She was told that he had had some property, but he alone knew where it was located. No will had ever been found nor any other papers to throw light upon his affairs. But this was not strange since he had all his effects with him.

By the time Elizabeth had become eighteen this question of her father's disappearance had grown upon her to such an extent that it became a sort of monomania. Possibly this resulted from trying to solve an insoluble question. She was continually asking herself how such a thing could happen. One of her suppositions was that the train had been carried away by a cloudburst. Another was that it had been buried under an avalanche. But in the case of the cloudburst the remains of men, horses and wagons would be carried down where they would be seen, and in the case of the avalanche they would appear as soon as the snow melted. It was brooding on these problems that at last threatened to affect Elizabeth's mind.

When Henry Merryweather began to court Elizabeth her aunt hoped that a living interest would relieve her from the burden of a dead one. Henry was a fine fellow and grew more and more wrapped in the serious girl, made so by a mystery. By delicate attentions he endeavored to withdraw her mind from the topic upon which it was abnormally fastened. But his efforts were a failure. Despite all he could do he elicited only an occasional smile, a temporary interest.

The time had come when Elizabeth felt that she must relieve her aunt of her support, and she accepted a position as teacher in a school. Occupation helped her in the matter that was troubling her, but did not cure her. Often in the midst of her duties she would find herself endeavoring to solve the problem of the lost wagon train.

As a last resort Henry Merryweather resolved to go out to the region where the train was last seen with a view to solving the mystery. He hoped that if he could bring back any plausible solution Elizabeth would accept it and she would regain her normal status. Without saying anything to her in reference to his intention he set out for the Sierra Nevadas and the region where the train had been last seen.

Fifteen years had passed since the tragedy or whatever it was occurred, and settlers had come into the region that had been a solitude. Henry, obtaining a good horse, set out to go over the pass where the train had been lost. The mystery was so well known that he had no difficulty in locating the position where it had been last seen. One of the equipments he possessed for his quest was a taste for geology. As he rode along he noted the character of the rocks, the flow of the streams, the configuration of the soil. As he passed through a canyon in which ran a mountain stream he came to a point where the ground formed a dam, making a small lake. It seemed to him that this could not have long been so. The trees growing on the dam were all very young. He wondered if it had not been thrown across the stream by some shaking of the earth. He looked up and saw that the soil on which he stood formed a direct incline for several thousand feet to a spot where a side of a mountain seemed to have been scooped out. It occurred to him that a large mass of earth far above had slid down and formed the dam on which he stood.

Might not the lost wagon train have been buried under this landslide?

The more he studied the configurations about him the more he was convinced that some cause, either a clap of thunder, a snowslide or an earthquake, had loosened the mountain side and thrown it down and across the road. Then by riding back and forth he traced the old road, noting its junction with a later one both above and below the dam. While he was satisfied that this avalanche of earth might have buried the lost train, he had no hope that he would be able to find any vestige of man, beast or wagon without employing a host of men to remove the earth from the old road, a part of which was now covered with water. But he could tell Elizabeth of his find and assure her of his belief that the wagon train had been buried under the landslide.

He argued that if those connected with the train had seen the mountain side coming they would run to get out of its way. If they were nearer the upper side of it they would run forward; if nearer the lower side they would run backward. The upper side now being a lake, it could not be examined. Merryweather rode down to where the old road, striking the dam, was deflected, to climb it by a gradual incline. Dismounting, he tied his horse to a sapling and began to look about him.

He searched a good while, bending down close to the earth that he might the better see anything unusual. His search was fruitless. Mounting, he rode to the nearest house to remain all night and in the morning bring something to dig with. That night it rained and the next day and the next till it seemed that an ocean was being precipitated. Then it cleared, and Merryweather, taking a pick and a shovel, went back to continue his hunt.

He found that the rain had washed away portions of the dam, and its side was covered with little gullies, some of them quite deep. He examined a number of these gullies, but found nothing. At the point where the road made the turn to ascend the dam he put in his pick. Presently its point struck something that gave out the ring of metal. Inserting the pick again, he threw out a horseshoe.

Though elated with his find, he did not consider it by any means important, but it stimulated him to dig on. A root or something harder than the earth under where the horseshoe had been found next attracted his attention. He dug around it and exposed a horse's hoof and in a few more strokes the bones of a leg to which the hoof belonged.

"Eureka!" he exclaimed. "The mystery of the lost wagon train is solved!"

He worked all day unearthing the metal parts of harness, gun barrels, bones of human beings and horses. At last he struck the wheel of a wagon. Then he went away to announce his find.

The news that the lost wagon train had been found spread. Merryweather hired half a dozen men to excavate, but so great was the interest among the people that many of them dug on their own account, some doubtless hoping to find articles of value. It was apparent that the train had been turned suddenly and headed down the canyon. Some of the wagons had not been completely reversed before they were buried.

Among the articles recovered was an iron box. Merryweather took possession of it, opened it and found that it belonged to Edward Earle. It contained several hundred dollars in gold and a number of papers.

Some of the papers were deeds to property in the region to which the caravan was going—a region where gold had then been recently discovered. Merryweather, after the excavations were concluded, rode on to what had been the destination of the train. The unearthed papers all belonged to Elizabeth Earle, and it was his purpose to transact for her any business that might be necessary. He found conditions that he was sure would make a great change in the girl he loved.

One evening Elizabeth heard a footstep in the hall, and a moment later she was clasped in the strong arms of Henry Merryweather.

"The mystery is solved, sweetheart!" he exclaimed.

He led her to a sofa and gave her an account of his efforts and their outcome. "And now," he continued, "there is news intrinsically of far greater importance to you than the solving of the mystery. You are very rich. Your father before starting on his last earthly journey made a will leaving you all he possessed. It was of no value then, but now on a portion of it is one of the largest mines in the west. You are the real owner, and I have brought you a proposition from its wrongful owners to transfer to you one-third of the stock of the company. This alone will give you a splendid income."

As the lover had expected, the unraveling of the mystery and the changes it led to in Elizabeth's life relieved her of her unhealthy current of thought and gave her new mental occupation. Not the least of the results was a husband, to whom she was indebted for bringing her good fortune.

As the mysterious disappearance of the wagon train was for years a fruitful source of discussion among those who knew of it, so since Merryweather unraveled it both chapters of the story are still told to interested listeners in the region where it occurred. The location, too, is one of the points of interest to tourists.

Water may be heated in a wooden barrel out of doors by inserting the ends of a pipe coil through one side of the barrel from the outside and maintaining a fire under the coil.

An automatic burglar-proof lock has been patented for freight trains. If broken, it sounds an air whistle and sets the brakes on the train.

BIG FIRE IN COCHRANE

Nineteen Business Places Are Destroyed by Flames.

Year-Old Ontario Town Has a Serious Interruption to Its Remarkable Growth When an Entire Block Is Wiped Out and Nineteen Families Are Homeless—Tents and Supplies Are Rushed in From Cobalt.

North Bay, Aug. 8.—Cochrane, 252 miles north of this place, the youngest town of the north, little more than one year old, but a lusty young community, whose rapid growth has been a marvel, received its first set-back yesterday when fire licked up nineteen business places. As the merchants occupied living rooms above the stores, nineteen families are homeless, and tents are being hurried to the scene from Cobalt, to house the unfortunates, until other arrangements can be made.

Shortly after two o'clock yesterday morning railway men noticed a blaze in Bradley's real estate office, and the alarm was at once given by the blowing of engine whistles and by men running from house to house to arouse sleeping occupants. Fortunately there was no wind blowing, or the entire town would have been fire-swept. As it was the flames spread with great rapidity, leaping from one frame building to another, and the efforts of the bucket brigade were directed to keeping the fire confined to one side of the street.

An entire block, facing upon two streets, was wiped out, nineteen buildings being completely destroyed. Efforts were made to save stock, and merchandise was piled in great heaps in the middle of the streets, and much that escaped the flames was damaged by mud and handling. Only one house is left standing in the area devastated, and the sprightly little town presented a sorry appearance with a big black gash across the centre, and goods scattered promiscuously in the streets.

The locomotives of the T. & N. O. Railway, Foley Bros., and Fauquier Bros., contractors, were pressed into service, and supplied water for bucket brigades.

The fire broke out at 2 o'clock yesterday morning, and burned fiercely until 6 o'clock, when everything in its path had been licked up and the flames gave up for lack of fuel.

The homeless ones are being looked after at the King George and Cochrane Hotels for meals, but the sleeping question last night was a puzzle. Twenty special constables were sworn in yesterday morning to guard the salvage from fire, and the patrolling the burned district.

Rothschild Bros., general store, are the heaviest losers, with a stock of $25,000, and insurance of $15,000. J. Pelangio, Forsythe and Chamandy Bros., general merchants, are among the heavy losers, with stocks running from $10,000 to $20,000, and light insurance. The postoffice, drug store, Chinese laundry, and a number of the smaller stores were wiped out. The banks and hotels escaped. The loss will amount to $150,000, with small insurance. The list of those burned out includes P. Burns & Co., butchers; J. Pelangio, general merchant; Forsythe, general store, barber shop ice cream parlor; New Ontario clothing store; Morrison, tailor; Mulligan's pool room; Bradley, real estate office; Suddy, grocer; Carter, druggist; Rothschild, general store and postoffice; New Idea restaurant and Quick Lunch restaurant; Chamandy Bros., general store.

Davy lost his left eye, and his chest and arms are badly burned, but he will recover the physicians say.

Spontaneous Combustion the Cause.

Brantford, Aug. 8.—The frame residence of W. H. Taylor, Dundas street, was gutted by fire late Saturday night causing a loss of $1,200. The fire started in a closet where some paint and rags were kept, and, it is believed, was due to spontaneous combustion.

Because native trees are too slow of growth to meet the demand for lumber, trees from America and Europe are being introduced into New Zealand.

BANDITS MAKE BIG HAUL.

Stage In New Mexico Is Held Up and Bullion Worth $20,000 Taken.

Sante Fe, N.M., Aug. 8.—Capt. Fred Fornoq of the mounted police was notified on Saturday that the stage from Mogollon, Southwest Socorro, coming to Silver City, was held up, the driver killed and $20,000 stolen. Mogollon is 70 miles from a telegraph station.

This stage was held up last year and three women passenger robbed of $450. Several posses took up the trail for the robbers yesterday.

According to later reports the robbers obtained 12 bars of gold, valued at $18,000, and belonging to the Ernestine Mining Co. and the Socorro Mining Co.

Jose Dominguez, the driver, was shot in the head and thrown out in the road by the bandits. The stage was then driven off and robbed. When the stage was two and a half hours late at Glenwood, Driver Jake Rouse, who was to relieve Dominguez, started out to meet him, and found him dead in the road. The mail sacks were unmolested. There were no passengers.

Dream Came True.

Toronto, Aug. 8.—Having twice dreamed that he should miss his grip upon the casing of an elevator shaft upon which he was working at the factory of Gourlay, Winter & Leeming in Logan avenue, George Mercer, 67 Hampton avenue, made his dream come true Saturday morning by falling 60 feet down the shaft to the basement. He was hurried to the General Hospital in which was believed to be a dying condition, but it was found that save for a compound fracture of the right leg, he was practically uninjured.

Mercer is 23 years of age and a single man, living at 67 Hampton avenue. He told the police who took him to the hospital, that twice last week he had dreamed of falling down the shaft, and had been taking particular care not to do so.

Biggest Cruiser Afloat.

London, Aug. 7.—The armored cruiser Lion, the largest and most powerful cruiser in the world, was launched at the dockyard at Devonport on Saturday. The keel of the giant cruiser was laid Nov. 29.

Though the usual secrecy in regard to design was at first maintained, it is now known that the cruiser, upon its 700 feet of deck, will carry eight guns of 13 1-2 inch calibre, throwing projectiles of 1,250 pounds. They will be mounted in four barbettes, all on the centre line of the ship. The cruiser will have a displacement when completed of 26,850 tons, and will be driven by turbine engines of 70,000 horse-power, giving her an expected speed of 28 knots. Her superiority over her predecessor in the cruising battleship class is shown by the comparison of her 70,000 horse-power with the earlier maximum of 45,000.

The streets along the line of march were thronged, the crowds being several lines deep. Cheer after cheer greeted Sir Wilfrid's appearance. Owing to the heavy day, no reception was held, and Sir Wilfrid retired early.

In addition to the itinerary arrangements, the Premier stopped for an hour at Mundare, a Ruthenian settlement, to lay the corne-stone of a new Greek Catholic Church.

Sir Wilfrid's remarks were brief, and he only took time to proclaim that Canada welcomed people of all races and creeds, giving them the right to worship the way they pleased.

Saved Eight Lives.

St. Catharines, Aug. 9.—A medal of the Royal Humane Society is likely to be applied for for William Jones of this city, who during his seventy odd years has saved the lives of no less than eight persons. Three were from drowning, and a fourth from being burned to death.

The Dragon Fly.

The oldest extant poem about a dragon fly is said to have been composed 1,440 years ago by the Emperor Yuriaku of Japan. One day, while this emperor was hunting, say the ancient records, a gadfly came and bit his arm. Therewith a dragon fly pounced upon the gadfly and devoured it. Then the emperor commanded his ministers to make an ode in praise of the dragon fly. But as they hesitated how to begin he himself composed a poem in praise of the insect, ending with the words:

> Even a creeping insect
> Waits upon the great Lord.
> Thy form it will bear,
> O Yamato, land of the dragon fly!

And in honor of the dragon fly the place of the incident was called Akitsuno, or the moor of the dragon fly.—"A Japanese Miscellany."

A Stubborn Husband.

A most interesting phenomenon is the stubborn husband. He is not a bad man. He is contrary, and he has to be managed. He is usually married to a clever little woman, who is constantly devising schemes to accomplish the things which make their joint lives a success.

He has no suspicion of this. If he had he would be so mad he could undoubtedly eat her. So all through life she goes on swinging a turnip ahead of his nose to make him go the same as though he were a balky mule. She is a cheery little body, and she grows plump with every year, and she does her smiling behind the door or she chuckles in her sleeve when he is not by. The stubborn husband is as interesting as a bug.—London Standard.

The Artist and the Critic.

Sidney Cooper, the English artist, happening one day to visit the Royal academy, where some of his works were on exhibition, while a couple of critics were examining the pictures strolled up to where they were standing. At that moment the younger of the two critics exclaimed, "Any machine could turn out sheep like that!" Mr. Cooper put his hand in his pocket, produced his card and, handing it to the newspaper man, said, with gravity, "If you will kindly send that machine to this address when completed I'll send a check for $1,000 to the institute for decayed journalists."

Sermons at All Prices.

"Brethren," said the visiting preacher, "I's got a eight dollar sarmon, an' I's got a six dollar sarmon, an' I's got a five dollar one an' a three dollar one, an' den I's got one I kin let you have fur jes' one dollar. Now, I want you fur to take up the kerlection right now, an' we'll see which one uv dese sarmons you wants."—Exchange.

Same Rights as French.

The Hague, Aug. 9.—Yesterday Senator Root contended that the fishing rights of the Treaty of 1818 were not simply those of equality, but that the makers of the treaty understood it in accordance with the American contention, and they had no idea whatever that the grant which they were making was to be subject to any power or authority of Great Britain to restrict, limit, modify, or affect it by subsequent legislation.

He contended that the French had exercised these fishing rights on part of these coasts under an earlier treaty wth Great Britain without being subject to local regulations, and American rights in the same terms were in effect the same rights, and were understood to be the same before lawyers began to argue and try to find some distinction between the two.

Suspected of Infanticide.

Huntsville, Aug. 9.—The fully developed though badly decomposed remains of an infant were found by workmen at the rear of the Kent House on Saturday, and the circumstances warranted Crown Attorney Johnson in calling for a coroner's inquest. This was held during the forenoon by Coroner McGibbon of Bracebridge, who was assisted by the crown attorney.

The evidence of Mrs. Roy, cook at the Kent House, and Proprietor Davis pointed suspiciously to a former employe of the house.

Following the verdict of the coroner's jury, a woman named Reynolds was arrested by Chief Watson during the afternoon and was later remanded until Wednesday.

Aviator's Thrilling Dive.

Blackpool, Eng., Aug. 9.—A. V. Roes, a newcomer in the field of English aviation, is not daunted yesterday after his thrilling experience on the local aviation field last evening, when his triplane, a machine of his own design, caught fire while he was flying at a great height. Roes pointed his machine to the earth and at a speed that threatened every moment to overturn the aeroplane he reached the ground just before the machine collapsed. The planes were completely burned away, and had the aviator been fifty feet higher when the flames broke out he would probably have been dashed to death.

Lad Killed by Train.

Galt, Aug. 9.—Three young boys about ten years of age, while playing on the Grand Trunk tracks here yesterday, were run down by a passenger train at the subway, where the C.P.R. crosses the G.T.R. Willie Cox, nine years old, was instantly killed; Victor Lesmer sustained an injured leg while the other lad escaped unharmed.

Mrs. Walter Smith, wife of a prosperous farmer of Shellield, was instantly killed while attempting to drive a team of horses attached to a load of grain. The horses became unmanageable. Mrs. Smith jumped, and when picked up was dead.

Fell Off Sidewalk, May Die.

Kingston, Aug. 9.—Mrs. William Wilson, aged 70, fell off the sidewalk, breaking her leg. She may not recover.

Farmers at Mountain Grove are looking for a stranger who bought several hundred calves and skipped out without settling.

E. W. Benjamin, proprietor of the hub and wheel factory at Yarker, aged 75, is dead. He had been in business there for forty years.

Voted to Strike.

Hamburg, Aug. 9.—The stevedores, ship cleaners and painters employed by the Hamburg-American Steamship Co., voted last night to strike to-day. Already there are 8,000 mechanics connected with the shipbuilding companies on strike, and it is the announced intention of the companies to lock out 15,000 other workers, beginning Aug. 11.

Out of the Flying Game.

Paris, Aug. 9.—Aviation meets are soon to lose one of the strongest cards in the withdrawal from all public flying of Louis Paulhan, winner of the London-Manchester flight and a score of other notable aerial contests. Paulhan, it was announced yesterday, will henceforth confine his activities to the manufacture of aeroplanes.

Lady Laurier at the Soo.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Aug. 9.—Yesterday the Canadian Soo had a distinguished visitor in the person of Lady Laurier, who is on her way west to meet her husband. Lady Laurier, accompanied by Hon. L. P. Brodeur, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and his wife, arrived on the steamer Lincoln.

U. S. Army 87,000 Strong.

Washington, Aug. 9.—The enlisted strength of the army during the present fiscal year has been fixed approximately at 87,000 men, under the arrangement of the estimates by Major-Gen. Leonard Wood, chief of staff, and approved by President Taft.

A Dreadnought's Hull.

A Dreadnought's hull is not all steel, as is generally supposed. Between the outer armor and the inner "skin," or hull plating, is a layer of teak, four inches thick, to form a "bed" for the armor plates.—London Standard.

RED HAT FOR BRUCHESI

He Is Said to Be Slated For the Next Cardinalship.

Gossip In Roman Catholic Circles Has It That Archbishop Will Be Raised to the College In Order That Canada May Again Have a Cardinal—Taschereau Was Last One—Consistory May be Held In November.

New York, Aug. 9.—Private advices have been received in this country and confirmed by the Rome correspondents of the higher class of Catholic journals, to the effect that Pope Pius X. has intimated that the long heralded consistory will be held next November. It is of particular interest to Canada, for although it may happen that no American prelate will be raised to the senate of the church, it seems a certainty that the apostolic delegate at Washington, Mgr. Falconi, will be among the new cardinals. In fact, this is openly stated by well-informed correspondents of Catholic papers in England and America. Mgr. Agius, now in the Philippines, is to succeed him at Washington. The monsignor, who is a learned member of the Benedictine Order, has almost finished the laborious work undertaken five years ago.

The Archbishop of Montreal, Mgr. Bruchesi, is likely to be named, as Canada has had no representative in the College of Cardinals since the demise of Cardinal Taschereau.

ARCHBISHOP BRUCHESI.

Some intimate that the papal legate, Cardinal Vannutelli, may be the bearer of a private communication on this subject to Mgr. Bruchesi, and that it will be made known at the close of the congress. At all events the Pope has been at pains recently to show his fondness for the Archbishop of Montreal. At the latter's request he made M. Lewoyne Demartingy, a Canadian, a papal chamberlain and ordered him to be attached to the escort of the cardinal legate. M. Demartigny and Thomas Hughes Kelly of this city will be the lay members of the papal legation. There is not the least hint of another American being in the list of coming cardinals. This is variously computed at 10 and 12. It is taken for granted that the Nuncio at Vienna, Mgr. Granito Belmonte, and the Patriarch at Lisbon, Mgr. Mendez Bello, will be among the fortunate ones.

In the case of Mgr. Belmonte, the Pope, it is understood, is quite willing to give him the hat, but the Emperor Francis Joseph seems to be in the way. Austria still holds a tight rein on her ancient prerogative of suggesting this one or that one for special honors. Rome usually looks favorably upon these requests, though the sacred college did object when that country ventured to use the power of veto at the conclave which elected Pius X. The Nuncio at Vienna offended the Prime Minister, Count Achrenthal, by his condemnation of Prof. Wahrmund, and since that incident Austria has shown no disposition to take the initiative in the matter of getting him the coveted honor. Mgr. Bislei, the Pope's major-domo; Mgr. Lugari, assessor of the holy office, and Mgr. Della Chiesa, Archbishop of Bologna, are among those mentioned by persons close to the Vatican. Again, too, the name of the Archbishop of Westminster is brought forward, Mgr. Bourne. England has been patiently waiting for some recognition.

May Be General Strike.

Paris, Aug. 9.—A proposal for a general strike was passed unanimously at a meeting of railroad men at Toulouse on Sunday. Immediate action was decided on, if the employers fail to make the concessions demanded. At Bordeaux the railroad men decided also on a general strike and expressed their intention of fighting to the bitter end.

A Cowardly Act.

Brockville, Aug. 9.—A most cowardly and inhuman act was perpetuated upon a cow belonging to George Smith of Smith's Falls. Upon going to the pasture, he found the animal dead, it having been disembowled on the under side of the body from the udder towards the front. The work showed that a very sharp knife had been used.

CURRENT EVENTS.

The London, Eng., Morning Post seems to have gotten the cobwebs out of its eyes long enough to correctly "size up" Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The Morning Post says that "the Premier has certainly a genius for being all things to all men, for letting his views be affected by what Burke called the "immorality of geography." It thinks that Laurier's efforts in the direction of maintaining protection while denouncing it, and belauding free trade, without taking steps to attain it, are not singularly happy."

Perhaps not, but if the Morning Post knew Laurier as well as Canadians do, it would know that there is no curve, however sharp, he canont taken when political expediency demands it. In the humbug class, there is no one in Canada or any other country, who ranks quite so high as Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Lord Strathcona, on his 90th birthday, received congratulations from the King, the Queen, the Queen Mother, the Duke of Connaught and Premier Asquith, And Canadians, one and all, will join heartily in the good wishes to the Dominion's Grand Old Man, and hope that many years will roll by ere he crosses the Styx with Old Charon.

South Wellington Liberals are in a quandary. They have not yet decided whether or not to put a fight in the bye-election in South Wellington, rendered necessary by the resignation of Joseph Downey. "We are undecided as yet," said one of the party leaders. "There is not a five-cent piece in the treasury, and so far as Ontario is concerned we were never in a more completely demoralized condition, numerically and financially. In all probability the necessary money will be put up to help us fight."

Money, no doubt, will be forthcoming, but it is fairly safe to say that the "Square Deal" Government of Sir James P. Whitney will gain another supporter when the ballots are counted in the South Wellington bye-election. What sensible man in Ontario, unless he has an axe to grind, would like to see the old Ross-Stratton Cap Sullivan days return? The Wellington Grits might as well spare their efforts and the money of their friends.

Talking of elections, what about the vacancy in the Belleville Board of Education, brought about by the resignation of Mr. J. L. Tickell? Will the vacancy be filled, or will the Board of Education try and struggle through short-handed?

There are two sides to every question. A correspondent of the Toronto Star voices a timely matter when he writes thus: "How is it we have heard so little from the girls and boys — or their parents — who were successful in their Entrance examinations? There has been any amount from the disgruntled ones, and very much fault has been found with that terrible (?) arithmetic paper. Although the majority failed, there were a large number who passed all right. Are we to suppose that they were all mathematical geniuses, or might it mean better teaching and study? I have questioned a few children who passed, and all say the papers were not too difficult. It appears to me a great pity to lower the standard now, as it might otherwise have meant much greater efficiency in the future.

Big drug store merger now. In a little while there will be only one antibilious pill, one corn plaster, one tooth powder and one soothing syrup to select from, and the halcyon days when you were at least offered something just as good instead of what you wanted will have departed. — N. A Japanese captain has been arrested as a traitor, charged with trying to sell army secrets to Russia. If the fate of this fellow could be made public it would drive the Crippen case out of sight. No doubt his sentence will be something lingering and humorous.

Peterboro Divine Called to Montreal

Peterboro, August 8.—At a meeting of Peterboro Presbytery, held in St. Andrew's church, Peterboro, a call from McVicar Memorial Church, Montreal, to Rev. J. G. Potter, B. A., of St. Andrew's church, Peterboro, was presented Rev. D. A. McKenzie, Centreville, acted as Moderator and there were present Rev. Robert Pague, Rev. Mr. McLennon, Norwood; Rev. Mr. Thompson, Hastings, ministers, and Mr. R. Lees and Robert Harrison, elders. The call was placed in the hands of Mr. Potter, who intimated with appropriate remarks his acceptance. Translation was granted to take effect after the second Sunday in September. Rev. Mr. Thompson was appointed interim moderator.

Rev. Robert Pague, of St. Paul's church, Peterboro, and Mr. John McClelland, a member of St. Andrew's church, Peterboro, expressed the deep regret felt because of Rev. Mr. Potter's removal from Peterboro, and his severing his connection with St. Andrew's.

Grand Trunk Fined.

FOR VIOLATION OF THE CANADIAN IMMIGRATION LAWS.

Sarnia, Aug. 8.—In the case of the thirteen charges against the Grand Trunk by Inspector Herbert for violating the immigration laws, evidence in which was taken up to 10 o'clock Saturday night, a verdict was rendered imposing a fine of $50 and costs in each case. The evidence showed that the men had been supplied with the money necessary to enable each to show $25 to the immigration officers at Sarnia, and gave receipts at Port Huron Tunnel Station. The money was handed back by the men at the Sarnia station after they had passed the immigration inspector. Out of 14 who were entered in this manner the inspector secured the arrest of thirteen, and the fourteenth one, Oglethorpe, has not been secured. In view of the fact that the men had been under arrest for three days, they were allowed to go on suspended sentence, and were escorted out of the country by the immigration officer.

THE FISHING TRIP.

(Perfectly true too.)

"The preacher goes along today!"
Quoth Dick to Bill and I;
"If you would read your titles clear
To mansions in the sky,
Behave yourselves and do not swear!"
We promised we would try.

As seemed to us to quite befit
His saintly presence there,
We opened up the fishing trip
With reverential prayer,
And never once did either one
Permit himself to swear!

When Billy lost a "strike" he'd quote
From Peter or from Paul,
When I got snagged or lost my line
I solace found in Saul;
And parables were mixed that day
With hooks and lines and all.

We plumed ourselves we'd done so well,
So dignified, sedate,
And had no pangs or vain regrets
'Tis afternoon, and late,
We heard the preacher damn a crab
That pinched off all his bait!

Old London Inn To Be Destroyed.

PLACE OFTEN VISITED BY OLIVER CROMWELL TO FALL IN MARCH OF PROGRESS—IS OVER 300 YEARS OLD.

London, Aug. 6—A tavern with a lineage that many a duke might envy closed its doors to the public yesterday. For more than three centuries Ye Olde Blue Last, on the west side of Dorset street and within a stone's throw of Fleet street, has been a place of resort for a clientele which has varied almost with each generation. In the days when taverns were the haunts of political coteries and Governments were made and unmade in their hospitable parlors the Blue Last was the reputed haunt of many well-known men.

It is a small, obscure, dingy house There is nothing attractive on the outside, but internally there are many evidences of the great age of the building. Its wooden walls are dark and crumbling with years, and the back gable has become so dangerous that the whole building has been condemned. There is only one bar, and its most notable ornament is a handsome cabinet of Spanish mahogany, in which are stored many ancient measures not now used in the sale of liquor.

No Records Kept.

There do not appear to be any authentic records of the use made of the Blue Last by distinguished men of the past who frequented the neighborhood. Richardson, bookseller and novelist, is believed to have been a frequent caller, dropping in from his office in Salisbury square, where he wrote "Pamela," and "Clarissa" in the intervals of looking after his business. Oliver Cromwell, also, probably, used the house, and, as it is in the immediate neighborhood of the newspaper offices, many eminent authors and journalists of the past were in all probability frequenters.

At the end of the tiny bar there is a door covered with green baize, with an oval window in the centre and "Parlor" printed on it in American spelling. On the walls of this inner sanctuary hang some very fine portraits, the subjects being Lord Cardigan, of Crimean fame; George Cruikshank the caricaturist; David Livingstone, the African missionary and explorer; Thackeray and Macauley. It is not suggested that all these distinguished men, least of all Livingstone, used the Blue Last, but a boldly carved "T" on the side of one of the high pew-like seats is believed to have been cut by the author of "Vanity Fair."

With all its interesting associations thick upon it, Ye Olde Blue Last will soon be in the hands of the House wreckers.

Sir William Butler.

Canada remembers Sir William Butler as the author of "The Great Lone Land," a book on western Canada before railways and migrations of people were features of prairie life. Sir William died recently in the old country at the age of 72. He was one of the brilliant roll of soldiers whom Ireland has given to the Empire's service. Sir William was born in Tipperary, and started soldiering at the age of 20. He served in many parts of the world, and saw much active service, in which he greatly distinguished himself. After four years in the east, he went in 1870, with the Red River expedition in western Canada. The years 1873 and 1874 saw him in Ashanti, and the following year he went on a special mision to Bloemfontein. In the Zulu war (1879-80) he was staff officer at the British sea base. In 1882 he was in Egypt, and fought at Kassassin and Tel-el-Kebir. Two years later he was selected by Gen. Wolseley to organize the Nile Expedition for the rescue of Gordon. He made a brilliant effort, and the fact that it was too late was no fault of his.

Perilous Angling.

George Ham, of the C.P.R., was telling some friends about a proposed fishing-trip to a lake in the Rockies which he had in contemplation.

"Are there any trout out there?" asked one friend.

"Thousands of 'em," replied Mr. Ham.

"Will they bite easily?" asked another friend.

"Will they?" said Ham. "Why, they're absolutely vicious. A man has to hide behind a tree to bait a hook."

Sir George's Future In Danger.

When Sir George W. Ross was recently created a knight he received a characteristic telegram from his friend, T. C. Irving, general manager of Bradstreet's, from Winnipeg, where Mr. Irving was visiting. Mr. Irving's telegram read:

"Winnipeg, June 27, 1910.
"Sir George W. Ross,
"Toronto, Ont.,

"Congratulations upon your being created a knight by His Majesty. Have a care, however, for it is not clearly stated in Holy Writ (and subsequently confirmed and approved of by the author of the Ross Bible) when referring to the Kingdom of Heaven, there 'shall be no (k)night there?' "T. C. Irving."

Sir George replied:

"Dear Mr. Irving:

"Your telegram received and congratulations duly appreciated. I do not see why you should quote the Bible for my embarrassment at this time. I think I shall have to refer the matter to Dr. Milligan for explanation.

"Geo. W. Ross."

Sir Wilfrid and his Promises

It must be the exhilarating effect of Ozone in the Western atmosphere, that moves the tongues of Liberals at Laurier receptions in Saskatchewan and elsewhere. At these meetings, gentlemen of the old party have still left the courage of their opinion, and under the Ozone influence of excitement hesitate not to remind the Premier of the promises he and his followers made prior to securing office, thus rendering him moments of unrest and uneasiness, taxing his fertile brain in efforts to ward off the blows of his friends who have still left a semblance of principle, not having yet come under the baneful influence of their Eastern co-workers, in what is untruthfully termed Liberalism.

"Heckling" it is termed in England; in Canada it is better known as "bombarding," both of which Sir Wilfrid has had his share of during his campaign in the West, not by his political opponents, but by those who profess to be his friends. To read the attacks upon him, for not carrying out his promises of inaugurating a policy of free trade as it is in England, one would come to the conclusion that he was listening to a reproduction of one of Sir Richard Cartwright's free trade harangues when in opposition. Here is a sample:—

"Vice-President Smith, of the Liberal Association of Yellow Pass was the principal spokesman, we quote from the Globe's report.

"Protection," he said, "is a great wrong. It makes nations dishonest, one with another. It makes individuals dishonest. It teaches the mischievous principle that we are to expect to receive value without giving value in return."

All wealth, Mr. Smith argued was the product of labor applied to nature. The manufacturer is entitled to the wealth the factory produces or the products of his own labor. "But," he continued, "the manufacturer steps in and says: I must have also as much as I can get from the other fellow. The farmer says: If you appropriate my earnings you are a thief. Now, manufacturers are all honorable men, and did not like the thought of being called thieves and robbers, so they went to Sir John Macdonald, then in Opposition, and he said: I shall wipe out the words thief and robber and put protection in their place. This was a serious injustice. If it is wrong to rob, it is wrong to make robbery legal."

"We do not under-estimate what you have done," Mr. Smith persisted, "nor are we ungrateful, but when we expected you to lay the axe to the root of the tree and cut it down you only cut off some branches. Now, if it was wrong for the Government of Macdonald to pass this law, is it not wrong for your Government to perpetuate it as a whole or in part? We are happy to know you admire the British free trade policy, and regard Britain in this respect as the light of the world. We appeal to you for relief and redress.

"As free men, we sternly object to paying tribute to our fellow citizens. We ask no favors. We urge our rights. We are willing to pay our shares towards the revenue of the country. We are free men. Treat us as such. If we are slaves we ask our freedom. If refused, we must demand. Our resources are not exhausted. Our appeal is to you, Sir Wilfrid."

These are a few specimens of the free trade utterances of Sir Wilfrid's free trade friends in the West, which he met with his usual sunny-smile of nothingness, leaving his hearers to come to any conclusion they please. True, at his final meeting in Saskatchewan, he was goaded into declaring that "Bright and Cobden were his models." "But," he added, we quote from the Globe report; "we cannot to-day give you the full policy of Britain. The motherland is a nation made. Canada is a nation making. We have given you free trade, and mean to give you free trade, and I don't think it is going too far to say that the Government will give still freer trade."

If these promises are of the same character of those made before Sir Wilfrid secured power, the manufacturers have not much to fear. Yet, being an opportunist, no one can foretell what he will do. All depends upon his chances of retaining power. "Simply that and nothing more."

A HYMN OF FISHING.

(Anon.)

I do not go to fish for fish,
 I go to catch the day,
When up the dawn he comes to swish
 The river mists away.
I do not go because I know
 The fish are sure to bite;
I go to catch the songs that flow,
 The dreams that greet my sight.

I do not go to fish for fish,
 I go to fish for news,
Along the shore a mile or more,
 To visit Mistress Muse.
I often find her daughters nine,
 Upon the beach at play,
And then the pleasure all is mine,
 To hear the things they say.

I do not go to fish for fish
 I go to be as one,
Who joys to sit and smile awhile,
 Just lonely with the sun,
Just with the chatter of the breeze
 Upon the rippling tide,
Just with the friendship of the trees,
 And of the birds beside.

I do not go to fish for fish,
 I have no time for that,
I go to stray away a day,
 Beneath my wide-leaved hat;
I go to drift, or slow my swift,
 However wills my boat,
Then something comes to cleanse and lift,
 The dust that's in my throat.

I do not go to fish for fish,
 I hardly care at all,
If any fish come to my wish,
 Good luck or ill befall,
I go to fish with memory bait,
 Upon the singing stream,
And generally it is my fate,
 Instead of fish to dream,

To dream and drift, to swing and float,
 And loaf the lonely hours,
Along the shore where glides my boat
 Where bloom the fragrant flowers,
To lunch and smoke and dream again
 The long day's golden span,
Then paddle home at night, and feel
 Just like another man.

HOMELY COUNCIL.

It isn't worth while to fret, dear,
 To walk as behind a hearse,
No matter how vexing things may be,
 They easily might be worse;
And the time you spend complaining,
 And groaning about the load,
Would better be given to going on,
 And pressing along the road.

I've trodden the hill myself, dear—
 'Tis the tripping tongue can preach,
But though silence is sometimes golden
 child,
 As oft there is grace in speech—
And I see from my higher level,
 'Tis less the path than the pace
That wearies the back and dims the eye,
 And writes the lines on the face.

There are vexing cares enough, dear,
 And to spare when all is told;
And love must mourn its losses,
 And the cheek's soft bloom grow old
But the spell of the craven spirit
 Turns blessing into curse,
While the bold heart meets the trouble
 That easily might be worse.

So smile at each distaste, dear,
 That will presently pass away,
And believe a bright tomorrow
 Will follow the dark today.
There's nothing gained by fretting;
 Gather your strength anew,
And step by step go onward, dear,
 Let the skies be gray or blue.
 —Margaret E. Sangster.

Messrs. G. Ballantyne, R. Foy, E. McGee and Capt. Bottum today constituted an automobile party which visited the village of Tweed.

BEST RATION FOR COACH STALLIONS.

According to a prominent breeder, there is nothing better than the usual stallion ration of oats and bran. Crushed oats mixed with about one-fourth as much bran by weight make a good combination. It is bulky, safe, nutritious and agreeable to the stallion's taste, digestion and requirements. A bran mash once or twice a week has for years been deemed desirable for its laxative effect unless the stallion has access to grass, but some of the leading practitioners condemn the weekly bran mash as conducive to colic.

Some owners prefer to depend entirely on cured feed throughout the season, but others equally successful esteem a few minutes' grazing daily at the halter or the run of a grass lot as very essential to the health and vigor of their stallions. The freedom of a roomy lot with a high strong fence is a splendid thing, grass or no grass.

The essential thing in the feeding is to furnish the horse abundant nourishment, keeping his system in vigorous, healthy form. Whatever grass is fed should be grazed by the horse. It is not safe to feed it in the barn, for almost surely some of it will at some time sour in the manger and produce trouble. It is better to graze the horse in the evening rather than in the morning.

Timothy hay is the safest kind to feed, and most of it should be fed long. If the horse bolts his grain cut some hay short and mix about two quarts of that with each feed of grain. The total amount of the grain feed per day should be about one pound for each hundred pounds that the horse weighs, but more should be given if he has a large amount of road work or is a hard keeper.

There is great variation in the requirements of different horses in this respect. Of hay he should have about a pound a day for each hundred pounds that he weighs, and little variation need be made from this rule unless he gets considerable grass.

Give the grain in three equal feeds, and give about half the hay at night and the rest divided between morning and noon. If strictly first class clover or alfalfa hay is available a little of it may be fed with evident benefit. A little oilmeal, not over a pound a day, is fed by some successful stallioners with good results.

FINE SET COACH STALLION.
[By courtesy of Iowa State college.]

It is doubtful if sufficient benefit follows the use of eggs to make it worth while to use them in most cases. If the horse appears to be poorly nourished and has a very large patronage there may be something gained by feeding them.

Men who feed eggs generally give two to four eggs beaten up in as many quarts of milk. To this may be added a double handful of oilmeal, first scalded, and the whole fed warm after supper.

Butter Hints.

In some parts of the country during the last fifteen years the price of grain has increased from 50 to 150 per cent, while dairy products have gone up only 25 per cent. It is not the dairyman who overcharges.

Pure bred cows pay the best, but not every pure bred cow is a good one. You must select among them the same as among scrubs, but the general average is higher and the pay better.

The sire is often said to be half the herd. If so, he should be a good one, and you can afford to have no other. Nor can you stand back on a little more cost. If the true value is there, money saved in cost is money lost.

The trouble with inbreeding is that without care it perpetuates the bad as well as the good points of the breed. This should be obviated by careful mating.

Lumps on Horses' Legs.

On the appearance of any lump about the legs of a horse it should be bathed diligently with water as hot as can be borne. What might develop into a spavin may sometimes in this way be checked at the start.

Oilmeal Is Valuable.

Two tablespoonfuls of oilmeal put in the horse's ground feed each time will keep the bowels relaxed and healthy, the appetite and spirit keen and the coat sleek. It is better than any condition powder.

Any one of the 26 Atlantic type locomotives recently ordered by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, will haul on a level a train of 25 passenger, ten baggage, seven Pullman and eight postal cars.

The Power of Conscience.

The power of a guilty conscience was well illustrated in a Toronto store the other day. A customer entered, somewhat the worse of liquor, and asked the sale clerk for the loan of a dollar. Being an optimist, the clerk complied with the request. Some days passed, and as the borrower did not put in an appearance, the clerk began to feel that his money was gone, never to return.

One day a strangely familiar face appeared before the counter; its owner made a purchase and then turned to go out. "Wait," said the clerk, "aren't you going to pay me the dollar you borrowed the other day when you were slightly under the influence?"

The visitor looked at him fixedly, hesitated, then drew forth the required amount, and took his departure. The next day another man entered the store with a very depressed air and hailed the clerk.

"Here is that dollar I borrowed from you the other day when I was a little the worse of wear," he said, with an insinuating smile.

The clerk put his hand to his forehead. "So you are the man?" he muttered at length, scanning the visitor's features.

"Yes," admitted the guilty one, unconscious of the plight of the clerk.

After he departed the clerk had some qualms about the unfortunate who had been accused of being intoxicated and had been obliged to pay a dollar for his admission. He was ultimately found and the dollar was restored to him, but he failed to explain what he had been doing on the memorable day when he paid it over.

Compliment to Albani.

I was singing some years ago at Douglas, in the Isle of Man, in the hall which is, I believe, the largest in the United Kingdom, and where the audience is always an enormous one, writes Madame Albani in M.A.P., describing "My Nicest Compliment." Just as the concert was about to begin, a dirty little boy presented himself at the entrance and tendered his money.

The money-taker looked him over and said: "But, my boy, we can't let you in with that awfully dirty face."

"But I must go in. I have saved up my halfpennies to hear the beautiful lady, and I must go in," protested the urchin.

His supplications, however, were of no avail, and he went away looking very disconsolate.

In ten minutes he returned with a clean face, and tendered his money again.

"Why! what have you done to yourself!" said the attendant. "Washed myself in the sea," was the answer. The manager was so struck by his perseverance that he admitted him free and gave him a program as well.

Fairly Warned.

"Mr. Smith," spoke up the young lawyer, "I come here as a representative of your neighbor, Tom Jones, with the commission to collect a debt due him."

"I congratulate you," answered Mr. Smith, "on obtaining so permanent a job at such an early stage in your career."—Success.

The Broken Trust

He looked around him; the hangings of sumptuous velvet, the magnificent dressing table, with its ornaments of crystal and gold, the large mirrors the few costly pictures, the rare bronzes, works of art from all parts of the world, a soft, thick carpet on which he could hear the sound of his own footfall. Was he to give up all this for a whitewashed attic, or a hut in the backwoods?

They must be mad to think that he could do it.

How should he die?

He shuddered as his eyes fell on the shining sharp razors. Not that, anything was preferable.

Locked away in the buhl cabinet he had some mineral poison that he had brought from America, poison that did its work quickly and left horrible traces behind. Not that.

He began to turn coward at the thought; it seemed so easy to speak and think of death; but now when he looked it in the face he saw it's full horror.

On a side table lay a small enamelled case containing a little revolver mounted in gold, with dainty crest and monograms — one that had been given to him some time ago.

A convulsive shudder shook his strong fingers as he saw it. There lay certain death, easy of access; and there was no one to stay him, to check the frenzied thought, to quiet and calm him in whose veins the blood seemed to change to molten lava.

He raised the pretty toy in his hands. No word of prayer rose to his white lips. That terrible sentence, "The Wages of Sin is Death," seemed floating around. He never even asked once for mercy or pardon as he placed the mouth of the revolver to his temple.

There was no death cry, no long struggle, only the sound of a sharp shot, and the tragedy was ended; the life that might have been so fair and promising brought to a sudden end.

The sound of a sharp shot; and it penetrated the library, where Esther Bruce stood speaking to him who was hence forward known as Sir Vivian Aynsley.

She cried out in horror and dismay but Sir Vivian placed his hand on her arm.

"It is nothing," he said; "wait here while I go and see."

Esther stood rooted to the ground a dull dread and fear overmastering her. Only five minutes ago, and she was talking eagerly to Sir Vivian of this new life, for which she hoped such wonders; telling him what Paul used to be before this lust of gold and honor seized him; how brave, how energetic, noble and reliable.

She had softened Sir Vivian's heart as no one else could have done, for he said to himself: "The man could not be wholly bad whom such a woman loved so fondly."

What did it mean, that horrible sound.

Listening with strained eyes and parted lips, she heard a hurried sound of rushing feet, a cry that fell on the summer silence, cleaving it like an iron sword. She could wait no longer; opening the library door, she saw servants running in hot haste, with white, scared faces.

"What is it?" she cried; but no one answered her.

Then Esther quitted the library and followed the servants upstairs.

"Dead!" she heard one say to another; "quite dead!"

Oh. Dear Heaven! that the horror did not slay her where she stood. From beneath the door of a room—what room she guessed all too truly—she saw a light crimson thread, and then Esther Bruce knew what the shot meant, and who lay dead there.

The bewildered servants made way for her, as with something worse than death in her face, she rushed past them; but Sir Vivian stood on the threshold of that fatal chamber.

"Nay, Miss Bruce," he said, gently; "this is no place for you. He is dead—quite dead — and if you loved him do not seek to see him now."

The dumb entreaty of her face touched him as words would never have done.

"Afterward," he said hurriedly, "but not now; his own mother would not recognize him. You would die of the horror."

She acquiesced, turning silently away; but the shock had been too great — the disappointment too keen—her strength failed her, and when Sir Vivian raised her in his arms for some moments she thought she was dead.

There was hurrying to and fro in hot haste; doctors were summoned though every one knew that human skill was of no avail.

There were loud cries and wailing of women, for the dead man had been well loved in his household; there were lamentations of men and exclamations of pity; for no one knew why he had died.

Death was instantaneous.

Nothing could be done, there were no arrangements now to make: He who had been lately master of that brilliant mansion lay in the darkened chamber, too horrible an object even for the eyes of the woman who loved him to dwell upon.

The news was not long in reaching Lord Damar, who heard it with a shrug of his shoulders.

"Best thing he could do," said His Lordship; "he lived like a thief; but he died like a man."

Which was his lordship's mistaken idea of the cowardly act of suicide.

Paul Westerne felt the blow keenly.

"We hunted him down," he said to his daughter. "I am not so strong as you, Edith. I feel as though I had some share in his death."

The calm, fair face grew paler as she listened.

"We only wanted justice, papa and not his life."

But for all that Edith Westerne pitied him, and would rather, far, that he had lived to repent than die in despair.

Yet all were very grateful to him they spared him dead as they had spared him living. His memory was not branded; it is true he was laid to rest in a pretty cemetery outside London, instead of the great family vault of the Aynsley's; but few cared enough for him to ask the reason why.

They said he was of unsound mind, and the white-robed minister read prayers over his grave. Who shall say! God knows better than man; and the question is, whether all such sin and despair is not the worst form of madness?

While the chamber was darkened Esther Bruce never left it, and when they laid Paul Lynne to rest in the churchyard she was chief mourner, true to him in death as she had been in life.

(To be Continued)

Contrary to the general belief that hard woods give more heat in burning than soft, Government experts have found by tests that linden, a very soft wood, has the greatest heating power with fir, another soft wood, next.

A glass bottle may be cut off easily by tying around it a piece of string saturated in kerosene, lighting the string and allowing it to burn until the bottle is heated, then plunging the bottle into cold water.

A simple system of levers, to be attached to a door knob, makes it possible for a person to open a door with one foot while both hands are filled.

A conductor on an English railroad who recently retired after half a century of service had traveled 2,350,000 miles.

If Canada's wheat crop last year had been shipped by rail, each car holding 15 tons, it would have made a continuous train 1365 miles long.

Man is able to withstand extreme cold better than extreme heat, more persons being killed by sunstroke than by freezing.

REPORTS CONFLICTING

Wheat Crop Is Variously Estimated by the Experts.

Pessimists Put It as Low as 65,000,000 Bushels and Optimists as High as 100,000,000 Bushels — Eighty to Eighty-Five Millions Is the Average Guess—Yield Per Acre Will be Low and In Some Places Nothing.

Toronto, Aug. 9.—Opinions have always differed and opinions of those interested in the western wheat crop are no exception. Some estimate the yield at 65,000,000 bushels, and others at $100,000,000. Both are thought to be extremists. Others, who may turn out to be nearer right, guess between 80,000,000 and 85,000,000.

It was civic holiday yesterday in Winnipeg and the grain market was closed, but on the curb market, October wheat dropped from $1.04 at the opening to $1.03 5-8 at the close.

On the Chicago market, spring wheat rose from $1.08 5-8 to $1.09 1-4; September fell from $1.02 to $1.01 1-2; May oats rose from 40 3-4c. to 40 7-8c.; and September oats remained steady around 36 1-2c.

The following is a summary of the reports received to date by the Canadian Bank of Commerce from its western correspondents.

Portage la Prairie—Prospects for a fair crop are considerably lessened by the continued drought. Wheat will average 10 to 12 bushels to the acre.

Brandon—The crop to the north and southwest will hardly be worth cutting. Fall wheat will average seven bushels. The spring crop is a total failure.

Regina—The summer fallow crop appears to be in excellent condition.

Moose Jaw—Good prospects of an early harvest.

There will be a total failure in many cases. Had the farmers been a little more careful, they would have had a better showing.

Southern Alberta—About one-third of a crop is expected. At Treherne there will be 13 bushels to the acre.

Northern Manitoba—Conditions are splendid; one sees no poor crops. Nothing can do any harm now but hail, rust or frost.

From another very trustworthy source much brighter reports have been received. From Brandon, Varcoe, Toulon, Souris and Yorkton comes the news that heavy falls of rain have worked wonders. All danger is over, and 15 bushels an acre may be expected.

At Lenore conditions are fair, but at Clearwater, Lyttleton and Mowbray, much damage has been done by hot winds. At Moose Jaw and Swift Current, the general conditions are favorable, and Medicine Hat expects a half crop.

Lethbridge and Calgary report gloomy prospects. Edmonton has good conditions and Wetaskiwin says "Never better."

At MacLeod conditions are variable. In some parts one-third of a crop is expected; in others, only ten per cent.

At Crow's Nest it has been hot and dry, and the spring crop is poor, but fall wheat will average 20 bushels an acre.

Took a Terrible Revenge.

Buffalo, Aug. 9.—Returning unexpectedly and finding another man in his home in the company of his wife, John Tichli, aged 30, is said by the police of Lackawanna City to have ripped Alexander Tionduski, 25, from head to foot with a large carving knife, and then hurled his victim out of a second storey window. Tionduski was taken to the Mercy Hospital, where yesterday morning he was reported in a dying condition.

Not Really Reformed.

Guelph, Aug. 9.—Michael Stockwell was released on Saturday morning from the reformatory farm, being given a ticket to his home in Smith's Falls. He came up the York road to go to the station, and dropped into the house of Reuben Foran, where he stole a watch and some clothes. He was caught, and yesterday morning was sentenced to three months in the Central Prison.

Altars on Shipboard.

London, Aug. 9.—The Canadian Associated Press learns that the steamer which is to convey the Papal legate and other dignitaries of the Roman Catholic Church to the Eucharistic Congress at Montreal has to be specially prepared for them. Altars have to be erected for the prelates in their different staterooms, each altar having some special distinctive feature.

Wish Free Traders Success.

London, Aug. 9.—The president of the Financial Reform Association in a lengthy letter to the press says the result of the memorial to Premier Laurier must be gratifying to the Free Trade League of Winnipeg, and all British free traders must wish the newly-formed society every success.

Drowned Reaching for Paddle.

Haileybury, Aug. 9.—Peter Jacobs, a Frenchman, living three miles down the lake from here, was drowned about six o'clock Sunday night by falling from his canoe in reaching for his paddle. He was less than 40 feet from the shore in five feet of water when the accident happened.

Fatally Scalded.

New York, Aug. 9.—Two men were dreadfully scalded, one fatally, and thirty families were panic-stricken yesterday when a 400-gallon tank of hot water in an eight-inch wall blew up in the air shaft of the six-storey building at the corner of Broome and Clinton streets.

S. O. E. Convention.

Ottawa, Aug. 9.—Two hundred and fifty delegates will be here to-day from all over Canada to attend the Sons of England convention. The general purpose committee, with E. A. Miller of Aylmer, Ont., in the chair, is arranging the business of the convention.

Because the native, two wheeled ox carts of Porto Rico are destructive to the modern stone roads, the island legislature is considering a bill to prohibit their use on main highways after 1911.

The Hero of Pond Point

A Disappointment at a Fourth of July Celebration.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

"Hi, Jared!" called First Selectman Foster. "Found the grave yet?"

"Reckon I have," replied the sexton. "Ann Bassett says it's the grave of Theron Bassett."

After a century of somnolence the town of Pond Point awoke to the realization that its name was not written large on the page of the nation's history. Indeed, it did not appear at all. Other towns and villages in the state boasted of bullet scarred edifices, historical taverns and many dwellings wherein had slumbered the immortal Washington or the beloved Lafayette.

It had remained for Dr. Liscom to unearth or at least to disclose the identity of a real hero of the Revolutionary war. In his genealogical researches the good doctor had come across the mention of one Theron Bassett of Pond Point, who had enlisted and afterward died fighting on the 27th of August, 1776, in the battle of Long Island.

Notwithstanding the fact that Theron Bassett had appeared to be the only patriotic soul among the hundreds that had populated Pond Point in those early days, with commendable ardor Pond Point decided upon a celebration upon the following Fourth of July. This celebration was to come as a thunderclap upon the neighboring towns, which had openly jeered at Pond Point in days gone by.

There was to be a grand parade and speechmaking on the green where the churches formed a triangle. There was to be an oration at the grave delivered by the first selectman himself, followed by the sounding of "taps" over the resting place of the neglected hero. Then there was to be a picnic in the grove, with free ice cream and gorgeous fireworks in the evening. Other towns and villages would come and see and envy.

At last the honor of Pond Point was to be vindicated. Dr. Liscom had a cousin who knew a man who was a reporter on a New York paper. This reporter was enjoying his annual vacation, but he had reluctantly consented to appear. Had he known what was in store for him he might have accepted the assignment with more grace.

The eventful morning dawned warm and muggy, with the promise of intense heat later on.

"This is a proud day for Pond Point," remarked Dr. Liscom as he prepared to enter the carriage drawn up at the sidewalk.

"The greatest day ever," responded the first selectman, puffing nervously at his huge cigar. "We've been waiting a long time, doctor, but today we'll show some of those other fellows what Pond Point can do! They say there's a big crowd from Leetown and Scatterbrook up at the green now." He panted into a seat beside the doctor and fumbled at the roll of manuscript in his pocket.

In the carriages were three clergymen of varying doctrines; the Enright brothers, lawyers and men of standing in the community; a superannuated senator who was a relative of the Enrights and the orator of the day; the committee on celebration, and, lastly, the reporter from New York, who sat dejectedly beside Hiram James of the Pond Point Clarion, rather bored at the whole proceeding.

Up the long street, around the corner by the postoffice and up the incline to the village green, where the schoolhouse and three churches stood in neighborly proximity. Here they paused and formed a semicircle about the platform which had been erected.

Dr. Liscom arose and said:

"Ladies and Gentlemen—This is a proud day for Pond Point! For the first time in her history she is able to stand side by side with her patriotic sister towns and to enthusiastically commemorate the Declaration of our Independence and to honor the memory of one who fought and died for that liberty and who, through a strange oversight, has been too long permitted to rest in an unknown grave," etc.

Jared Wilson wheeled a small cannon into position, and the minister lifted his long, white hand and bowed his head, and there was silence while he prayed.

First Selectman Jefferson Foster came forward when the prayer was ended. His round red face was redder than usual, and when he removed his stiff hat beads of perspiration stood out on his forehead. He took the roll of manuscript from his pocket and surveyed the company with a wavering eye. When his glance met the slightly contemptuous smile of the reporter from New York he started violently and unrolled his papers nervously.

The first selectman was suffering painfully from stage fright. He looked at the opening lines of his carefully prepared speech and then concentrated his gaze upon a solitary vehicle wending its way slowly up the dusty road.

"Friends and fellow country men," began the selectman in a husky growl, "this is a great occasion—a great occasion," he repeated, confidently evading a cynical gleam in the reporter's eye, "for which we are indebted to our esteemed townman, Dr. Liscom." Jefferson Foster's eye wandered again and encountered the grinning reporter's face. "A hero is sleeping in our midst. Today we are to honor the bravery and daring of our esteemed citizen Theron Bassett, killed on the field of duty. A year hence we hope to erect a suitable monument to his memory"—

There was a rustle of excitement on the outskirts of the crowd where the vehicle that had crawled up the dusty road had halted. A woman's voice, rising high above the tumult, angry and expostulating, interrupted the selectman's speech. "I tell you I'm going up front! This thing has got to be stopped!"

A murmur of indignation followed the speaker as she pushed her way through the crowd and finally emerged into the open space about the grave. She was a tall, rawboned woman, with strongly marked features and iron gray hair drawn tightly back from her forehead.

"What do you mean by this disturbance, madam?" asked Dr. Liscom severely.

"My name's Bassett," she replied, with a little clicking movement of her teeth.

The reporter took a notebook from his pocket and reflectively sharpened a pencil.

"Bassett!" repeated the doctor affably. "Then I am sure you are a relative of the hero whose dust lies under this mound. We would have included you among our honored guests had we known there was a living descendant of Theron Bassett, who"—

"Fiddlesticks!" interrupted the woman rudely.

The reporter scribbled busily in his notebook. The first selectman's mouth hardened.

"What do you mean, madam?" asked Dr. Liscom patiently.

"I mean that I just heard this morning that you Pond Point folks were going to hold a celebration over this grave, and I came over here from my home in Leetown to stop these sacrilegious proceedings!" She looked triumphantly about her, while the people gasped. Leetown was a mine of historic wealth: Washington's headquarters, noted taverns where he had slept, birthplace of a hundred heroes—Leetown had more than its share of honor.

"What do you mean by 'sacrilegious'?" There was utter silence as Dr. Liscom asked this question.

"I'll tell you, sir! Theron Bassett was my ancestor—he wasn't anything but a drummer boy, anyway, and he deserted from the army before the battle of Long Island! He lived to be ninety years old, and he died from sunstroke. He's buried over to Leetown, and they're holding some kind of a powwow over his grave this very minute, I do believe!" She snorted contemptuously as she faced the dismayed throng.

"We were misinformed, then," cried the first selectman, glaring angrily at Dr. Liscom, who in turn fixed an accusing eye upon the discomfited Enrights.

The reporter chuckled gleefully as he scribbled, and for a few minutes there was no sound save the sharp breathing of the committee and the rustle of turning pages. Jefferson Foster wondered helplessly what the scribe might be jotting down against his future peace and dignity.

"Yes, you are misinformed," returned the woman sarcastically. "This grave," indicating the decorated mound with a sweep of her mittened hand, "does not contain the dust of any of my ancestors, though it is the grave of a HERO! This first grave with the weeping willow on the stone is Great-grandmother Bassett's, the next is great-grandfather's, and this one under the wall, which you have made so gay and this gentleman has been declaiming over—this is the grave of HERO, great-grandfather's favorite dog. The old man thought a sight of him, and when the dog died he buried him here under the wall, and nobody knew anything about it. He always said Hero was as good a Christian as lots of folks he knew!"

She went amid a dead silence, and it was not until the dust from her carriage wheels had settled again that a faint chuckle from the visitors broke the constraint. Dr. Liscom covered the situation with a few words spoken with a twinkling eye.

"Pond Point seems fated to play a passive part in the history of her country. So be it! Let us be content to be good citizens, heroes in our humble way, and perhaps we may so conduct ourselves in time of national distress our descendants may honor our memories even as we would honor the memory of some great man! In the meantime I move that we adjourn to the picnic grove!"

Amid loud applause the gathering made its way to the grove, while the reporter replaced his notebook in his pocket and thanked the doctor for the privilege of attending such an interesting occasion, and the good doctor and other members of the committee swallowed hard when they saw the alert young man sprinting up the road to catch the noon train, for they knew that the honor of Pond Point was at the mercy of his pencil.

In the churchyard Jared Wilson surveyed the decorated mound in silence. Once he put forth his hand to tear the flags and flowers from their place, but he drew back.

"If he was a good dog the flags won't hurt him any," he muttered as he followed the committee to the picnic grove.

That fall when Jefferson Foster failed to secure the nomination for representative from his district he laid the entire blame upon the hero of Pond Point.

The Substitute

A Man Plays the Part of Another Who Cannot Appear.

By GEORGE L. BYINGTON.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

One morning after guard mounting the commandant's orderly came to my quarters and said that Mrs. Commandant (alias Mrs. Colonel) Seymour would like to see me. I obeyed what I considered an order and betook myself to the most pretentious house in the garrison, where the lady lived.

"Mr. Boynton," she said, "my nephew, Alf Rogers, is in a lot of trouble. At the supper table after the hop the other night he drank too much wine—he's just out of West Point, you know, and has no practice at winebibbing—insulted Major Whipple and is now under arrest. I have invited Lucia Edgerton, a girl in whom I am much interested, to visit me especially to meet Alf. To confess, I wish to make a match between the two. This stupid business of Alf's getting tipsy on two or three glasses of wine has spoiled everything.

"To tell a girl that the man I have been praising to her and have indicated I wanted her to marry is under arrest for drunkenness would be an irreparable blow to my matrimonial plan. I have thought out a scheme for a substitute. Would you mind personating Alf for a short time?"

"Anything to please you, Mrs. Seymour."

"I could tell Lucia that Alf had been ordered away on special duty, but I've thought it over and have concluded that such a subterfuge wouldn't be wise. I would rather post the officers and their families that you are to act as Alf, and as soon as he is restored to duty we can turn it off as a joke."

Our little post was so dull that not only I, but the officers and their families, were quite pleased with Mrs. Seymour's plan. We all enjoyed the prospect of fooling her protegee, watching her while we were doing so and observing her actions while receiving the attentions of the wrong man.

Miss Edgerton arrived, was welcomed by her hostess, and I was invited to dinner. It seemed queer to be addressed as Mr. Rogers, but it was very nice to be expected to make myself agreeable to one of the most winsome young girls I ever met. She was barely eighteen, innocent, unsophisticated and apparently a very easy person to perpetrate any fraud upon. It did not seem possible to me that the deception could be carried on very long, but I had no sooner made Miss Edgerton's acquaintance than I hoped it might be interminable.

While I found myself in one respect in clover, in another I was troubled. It was fine to be dancing attendance on a girl intended for Rogers while he was languishing in his quarters, but the fact was ever present that the day would come when I must resign her to her rightful owner. I attended her at Sunday morning inspection, guard mounting and such ceremonials as were possible at a small post. I galloped by her side over hill and dale; I danced with her, sang duets with her—in short, did everything except make love to her, which under the circumstances would have been dishonorable.

Every one who came in contact with Miss Edgerton enjoyed immensely the innocent ruse that was being perpetrated upon her. They were all very punctilious in addressing me in her presence as Mr. Rogers. He was very popular, and there was not one person at the post who would for the world have balked the plan to hide the fact that he was under arrest for intoxication. I had expected Mrs. Seymour to find some way out of the matter within a few days, but she did not, and it went on. An order for the convening of a court martial to try the real Rogers for conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman was daily expected, but did not arrive. However, there were few of us at the post, and every one became so used to palming me off as Lieutenant Rogers that it seemed the substitution might go on indefinitely.

One evening Miss Edgerton, who had been very shy, surprised me by intimating in a delicate though unmistakable way that she was cognizant of Mrs. Seymour's matchmaking scheme and showed disappointment at my not having evinced a tender interest in her. It was hard enough before for me to get on without making love, but after this it was impossible. I don't mean that I had fallen in love with Miss Edgerton. We soldiers, prone to extremes, are given as much to lovemaking as to fighting. It is, however, rather lovemaking than love, for we have a faculty for choosing sweethearts as often as we are transferred between stations. My lovemaking with Miss Edgerton was more like that we were used to practicing while at West Point during the summer encampment, when we met swarms of girl visitors, each one of whom would have considered the corps ungallant if she were permitted to go back home without having received at least one proposal.

But before being carried away I offered to Mrs. Seymour my resignation as Rogers' substitute, telling her that I refused further to act unless she and Rogers would exonerate me from any criminality should their matrimonial plans be interfered with. Mrs. Seymour took time to consider; then she agreed that under the circumstances I could not be blamed. I think she conferred with Rogers.

By this time the whole garrison had become absorbed in the game. This to one who knows anything about army life at a frontier post will not be astonishing. Day after day goes by with little to do and still less to talk about and often no amusement. Here was a case well calculated for both. It seemed to me that the especial pains every one took to perpetrate the fraud would defeat it. Too many people were going out of their way to call me Rogers, making all sorts of very thin excuses to do so, then often stuffing their handkerchiefs into their mouths to avoid exploding with laughter.

Miss Edgerton seemed oblivious to it all. But she was such a childlike little thing that no one had much fear of her suspecting any deception, and if she did suspect it there was no way of confirming it. Was not Rogers shut up in his quarters, not daring to show his face outside, both on account of military discipline and because he did not wish to spoil Mrs. Seymour's matrimonial plans for him?

Notwithstanding Miss Edgerton's innocence it struck me that she was a bit of a flirt. At any rate, it seemed to me at times that she was flirting with me. I suppose in such affairs there is more or less of a game going on between the parties interested. I mention this as some excuse for myself for entering upon a process calculated to win the heart of an innocent girl, especially when I was not sure that I was doing it for pastime.

One morning the mail brought an order from Washington to dismiss the charges against Lieutenant Rogers and release him from arrest. A bombshell thrown into the garrison could not have produced as much consternation. Mrs. Seymour was in a terrible quandary, having laid no plan for such a juncture. All the officers and officers' families, who had been calling me Rogers, began to think of the position they would occupy toward the girl they had conspired to fool.

As soon as Rogers appeared for duty he solved the problem. He was to be Lieutenant Boynton, and I was to remain Lieutenant Rogers. This satisfied Mrs. Seymour, who invited us both to dinner, and so great was the interest of the others in this complicated affair that before the dinner came off she invited all the officers and their wives. I was still supposed to be in especial attendance upon Miss Edgerton and took her in to dinner. The first words spoken by Rogers caused consternation.

"I say, Rogers," he said to me, "I congratulate you on your release from arrest. What did you want to make a beast of yourself for?"

As soon as I could regain my equanimity I turned upon him with feigned severity and said:

"What do you mean, sir, by thus accusing a brother officer?"

"I mean that Lieutenant Alfred Rogers at the last hop got tipsy on three glasses of champagne and a pony of brandy, called the major names and was arrested and confined to his quarters. Charges were preferred, and Lieutenant Rogers' father, being a senator, succeeded in having them dropped. Now, who is Lieutenant Rogers if he is not you? Are you in the army under an assumed name to hide some former disgrace?"

Up spoke Miss Edgerton. During this harangue she had drawn away from me as far as possible, regarding me with a singular expression. Then she turned to Mrs. Seymour.

"What does this mean?" she demanded.

Mrs. Seymour was so agonized that she couldn't find either voice or words for reply. Miss Edgerton left her seat, went to her friend and put her arms about her. Then, standing by her, she said:

"The farce is ended. Let those laugh best who laugh last. Soon after my arrival here I saw at a window an officer whom I had met last summer at West Point and whose name I knew to be Alfred Rogers. We chatted, and he confessed that he was confined to his room under arrest for getting tipsy and being disrespectful to the major. I had no difficulty in getting out of him this scheme to substitute Lieutenant Boynton in his place. Since that time the real Lieutenant Rogers and I have been carrying on a clandestine correspondence."

During this revelation to those who had supposed themselves to have been deriving amusement at Miss Edgerton's expense, of how she and Rogers had outwitted the whole of us, there was an attentive audience. When she ceased speaking some smiled, others blushed, while a few looked irritated.

"My friends," said Rogers, "accept my heartfelt thanks for your kindness in shielding me from the consequences of my weak head for wine. And to you, Boynton, I am under especial obligations for personating a winebibber."

I arose, placed my hand on my heart and bowed.

Then Gaylord of my company spoke up:

"In every well constructed comedy there is a heart interest, the denouement of which is reserved for the third act. I trust we are not going to be left without this important part. Two Rogerses have been in the field—two leading gentlemen and but one leading lady. Which is the Rogers to carry off the prize?"

Remembering my position in this respect, I felt uneasy. Miss Edgerton blushed, Rogers appeared triumphant. He looked at Miss Edgerton, her eyes brimming with merriment, and asked:

"May I?"

"Silence gives consent," he added, receiving no reply. "Ladies and gentlemen, I have to announce my engagement to Miss Edgerton."

Hearty congratulation followed, I being first congratulator.

EXPLOSION ON LAUNCH

Picnic Party Has Narrow Escape From Horrible Death.

Three Girls and Two Men In Pleasure Craft Have a Thrilling Time at Port Dover—Gasoline Takes Fire and Young Man Holds Girls Overboard While Flames Rage About Him—Eyres Badly Burned.

Port Dover, Aug. 9.—While about half a mile from the harbor here yesterday evening an explosion occurred on the gasoline launch May, on board which were three young girls and two men out for a pleasure cruise. The launch was owned by Jake Eyres and was being run by his son, assisted by a sailor, Dan Sinclair, from the cruiser Vigilant. The explosion was caused by the pipe leading from the tank to the engine being detached. Almost in an instant twenty gallons of gasoline flooded underneath the flooring of the boat and took fire. With praiseworthy presence of mind the Vigilant sailor grabbed the girls while the flames raged all around him and held them overboard in the water until help arrived. It is little short of a miracle that no lives were lost. Eyres was badly burned. The hull, while still aflame, was towed to the harbor by another launch. The pumps of the Vigilant were used with all possible pressure to extinguish the flames, but the craft was not saved above the water line. The girls were spending their vacation here, their homes being in Hamilton. They were Misses Miller, Allan and Kidner.

One Truly Bluebeard.

New York, Aug. 9.—There is on exhibit at the federal detention station one truly Bluebeard, nationality Russian, 70 years, beard long, curly, and a bright, bright blue.

Morris Lubowsky heard on his trip across the ocean that it was difficult for the aged and infirm to get into this land of the free, so, when he was turned aside at Ellis Island to await the action of a board of special enquiry, he brewed a dark dye from the lead of an indelible pencil and soaked his beard in it. The next application was intended for the hairs of his head, but when the dye was well set, he discovered too late that it was blue, not black, and quite as indelible as it had been advertised.

With a snow white head and an imposing ultra-marine beard, the disconsolate Lubowsky presents a strange picture of woe. He will probably be deported.

Want Permanent Headquarters.

Minneapolis, Aug. 9.—Secretary-Treasurer John W. Hayes of the International Typographical Union, read his annual report yesterday, showing the organization to be in a flourishing condition. The borrowing of a large sum from the old-age pension reserve is suggested in a report of the international executive council. The proposed loan would be used to secure a site, and erect a suitable headquarters building in Indianapolis, with the idea of making Indianapolis the permanent convention place of the union.

Hushin and Lee, the local strike delegates to Montreal, have returned and express themselves as quite satisfied with the agreement.

BOXING

Corbett's Unknown is Lang.

New York, August 8.—It is pretty definitely determined that Bill Lang, the Australian, is the "great unknown" whom Hugh McIntosh and Jim Corbett are grooming to wrest the heavyweight laurels from Jack Johnson. His fight with Stanley Ketchel at the Fairmount Athletic Club Friday night will, therefore, be watched with considerable interest. McIntosh is speeding across the Atlantic to act as one of Lang's seconds, while Jim Corbett is taking numerous trips to Stratford, Conn., to assist Lang in his training. Corbett is enthusiastic over the showing of the Australian and he believes he is the most promising heavyweight candidate he has ever seen.

Lang is 5 feet 11 inches tall, and weighs 185 when in training. Tommy Burns knocked him out in six rounds in Sydney, Australia, but that was two years ago before Lang knew anything of boxing. Last winter Lang came back and fought Burns off for 20 rounds showing greatly improved form. Johnson took the Australian's measure in nine rounds, but that, too, was when Lang was just learning how to fight. Six months ago Lang whipped Bob Fitzsimmons, but that was nothing to brag about Ketchel is one of the hardest hitting men Lang has ever faced. He bores in continually, takes and delivers punishment, and never stops fighting. If Lang can whip him he ought easily to get on a match with Al. Kaufman, Sam Langford, and the other heavyweights he must whip before he can hope to get a fight with Johnson.

Corbett is confident Lang can whip any of the "runners-up." He has taught the Australian to meet Ketchell's rushes with stiff left jabs, and believes Lang can knock out the middle-weigh in the first three or four rounds.

Ketchel will enter the ring at 160 pounds, twenty-five less than Lang.

Student's Suicide.

BECAUSE THE WOMAN HE LOVED REFUSED HIM.

South Framingham, Mass., Aug. 8.—With a copy of Byron's poems beside him, Gamaliel Bradford, third year student, of Wellesley Hills, a direct descendent of William Bradford, first Governor of the Plymouth Colony, and a member of the graduating class of 1910 at Harvard, shot himself to death at a local hotel today because the girl he loved had refused him. He begged the young woman to break her engagement to another man. His pleadings were made at the railroad station here, and, concealing his agitation at the young woman's refusal, Bradford walked directly to a nearby hotel, engaged a room, and saying he was tired, locked himself in. Within half an hour four shots were heard. When hotel employees broke down the door of the young man's room he was found on the floor unconscious from a wound in his head. The other three shots fired wildly, left their marks about the apartment. Bradford died a few hours later.

Young Bradford was a brilliant student.

His college chum, John Brooks, committed suicide two years ago under the same circumstances as today's tragedy. The young man was tenth in descent of a family which contained many prominent men. He was 23 years old. His grandfather is Gamaliel Bradford of Brookline, the well known publicist, anti-Imperialist, and a former candidate for Governor of Massachusetts.

Who Killed Rice?

MILLIONAIRE THOUGHT TO HAVE BEEN MURDERED BY THIEVES.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 8.—The police of this city and county today are working to solve the mystery of the death of W. L. Rice, the millionaire attorney, who was shot down near his home on Euclid Heights on Friday night, on the theory that he was killed by chicken-thieves. They regard the bag of stolen chickens, found yesterday in the bushes sixty feet away from the scene of the murder as the most tangible clue yet unearthed. The theory is, that Rice returning home from the Euclid Club, where he had spent the evening met the thieves returning booty-laden from the henhouse of W. P. Palmer, his next door neighbor, and attempting to arrest them was first knifed and then shot. The robbers, frightened by the lights of an approaching automobile, then fled, it is supposed, discarding the bag of chickens as they ran.

To stimulate the already active search for the murderer the reward for the apprehension of his assailants today was increased to $10,000.

CANADIANS IN HOLLAND

SOMETHING ABOUT OUR ARBITRATORS AT THE HAGUE.

Both Fitzpatrick and Aylesworth Are Old Campaigners In the Matters of International Dispute—Mr. G. F. Shepley Has Occupied High Place In the Legal Fraternity of the Dominion.

Another Hague Tribunal is in session. As usual there are several Canadians present. The Canadian delegates are not primarily concerned with the abolition of armaments or the substitution of arbitration for gunpowder. As representatives of a country which depends upon the world's peace for its prosperous development, Sir Charles Fitzpatrick and and Mr. Aylesworth and Mr. G. F. Shepley are perhaps as much interested in the peace phases of The Hague program as the delegates from any other nations. But their immediate business at The Hague as the spokesmen for Canada is to readjust that apparently unadjustable and time-honored dispute between Canada, the United States and Newfoundland regarding fishing privileges in the waters of the island colony.

As an inviting place to spend a holiday The Hague is perhaps as good as any other place in the world. Centuries before the ancient capital of the Netherlands became the clearing-house for Governments and civilization it was one of the most historic places in the world. The very building in which the sessions of the tribunal are held was put up in 1250. It was for centuries the rendezvous for the cavaliers. Its main hall is now used for the opening of the Dutch Parliament. The Hague is 13 miles from Rotterdam in South Holland and two miles from the German Ocean. Seat of government for the Netherlands, it is also the centre of justice. Away back in 1527 The Hague became the seat of the Supreme Court in Holland. It was afterwards the scene of many European settlements; a sort of general clearing-up spot for the whole of Europe. The Triple Alliance of 1668 and that of 1717 were held at The Hague. William of Orange, who founded the Twelfth of July, was born there. Spinoza the great philosopher, died there in 1677. Most that America knows about The Hague is that it is the capital of the country in which were born the people that founded New Amsterdam, now "little old New York," and of the ancestors of Theodore Roosevelt who was given an emperor's ovation in New York on June 18th; not less than in 1899 at the time of the Boer War when Dutchmen were fighting the British Empire including Canada, the Czar of Russia selected The Hague as the place of the first meeting of a world's tribunal for the settlement of international disputes without gunpowder.

Sir Charles Fitzpatrick is not a beginner on fisheries disputes. In 1897 he represented the Dominion Government in the fisheries case before the British Privy Council. He is one of the most famous Irishmen in the Province of Quebec, in whose capital he was born in 1853. Early in life he became one of the leaders of the Bar in Quebec City, and he has as many famous cases to his credit as any man in Canada. He was chief counsel for Louis Riel at the time of the Rebellion; defense counsel for Hon. H. Mercier and Ernest Pacaud in the prosecutions that came after the fall of the Mercier Government. He defended McGreevy and Connolly before the Privileges and Elections Committee at Ottawa. Years he was president of the Irish National League in Quebec. He sat for six years in the Quebec Legislature, at the end of which time he was called, in 1896, by Sir Wilfrid Laurier to become Solicitor-General for Canada.

Mr. Geo. F. Shepley is best known by the fact that a few years ago he was chosen to conduct the famous inquiry into the insurance case before a committee of the House of Commons. He is a large energetic man who has a great deal of enthusiasm, much ability and a large practice.

Mr. Shepley is an Ontario man; born in Blenheim Township. At Victoria University he won the Prince of Wales' gold medal in 1872; six years later called to the Bar; at first a partner of the late Justice Ferguson; became a Q.C. in 1889 and president of the County of York Law Association in 1896.

Hon. Mr. Aylesworth is too much in the public eye to need introduction. He will be remembered particularly for the conspicuous part he played representing Canada before the British Privy Council on the much-talked-of arbitration over the Alaskan Boundary Award.

A recent correspondent to a Canadian daily newspaper complained that people are taking far more notice of the Reno prize fight than of the adjudications at The Hague. Whereupon the editor calmly assured the writer and all his other readers as well that The Hague has been sitting for a long while and the prize fight lasts only a few rounds; furthermore, that humanity is at heart a savage, loving a fight and not caring a continental about intercontinental disputes which are supposed to be settled as quietly as possible by experts whom the people pay for that sort of thing.

As a naive sequel to which we append the following clip from Punch: "A dear, old lady having read of the intended fight between Jeffries and Johnson is said to have cabled to America begging them rather to lay the matter in dispute before The Hague Tribunal."

THE WORD "GOWN."

It First Came Into Use In the Fourteenth Century.

Female costume in the tenth century was classical in its simplicity. The women wore long, loose, flowing skirts reaching to the feet and a draped "cote," or upper garment. Chaucer, who died in 1400, when Henry IV. was king, frequently uses the word cote. In the "Canterbury Tales" he depicts the sergeant-at-law as wearing a "medley cote," which no doubt means a coat of many colors, while the miller he describes as wearing "a whyte cote."

It was in the fourteenth century that the word "gown" first came into use. An anonymous author in no mild words finds fault with the fashion of his days. He writes that "the commons were besotted in excess of apparel, in wide surcoats reaching to their loyns, some in a garment reaching to their heels, close before and strowting out on the side, so that on the back they make men seem women, and these they call by a ridiculous name—gown."

As early as the twelfth century women's cotes were made with trains, and in the first quarter of the thirteenth century a bishop moralizes early on their vanity for wearing trained cotes, some of which contained seven ells and a half."—Westminster Gazette.

Wisdom

The owl is generally regarded as the symbol of wisdom, and certainly with his goggled eyes he looks wise.

Spectacles do not always make the wearer wise, but wise people always wear spectacles when they need them.

They realize that to postpone their use is a fight against nature, an uneven contest. Glasses that are correctly fitted are a constant source of pleasure; they cost but a trifle more and often not as much as those purchased from irresponsible vendors.

Take chances with ill-fitting shoes or clothes if you must, and lose your money But with ill-fitting glasses you risk not only your money but your eyesight as well. Be eye-wise. Do not take chances with nature's greatest blessing and fill your life with regret. Consultation free.

C. N. R. is Making Very Rapid Strides

NEW RAILROAD MAKING GOOD PROGRESS ON CONSTRUCTION WORK.

The Brighton Ensign says:— Last fall when grading was commenced on the survey route of the C. N. R. here, predictions were made that passenger trains would be running this fall to the Toronto Exhibition over the line, while others were of the opinion that the fall of 1911 would be the earliest that passenger traffic would be in effect on the new road.

Though no passenger trains are running, track-laying has been so far proceeded with that two engines are in continuous use on the new road hauling rails and other construction materials.

A few weeks ago the laying of the steel was started a little west of the town and was extended to the cut near C. A. Reddick's place east of the town. Work was then proceeded with to the west, and the new line is now within a mile of Colborne.

Day and night the gangs are at work unloading rails, putting in switches and doing numerous parts of the work. As yet the track presents a very uneven appearance, as no ballasting has been done. The construction materials are being brought in over the G. T. R. and are switched on the C. N. R. track west of the town.

A water tank is being built at Colborne and the site for the station is being made ready for construction of the building. During the past six months the C. N. R. have assumed control of over 250 miles of railway in Eastern Ontario, including 160 miles of the Central Ontario Railway

Children's Aid Ward Was Taken Away.

Some seven months ago Rosa Brooks, a girl 15 years of age, who was a ward of the Children's Aid Shelter in this city, was placed in a foster home here. The girl, who was both active and bright was much esteemed by the family who adopted her. The family in question have for the past few days been camping along the bay shore on the Front of Sidney. Yesterday four parties in a rig drove up near to the camp, and Rosa, who was near by, was called to the vehicle. She was immediately picked up placed in the conveyance and driven away. It has been learned that at least two of the parties were relatives of the girl. The affair will no doubt prove to be not only an expensive one but probably a sorry one of the perpetrators, as legal proceedings have already been taken to recover the child and return her to those who adopted her.

Two Girls Return

Myrtle Bird and Vivian Young, the two girls who last week ran away from the Children's Aid Shelter here have been found and returned to the home. They were found at homes near the village of Campbellford. It was ascertained that the girls had succeeded in reaching that section of the community by getting rides and walking parts of the way.

Fire in Rossmore.

At an early hour this morning a frame dwelling situated in the village of Rossmore, Prince Edward County, was, with its contents, destroyed by fire. The dwelling was owned by Mr Jesse Joyce, whose home is in Troy N. Y., The owner came here yesterday with the intention of occupying the premises for some time. How the fire originated is not known. Mr Joyce had some insurance upon the house and contents, but by no means sufficient to cover the loss.

The Last Sad Rites.

The funeral of the late Mr. A. Downey took place this morning from the family residence, Church st. At the house services were conducted by the Rev. R. C. Blagrave, rector of Christ church, and Mr. C. D. Dyke on behalf of the Masonic fraternity, of which deceased was a member. The remains were taken to Napanee for interment. A number of Masons were in attendance at the obsequies.

CANADIAN NATIONAL BENCH SHOWS.

Prize lists for the Bench Show at the Canadian National Exhibition are now being distributed. There is an excellent range of premiums in every department and as the territory is limited because of the muzzling legislation, and the entry price has been reduced it is expected that there will be an immense show of local dogs.

The entries close on August 15, with Dr. J. O. Orr, Manager and Secretary, City Hall, Toronto.

Results in Junior Matriculation.

Toronto, Aug. 8.—The junior matriculation examinations have been issued. The list contains the names of three classes of candidates, arranged in three separate groups—A, B and C—under each county.

In group A are given the names of all candidates who have obtained complete junior matriculation by passing on the eleven required examination papers which are as follows:—English composition, English literature, history (ancient and British Canadian), algebra, goemetry, Latin authors, Latin composition, together with the four papers in two of the following subjects: Experimental Science (physics and chemistry), French (authors and composition), German (authors and composition), Greek (authors and composition).

In group B are given the names of those who have passed in at least eight of the papers required for complete matriculation. The have, therefore, failed in not more than three of the required papers. The papers in which these candidates have failed will be shown on their certificates. They have complete matriculation by passing in all the remaining papers at one subsequent examination.

In group C are given the names of those who have written upon any number of matriculation papers less than the eleven required for complete matriculation and who have passed on all papers upon which they have written. In this list will be found the names of successful candidates who have written only on those papers required for matriculation into the faculty of applied science or into the Ontario College of Pharmacy.

Normal entrance candidates who were also candidates for matriculation have been considered in the above results. The names of such candidates if successful in obtaining complete matriculation, are included in group A. Candidates who have failed on Normal entrance papers, but who have passed in the additional matriculation papers taken, are reported in group C.

The certificates of the successful candidates and the statement of marks of those who failed will be sent to the Principals of the High Schools and Collegiate Institutes, or to the Public School Inspectors, in about a week. Candidates will apply to these officials not to the department, for the reports in detail.

Following are the successful candidates in Hastings and Prince Edward Counties:

G. T. R. Conductors Must Now Dress up.

COMPANY WILL EXPECT THIS AS A RESULT OF HIGHER PAY — NO MORE CELLULOID COLLARS.

Ottawa, Aug. 8—Incident with the settlement of the strike of the conductors and brakeman on the Grand Trunk Railway and the increase in wages to the men, comes the news that the road will, as a result, require the men in the passenger branch of the service to pay more attention to their personal appearance and dress.

"Now that conductors are getting pay equal to many professional men" says Supt. Donaldson, "they will be expected to live up to the position they occupy, as to their conduct, manner of living, and personal appearance In the past the Company has been lenient to men with large families but now that the increased scale is in force we will expect an improvement in conditions. Our men will have to dress up to their positions, present a natty appearance and be clean shaven when they report for duty One of the horrors of the railroad is the celluloid collar."

American Visitors Had to Go Hungry.

Chatham, Ont., August 8.—On Sunday over 500 Americans came over by boat to Chatham to visit friends. They arrived here at two o'clock nearly famished for something to eat, but owing to the strict enforcement of the Lord's Day Act in this city, they were unable to get dinner anywhere.

It was too late for the hotels and the restaurants were all closed.

The visitors could not get even ice cream and cake to appease their hunger.

Many of the Americans went away swearing it would be a long time before they would visit Canada on a Sunday again.

CAUGHT CRESTED EAGLETS.

Winnipeg Men Capture Rare Birds After Hard Fight.

The crested eagle, the finest bird of prey in North America, which has practically disappeared from the most inaccessible recesses of isolated sections of the remote Northwest, supplied incidents the other day of a thrilling story in which two Winnipeg men figured. In a wild spot along the National Transcontinental Railway, some miles east of Winnipeg, Wm. Carter and Fred Logan, while hunting, discovered two great birds circling overhead. They followed them, and observed a nest high in the top of a great tree. When they approached the location the birds swooped down upon them. The ferocity of the attack convinced the hunters that they had to deal with eagles of the crested variety, and that there were eaglets in the nest.

The hunters carried rifles and prepared to rob the nest. While one took up a position where he could command the nest with his gun, the other climbed a tree. Twenty shots were fired at the birds as they swooped and screamed around the tree. Logan got near enough to the nest to see that it contained the young birds, but because of the ferocity of the parent birds they gave up the attempt, determined to make another trip. The male eagle followed them for a mile, threatening every moment to come to close quarters with the hunters in spite of their repeated efforts to shoot him.

A week later, equipped with ropes and tools, they returned to the spot, and were again met with a fierce assault. In spite of many shots the eagles fought fiercely, but the eaglets were finally secured. Then the hunters began their retreat, alternately dodging and firing at the two great parent birds. For five miles the eagles continued their attack, and at times came to very close quarters with the hunters. Only when the inhabited sections were approached did the eagles give up the fight. The eaglets are now in care of St. Boniface College. They are rare specimens, and though only a few weeks old, display the ferocity of their species.

Why Americans Flock to Canada.

As a result of speculation, land values have increased from 100 to 1,000 per cent. in different parts of the United States. Acreage that was unsalable ten or twelve years ago at $2 an acre is now commanding $10 to $15, and improved farm land has gone from $50 to $100 an acre to $200 and $350. Fruit lands are commanding as high as $3,000 and $4,000 an acre. The direct effect of land speculation and inflated values of land is emigration. This has assumed serious proportions in the Northwest. Pioneers and settlers of five and ten years ago have been driven across the border into Canada to land still reasonable in price and soil virgin in richness. Last year 60,000 people went over the line. They took an average of $1,000 with them. This sum of $60,000,000 subtracted from the wealth of the United States in one twelve months' period is significant. Now emigration is even heavier than in 1909. It is so great, in fact, that it demands the services of special trains to accommodate it. It is estimated that 150,000 American farmers will, this year, abandon the high-priced lands of the middle west and northwest for the reasonable-priced acres of the Dominion. With production of American staple products not much in excess of home consumption, and the margin decreasing, the loss of this number of producers is of great consequence to the United States.—Moody's Magazine.

Canadian Sculptor's Work.

A few months ago at the annual exhibition of the Canadian Art Club in Toronto and Montreal were seen two working models of tigers by Mr. A. Phimister Proctor, the noted sculptor, who although a resident of New York, is a Canadian by birth and sentiment. He was born at Bosanquet in Lambton County, and his lively sentiment as a Canadian is shown by his interest in the club in question. According to The New York Herald, Mr. Proctor has completed six bronze tigers. Two of these will go to Princeton University, of which the tiger is the symbol, and the other four to the city of Washington. The work has just been finished at Mr. Proctor's atelier, 97 Sixth avenue, New York, and the casting by the Gorham Company is about to commence.

Mr. Proctor has been a sculptor of animals of all kinds for many years. The bronze panther which Col. Roosevelt's tennis cabinet presented to him just prior to his departure for Africa was his work, and a picture shows him at work on a head for the elephant house in the New York Zoological Gardens. It is to be hoped that some day some of his remarkable work will adorn his native land.

Bank Clerks Inadequately Paid.

There's a shortage of bank clerks, and a Montreal bank is adopting the expedient of employing women for minor positions. Within the past few years some of the banks have brought out young Scotchmen to fill the gap.

But the trouble seems to be the inadequate salaries paid to young men to adopt banking as their vocation. There has been an improvement in this direction, but the increases have not kept pace with the cost of living.

Hundreds of young men are resigning from employment in banks to go into farming, and they are adopting other pursuits offering greater advantages in the way of salary.

After ten years' service in a bank and reaching the responsible position of teller, a young man may be rewarded with a salary of $1,000 a year.

Surely this is inadequate. Many of the tellers are required to handle millions of dollars a day for $1,200 a year and even less money. The "honorarium" of a bricklayer or a plumber is even more princely.

Considering the heavy responsibilities of a teller's position he is entitled to a fair share of the dividends of a banking business.—Toronto World.

Old "Con" Game Reappears.

Toronto, Aug. 9.—Once more the ancient game of the dropped hundred dollar bill was worked by a short young man of 22 years of age, dressed in a blue suit and wearing a straw hat, at the Union Station Sunday morning. Yesterday the victim complained to the police and turned in the bill, a valueless Confederate $100 bill. The police are looking for the shaper.

The young man and the other reached for the bill, which lay on the station waiting-room floor. They reached simultaneously, but the "mark" landed the property. The other put a proposition to share up, and the mark gave over $20 and kept the bill. He was to give $35 more yesterday, but the young man did not turn up.

Last week, in West Queen street, $20 was got by a man answering the same description, who sought change for two tens and gave the bogus hundred to another apparently in mistake.

A Narrow Escape.

St. Catharines, Aug. 9.—Thomas Rees is the hero of a narrow escape from electrocution. He was engaged in emptying oil from a tank car on the Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto Railway. To see how much oil remained in the tank, he called for an iron rod. Standing on top of the tank, he raised the rod to thrust it down into the tank. The rod came in contact with a trolley wire and there was a blaze around the tank.

The rod was wrested from Rees' hand and thrown several feet to one side, striking a colored man named Allegood, burning a hole in his clothing and inflicting a severe burn on his thigh. The hose used for drawing off oil from the tank was burned. Mr. Rees was not thrown from the top of the tank, and only felt a slight shock as the electricity passed from the rod to the tank.

Fighting In Formosa.

Victoria, Aug. 9—Fighting continues in Formosa, according to advices received here from China, and popular subscriptions are being collected to supply the Japanese troops with comforts, five-cent contributions being taken by the Japanese newspapers.

July 28 the Japanese forces captured Shinarek, the mountain objective, where it was planned to place artillery dominating the rebel position. The Japanese were driven back twice.

On one occasion the Formosans lay hidden in tall grass until the Japanese were within ten yards and then poured in a disastrous fire. The Japanese shortly afterwards took advantage of a storm from which the head-hunters took shelter. The advance resulted in the capture of several strong positions.

Seaforth Spending Money.

Seaforth, Aug. 9.—The town of Seaforth passed three very important bylaws yesterday with large majorities. The bylaw to guarantee the bonds of the Bell Engine & Thresher Co. for $50,000 for thirty years carried by a large majority, 387 for and 38 against.

The two bylaws providing for the acceptance of the hydro-electric power and the raising of $25,000 for the installation of an electric light and power system were carried by a practically unanimous vote, 379 to 42 in the former and 354 to 53 in the latter case.

Hauled Down Yankee Flag.

Brockville, Aug. 9.—Workmen have completed the erection of the 110-foot chimney for the new electric station. The last man to leave the top left two small Union Jacks and a fair-sized Stars and Stripes floating to the breeze. One of the first to discover the latter was Councillor Osborne, who with others made complaint to the mayor. The result was that the Yankee flag was replaced with an extra large Union Jack.

Fell Down Mine Shaft.

Cobalt, Aug. 9.—Peter Rickett, single, aged 23, was seriously injured in No. 5 slope on the first level of the Buffalo mine, when he fell 30 feet down the airway. Rickett mistook the airway for the manway and fell the entire distance to the drift. He landed on his feet, but fell to the ground heavily, striking his back on the track. The doctors report favorable hopes for his recovery.

Jumped From Wireless Tower.

EXIT THE REDMAN.

The Indians of West Selkirk Must Go Farther Into the Wilds.

There was a day when the town of West Selkirk, pitched out in the fertile valley of the Red River, was the pioneer West in epitome—shacks, traders, saloons, and Indians. Its picturesqueness has gone out with the wheat. There are still a few shacks—more stores and banks; traders there are, calling themselves business men, not bartering, but selling for cash; the whisky is still there in tall gleaming bottles sold at long bars by white-aproned drawers. The last vestige of raw Selkirk went out recently when the redmen, Crees and Sauteaux moved their camp.

The passing of these Indians of Selkirk is the same story as that of the Songhees in Victoria, who have got orders to leave their happy hunting grounds because the simple life they exemplify in the middle of the jumping British Columbia town does not agree with the live ethics of the city fathers. The benevolent white gentlemen of Selkirk have come to the same conclusion. They have discovered that their whisky and other vicious traits are bad for primitive natures; so 1,200 remnants of warriors have been told to close up their whitewashed cabins, pack up their tepees at St. Peter's, from which reserve for many moons they have seen Fate whistling close by on the shrieking railway, and beat their way to Fisher River, a stream far off on Lake Winnipeg. The young chieftains have set their faces toward Canaan. But the wrinkled, royal bloods of the Crees live with the memories of the tomahawk—the freebooting days. The mighty grandson of Apechaneon, friend of Pontiac and Tecumseth, sorrows in his wigwam and drones: "The Indian knew no reserve, no confines then." The venerable Thomas Bunyan, patting his Victorian medal, is alive with anecdote, tale-telling to the wondering youths around his campfire, of the Battle of Seven Oaks and the prodigies of valor performed therein, and the butchery of Governor Semple—ninety-four years ago. Readily recalls William Ashum, second chief of the reserve, the bullets singing in the Black Hills, the massacres in Minnesota, and Senator Sutherland's son shot by sneaking marksmen on the Kildonan trail sent out by the half-breed Riel.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Hogs and Cattle in Active Demand—Prices Slightly Improved.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 8.—John Rogers and Co.'s despatch to-day said that prices held firm in Birkenhead at Saturday's quotations, which were: For Canadian steers, from 14c to 14¾c, and for ranch steers, from 12½c to 13¾c per pound.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, Aug. 8.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards on Monday were heavy, namely, 139 cars, comprising 2928 cattle, 83 hogs, 72 calves and 220 sheep.

Exporters.

Despite the larger supply of exporters, they were in good demand, and prices ranged on the average from $5.70 to $6.50. It was reported that an odd lot had reached $6.70, but this was regarded as for an exceedingly select sample, and was sold by Mr. McIntosh of the firm of Gordon & Ironsides.

Butchers.

Butcher cattle were in good demand, and the price was not shaded from that of a week ago, notwithstanding the weaker undertone to the exporters. Steers and heifers of average weight sold at about $5.80.

Milkers and Springers.

The offering of these cattle was not in large volume, and prices held steady. Good milkers were quoted at $60 each.

Veal Calves.

Calves were in fair demand, particularly those of the higher grade, some of which reached as high as 8¼c per lb.

Sheep and Lambs.

Prices for sheep and lambs were steady, one firm taking practically all of those consigned to the market.

Hogs.

Hogs were unchanged, at $8.40 f.o.b. and $8.75 fed and watered. There were only 83 on the market, and these were in transhipment to Montreal.

Montreal Live Stock.

Montreal, Aug. 8.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Aug. 6 were 1300 cattle, 1700 sheep and lambs, 1050 hogs and 425 calves. The offerings on the market this morning amounted to 950 cattle, 715 sheep and lambs, 600 hogs and 200 calves.

Choice steers sold at 6c to 6¼c; good at 5½c to 5¾c; fairly good at 5c to 5¼c; fair at 4½c to 4¾c, and common at 4c to 4¼c per lb. Some good cows brought as high as 5c, and the lower grades from that down to 3c, while good bulls sold at 5¼c per lb.

The run of hogs was smaller. Top prices were 15c per 100 lbs. lower than last Wednesday. Sales of selected lots were made at $9.50 to $9.60 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

A feature of the market for small meats is the continued good demand for export account. Prices have advanced ¼c per lb., with sales of picked lots at 4c, and the culls are selling to butchers at 3½c to 3¾c per lb. There was no change in the market for lambs, prices being steady under a good demand at $3.50 to $5.25 each. Calves are somewhat scarce and wanted at prices ranging from $3 to $12 each.

At the Canadian Pacific live stock market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Aug. 6 were 363 cattle for export account, and 2100 cattle, 1550 sheep and lambs, 751 hogs and 675 hogs for local consumption. The supply on the market this morning for sale consisted of 550 cattle, 225 sheep and lambs, 100 hogs and 100 calves.

The trade in cattle was rather slow. Choice steers sold at 6c; good at 5½c to 5¾c; fairly good at 5c to 5¼c; fair at 4½c to 4¾c, and common at 4c to 4¼c per lb. Cows brought from 3¾c to 5c, and bulls sold at 3c to 5c per lb.

The market for sheep was stronger. Prices were ¼c per lb. higher, with sales of picked lots at 4c, and culls at 3½c to 3¾c per lb. Lambs were also rather scarce, and prices show an advance of 25c at $3.75 to $5.50 each. The offerings of calves were small and prices ruled firm, at from $3 to $12 each.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier received a rousing welcome at Edmonton.

Two boys were drowned at Golden Grove, near St. John, N.B., yesterday

John Gentles, a well-known horseman and real estate dealer of Kincardine, is dead.

An express train struck an automobile near Cape May, N.J., and five persons were killed.

A long series of lawsuits have been entered or threatened in connection with the Milette charges in Montreal.

Joseph Rogers, superintendent of provincial police, opened an inquest at Midland into the series of recent fires there.

Chief Tremblay of the Montreal fire brigade mentions forty-five persons on account of special bravery in his report on The Herald fire.

Albert Rochon, who uncoupled a locomotive from a G.T.R. passenger train at Montreal during the strike, was sent to jail for six months.

Western Problems.

Victoria, Aug. 10.—Among the important western problems which will come before the general conference of the Methodist Church, which opens here on Aug. 14, will be the readjustment of the boundaries of the western conference. At present three districts, all in the confines of the Province of Manitoba, Brandon, Souris and Virden, belong to the Saskatchewan conference. It is felt that the three districts ought to belong to the Manitoba conference. This will make the Manitoba conference, which also includes New Ontario as far east as Port Arthur, a little unwieldly, and the suggestion is made to divide the Manitoba conference into two.

The Alberta conference has also passed a resolution asking that it be divided into northern and southern, with headquarters at Calgary and Edmonton. The three prairie provinces also want a western missionary executive.

The Price of Eloquence.

The auctioneer held up a battered fiddle.

"What am I offered for this antique violin?" he pathetically inquired. "Look it over. See the blurred finger marks of remorseless time. Note the stains of the hurrying years. To the merry notes of this fine old instrument the brocaded dames of fair France may have danced the minuet in glittering Versailles. Perhaps the vestal virgins marched to its stirring rhythms in the feasts of Lupercalia. Ha, it bears an abrasion—perhaps a touch of fire. Why, this may have been the very fiddle on which Nero played when Rome burned."

"Thirty cents," said a red nosed man in the front row.

"It's yours!" cried the auctioneer cheerfully. "What next?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A South Arabian Food Plant.

Jowari, a tall, slender plant resembling corn and headed with a grain something like millet, is the Abdali's chief crop. He feeds the stalk to his camels and eats the grain himself. Three crops a year are produced. Jowari requires little cultivation except weeding, which the Abdali does by hand, and when ripe he cuts it off close to the ground with his hunting knife. New shoots spring up from the roots to become the next crop. For a camel load of about 125 pounds he receives at Aden an average of two rupees, or $64.88. A fair yearly yield is twenty camel loads an acre.—Consular and Trade Reports.

A Severe Test of Affection.

He—Is there anything I can do to prove my affection so that you will not doubt it?

She—There is. Marry my sister. She is older than I, and mamma is determined not to let me marry till my sister is disposed of.

Fishy.

"I can't see why men like to get up early and go fishing," says Mrs. Malaprop. "Now, my husband is a regular anglomaniac—I mean, he's a debauchee to the episgatory art. Huh? Why, he's an apostle of old Izaak Newton himself!"

Depends Upon Ourselves.

Victoria, Aug. 10.—"The success or otherwise of the Canadian navy depends wholly upon the Canadian people. If they set out to make a navy they can do it, but if they are half-hearted the plan will not amount to anything. The movement of Canada in this respect is being watched by the whole world."

This was the statement made by Rear-Admiral Lyon of the royal navy, who is returning from China, where he has command of the China station. Discussing the Canadian action further, Admiral Lyon said the navy did not depend upon legislation, but upon the men and brains that were put into it. With times so good as they were in Canada at the present time he felt that it would be difficult to get young men to enter the navy as a profession.

Fisheries Arbitration.

London, Aug. 10.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—At The Hague yesterday Mr. Root pointed out that the treaty of 1818 contained restrictions on the use of banks for drying and salting fish on landing on those shores where America renounced the fishing rights. No mention was made on the treaty of any restrictions as regards the fishing coasts of Labrador and Newfoundland. For sixty years Britain had recognized this liberty to fish could not be restricted by any regulations drawn up by Britain. In 1878, after the incident at Fortune Bay, Lord Salisbury positively declared British sovereignty limited by the treaty of 1818, which could not be modified or affected by any ulterior colonial legislation.

It is expected the speeches will be concluded by Thursday or Friday.

More Northerly Route.

Ottawa, Aug. 10.—A. W. Campbell, Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals, yesterday heard the application for approval of the route map of the Canadian Northern, Calgary and Edmonton branch, to Bazeau River, through Red Deer. A portion of the line from Stewartwyn to the eastern boundary of range 25 was approved. From there on the Department asked that the railway make enquiry as to the feasibility of locating a northern route, via Lacombe, to Rocky Mountain House. In respect to the present proposed route, it was pointed out that Red Deer is already served by the Alberta Central, and a more northerly line would open up a new country.

Race Costs Him His Life.

Toronto, Aug. 10.—Over-zealousness in a window-cleaning race with his partner resulted in a fatal drop of five storeys for Harry Warnes yesterday afternoon.

He was an Englishman, 19 years old, and had been in Canada three and a half years. He was cleaning the outside of a window on the fifth floor of the Andrew Darling building on Spadina avenue, but had neglected, it is said, to secure himself with a rope, because he wanted to beat out his partner, Wallace Graham, who was similarly engaged on another window.

Ratepayers Apathetic.

Orillia, Aug. 10.—Because 896 votes were required to be polled and only 771 turned out, the bylaw granting tax exemption to the Canada Refining and Smelting Co. was defeated. The matter may be taken before the private bills committee of the Legislature next session.

A Monster Parade.

Chicago, Aug. 10.—There began in Chicago yesterday the greatest parade of Knights Templar ever witnessed in the history of the order. Every knight attending the thirty-first triennial conclave who could get into line, was there.

The Right Hon. Henry James, Earl of Euston, cousin of King George of England, and most imminent supreme pro-grand master of the great priory of England and Wales, waited beside the line, attired in his full regalia as head of British Templary, to review the followers of the red cross. Farther on Mayor Busse was saluted and still further Governor Deneen acknowledged the tribute of flashing steel.

Homicide's Wife Dead.

Brockville, Aug. 10.—An almost direct result of the murder of Nathan Bolton by his cousin Albert Holmes near Cardinal on April 21 last was the death of the wife of the homicide, which occurred in the hospital here after a lengthy illness. Mrs. Holmes was in poor health at the time of the tragedy, which so completely unnerved her as to hurry on the [illegible]

The news of her demise was conveyed to the husband in his cell by his only daughter and the scene was a most affecting one. Holmes, who is a physical wreck, and broods constantly over his crime, could hardly bear up under the strain.

BROUGHT BACK TO LIFE

Little Boy Resuscitated After Hope Was Gone.

Lad of Two Near Mount Elgin Fell Into Water Tank — Was Almost Dead When Discovered by His Brother, Who Was Sent For a Pail of Water—Physician's Hard Work Saved Him.

Ingersoll, Aug. 10.—When discovered by chance at the bottom of a large water tank in the barnyard of his father's farm, Louis Vyse, the two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Vyse, who reside near Mount Elgin was believed to be dead. The child's face had already turned black, and there was scarcely a sign indicating that he was alive. A local physician was summoned by telephone, and he made a rapid trip to the Vyse farm by auto. Although the family had practically given up all hope of the boy's life being saved, the physician worked heroically for over an hour and succeeded in resuscitating the child, who is expected to recover. The strange feature of the accident is that no one knows how long the child was in the water, he had not been missed, and was discovered when his brother went for a pail of water. There were about eighteen inches of water in the tank. The child is supposed to have climbed on top of the boards which were laid over the tank, and to have fallen through them.

Exciting Race In Air.

Nancy, France, Aug. 10.—Leblanc and Aubrun again led the van in yesterday's leg of the cross-country aeroplane race. The second section of the flight was from Troyes to Nancy, a distance of 165 kilometres, or approximately 102 5-10 miles.

The race between the leaders was an exciting one. Aubrun started five minutes earlier than Leblanc, and the air men were within sight of each other until they landed here. Leblanc's machine proved the swifter and he gradually overhauled the other, reaching the goal thirty seconds ahead of his rival.

Both men used Bleriot monoplanes and steered by compass, checking their position from the flags which had been places on the church steeples in the villages over which fires that marked the course over the country stretches.

Both Leblanc and Auburn traveled with an average height of about 1,600 feet. They were badly shaken by the air eddies over the forest of Toul, west of this city. Leblanc's time was 2 hours 14 min. 59 secs. and Aubrun's was 2 hours 20 mins. 29 secs.

M. Leganeux was the only other contestant who arrived here without having made a stop.

McNulty Blamed.

Orillia, Aug. 10.—The coroner's jury on the body of the baby found on Blackberry Island, Lake Couchiching, for the murder of which Thomas McNulty and Mary Dolan have been committed to stand their trial at Barrie in September, have handed out their verdict. They place the onus of the whole affair on McNulty and express themselves in no uncertain language.

Their verdict says in part: "We wish to express our strongest condemnation of the part taken by Thomas McNulty in the murder of the child, but recommend that all possible mercy should be shown Mary Dolan, as we are of the opinion that she was mentally deranged and not accountable for her deeds."

No International Conference.

Washington, Aug. 10.—Former President Roosevelt's proposition to make conservation a world-wide movement by a conference of nations is pronounced officially by the State Department to be dead. Of forty-nine Governments represented diplomatically on the Washington committee, which were invited just before the former President went out of office, to join the movement, only nineteen have replied. The answers of some of the Governments were of such a disinterested character that it was officially decided to carry the proposal no further.

A Fatal Fire In New Town.

Kindersley, Sask., Aug. 10.—Fire, which broke out shortly after midnight in Lynn's restaurant, caused the death of the proprietor, J. C. Lynn, who perished in an effort to save a child, whom he thought had not been got out. The restaurant and I. E. Hahn's gent's furnishings store were totally destroyed, and only the hard efforts of citizens saved further loss.

Railway Heads at Stratford.

Stratford, Aug. 10.—President Hays and the chairman of the board of directors, A. W. Smithers, of the G.T.R., and party arrived here last evening. An inspection of the company's big shops and other premises will occupy their attention in the morning, after which they will proceed to Sarnia, to take boat for Fort William.

Disobedience Caused Wreck.

Ignacio, Cal., Aug. 10—Disobedience of orders, according to the railroad officials, on the part of a conductor was responsible for a head-on collision between a passenger and a freight train on the Northwest Pacific last Monday night, that took a known toll of 11 lives and resulted in the injury of about 20.

Bourassa and some of his admirers are still denouncing the Laurier naval policy. At St. Hyacinthe, the other day, he declared it as "being un-Canadian, un-Liberal and contrary to the past principles of every political party of the Dominion."

A Dr. William Henry Graham, of Toronto, died, and left a will in which he declared that "I desire that my productive property be retained in my estate unsold, as long as my wife, Margaret Graham, remains my respectable widow." The moment she ceases to be "respectable" the estate goes to the children, but he does not provide for a judge as to her respectability. He had an eye, however, to her future for he further provides that "In case my wife remarries then she is to receive $300, but shall then have no further interest in or control over my estate, and in that event I will and bequeath to the man whom she then marries, the sum of $25." Who will say this man was not a loving husband in providing so lavishly for the loved one's future husband.

Like sensible men the members of the city council are not above taking a little advice. Let us hope the City Fathers may obtain data and information which will lead to improvement in street conditions in Belleville.

The report that a large pile of ties was placed on the G. T. R. track about three miles west of here last night is unwelcome and disquieting. Let us hope that the perpetrators of the foul deed, whoever they are, may be brought to justice.

No Christians Need Apply.

(Singapore, Straits Settlements, Free Press.)

It is a fact often remarked upon by visitors to the East that no European in the East will, if he can possibly avoid it, employ a native Christian as a domestic servant, and in the Ceylon papers one sometimes sees an advertisement with the words "No Christians need apply." Now this state of affairs is creditable neither to the missionaries the Europeans nor the native Christians and it has often given food to thought to serious minds. In the June issue of the Ceylon Churchman the Rev. N. L. Keith gives the missionary's explanation. He carries the war into the enemies camp, so to speak, when he quotes Dr. Knight, Bishop of Rangoon, as declaring that the average households of the Europeans in the East are of so irreligious a character that no earnest missionary will allow any of his native Christian converts to accept domestic service in them. As a result the Christians who do take service in European households are generally ones who have been excommunicated, turned out, and cut off from their church, and, in general, as big scoundrels as can be found. Hence "No Christians need apply." The explanation, though not new, is ingenious; but is, we consider, a poor and not altogether creditable way of disposing of what really involves a serious charge brought against missionaries and of the results of the work they do under divine guidance. (P.G.) "How many missionaries and clergymen rely on Christians solely for the service of their houses?"

Canadian Northern's Route Through City.

WHERE THE ROAD WILL RUN AND THOSE WHO OWN THE PROPERTY AFFECTED.

In the County Registry office in this city there has been deposited a plan, profile and book of reference locating the route of the Canadian Northern Railway through this city. The plan shows that the commencement of the railway into the city will be on lot 41, owned by Mr. W. N. Ponton, just north of the city pump house. It then passes northerly of the bay shore to a point near Dundas street, thence along near Holton's Mill crossing the river Moira just north of Victoria Park. The direction then is somewhat southeasterly until near the rolling mills, when the line will run directly east. It passes north of the rolling mills and then eastward, being south of the hospital near the bay shore.

The railway will, in its course through the city, pass through properties owned by the following:

THE DRAGOON COTILLION

Horses and Men in the New Dance Arranged for Canadian National Exhibition.

During the past few weeks the people of the various parts of Ontario have seen the troopers of the Royal Canadian Dragoons on duty for the preservation of law and order at points affected by the Grand Trunk strike. At the coming Canadian National Exhibition they will have an opportunity of seeing them in a more attractive guise when picked riders will execute in front of the grand stand the beautiful and intricate figures of "The Dragoon Cotillion." This embraces all the picturesque and complicated figures of the statliest of old-fashioned dances. As the cotillion reaches its climax the movements contain a puzzling complexity out of which horses and riders extricate themselves in a most graceful and precise manner. The spectacle in daylight as the red coated horsemen perform their evolutions with set lances and bannerettes fluttering in the breeze is beautiful in the extreme, but it does not equal in any sense the exquisite picture at night when each lance point is tipped with an electric light. This episode is invariably greeted, with their riders, with applause by the thousands who nightly visit the Canadian National Exhibition.

TWO STOCK DEALS.

Sherwood Took Flood's Boast and Later Handed It Back.

In Joseph L. King's "History of the San Francisco Stock and Exchange Board" is this story of Flood and Sherwood:

In the early days, in the seventies, quite a number of operators would gather together in Cahill's office on Montgomery street, near California. Among them were Mr. James C. Flood and Mr. Robert Sherwood. Sherwood had 1,000 Consolidated Virginia, the stock selling at about $100. One day Sherwood, on looking at the prices, remarked that he was getting tired of that Consolidated Virginia; it did not move much. Mr. Flood said: "What are you growling about? If you are tired of that stock I will take it off your hands at $100." "Sold," said Sherwood, and the stock changed hands.

In course of time the Nevada bank building was erected on the corner of Pine and Montgomery streets. On meeting Sherwood one day Mr. Flood remarked, "We built that Nevada block on the profits of that 1,000 shares of Consolidated Virginia you sold us."

Subsequently, in the Sierra Nevada and Union deal, Mr. Flood approached Sherwood on the street and bought from him 5,000 Union at $200 a share, the transaction footing up $1,000,000.

Sherwood built the Union block, on the gore corner of Pine, Davis and Market streets. Meeting Flood one day, he remarked, "I built that Union block with the profits of that 5,000 Union I sold you."

Breaking It Gently.

Simpkins always was soft hearted, and when it devolved upon him to break the news gently of Jones' drowning to the bereaved Mrs. Jones it cost him much paper, ink and perspiration before he sent the following:

"Dear Mrs. Jones—Your husband cannot come home to-day because his bathing suit was washed away.

"P. S.—Poor Jones was inside the suit."

Imperishable.

"Do you think it a wise thing to send a boy away to college, Binks?" asked Rippleton.

"Oh, yes," replied Binks. "Teaches him independence."

"But doesn't he get out of touch with home influence?" persisted Rippleton.

"Not altogether," said Binks. "He gets away from the home influences, but the 'touch' goes on forever."

Shell Coated Trees.

Whole forests may be seen coated with shelly substances in New Holland. These incrustations are supposed to arise from decompositions of shellfish, which, transported by the winds, are deposited in the form of dust on trees and plants.

Ants and the Weather.

Ants are credited with an instinctive knowledge of the general weather for a whole season. When they are observed at midsummer enlarging and strengthening their dwellings it is said to be a sign of an early and cold winter.

Precocious Youth.

Mother—What's baby crying about, Jane?

Nurse—I don't know, ma'am, unless it was what the parlor maid said. She remarked that Willie locked like his pa, and I'm afraid Willie heard her.

Laurier's Free Trade Record

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has been telling the farmers of the West how firm a free trader he is. That is the sort of talk which he used in great profusion in 1896, when the Liberal party was out of power. The line which he took was to talk free trade in public and seek to convince all the low tariff elements that he was a convinced free trader; then, just before the election, to assure the manufacturers that they had nothing to fear should the Liberal party come into power. The word could fly about through a small number of manufacturers almost at once, while the change of front would not be grasped by the great masses of persons to whom he had avowed his free trade ideals. The election took place on June 23rd. On June 2nd, just three weeks before it, Mr. Laurier as he then was, addressed a letter to Mr. George H. Bertram of Toronto, designed to placate the manufacturers. Here are some sentences from it:—

"The intention of the Liberal party is not and never was to establish absolute free trade in this country."

"The question was discussed at Ottawa but, after anxious consideration, while fully recognizing the superiority of the British system of freedom of trade as an abstract principle, the convention came to the conclusion that, under the existing conditions of our country, the fiscal policy best adapted to its requirements, its economic situation, its enormous financial obligations, is a revenue tariff."

"I submit also that apart from the community as a whole, the manufacturers have not only nothing to suffer but much to gain from the substitution of a revenue tariff for the present system."

"Moreover, I think I can confidentially appeal to the experience of the business community, that with the exception of monopolies and combines, all manufacturers interested would welcome a change of policy on the lines I have indicated."

That, then, was Sir Wilfrid Laurier's policy when in Opposition and looking for power. A loud preaching of free "trade as it is in England" to catch the attention of the general community; a quiet hint to manufacturers just before election day that he would be even more favorable to them than the Conservatives had been. By that means he conciliated a good many manufacturers. He got in. What happened?

This is how Sir Wilfrid Laurier has been working for free trade.

1894. Assures the West that he is a free trader.

1896. Just before the election assures the manufacturers that he won't molest them.

1897. Takes over the national policy.

1903. Claps on the Surtax.

1904. Brings in the Anti-Dumping Clause to increase the protection enjoyed by manufacturers.

1907. Increases the 1907 tariff in numerous important particulars.

1896-1910. Gives $15,000,000 in bounties.

1910. Assures the West that he really is a Free Trader all the time, and that he is working gradually toward low duties.

It is a queer sort of gradualness. It involves the retention of the old protective tariff, the invention of new protective devices, the addition of new special duties; the spending of a million a year in bounties, and the increase of many of the duties in the ordinary tariff.

In plain language, Sir Wilfrid Laurier has not advanced towards free trade. His Administration is more protectionist than that which it displaced. The assertion that the Liberal party is one of low tariffs is a piece of utter dishonesty.

Apple Industry Is Flourishing.

ONTARIO'S OUTPUT THIS YEAR WILL BE VERY FAVORABLE.

Toronto, August 9.—The daily press of last week reported that Dr. Crow, of the Ontario Agricultural College, made some adverse comments on Ontario apple orchards at the meeting of the International Apple Shippers' Association. Prof. Crow on his return declared that he was inadequately reported, and that an erroneous impression detrimental to Ontario was taken from his remarks. The Department of Agriculture furnishes figures which show conclusively that this important industry is growing rapidly. According to reports received from nurserymen in the province the following number of fruit trees were sold this spring: Apples, 1,900,000; pears, 225,000; cherries, 279,000; plums 268,000; peaches, 409,000; grapes, 115,000. Practically every tree fit for sale was disposed of for orchard planting and in addition many thousands of trees were imported. As there are practically no apple orchards being cut down there must consequently be a big increase in the number and size of orchards in Ontario.

An orchard survey of various counties in the province is now being made by officers of the department, and these show a decided improvement in the care of trees and fruit in all the important apple-growing sections along the Great Lakes. Spraying is becoming more general and with the organization of co-operative shipping associations, better prices are being realized, which will stimulate further planting of trees.

As to this year's crops, the department has not yet received final reports. Indications are that the crop in the western sections of the province will be very poor, but that in the east will be up to the average. Hence the province as a whole will compare favorably in its output with other sections of the continent.

IN OLD ANNAPOLIS.

Things Were Primitive But Happy In the First Settlement.

Annapolis, formerly Port Royal, was a "garrison town" from the time of its founding by De Monts in 1604, until, in 1853, it ceased to be the capital of the Province of Nova Scotia, and the troops were withdrawn and stationed at Halifax, and is therefor the oldest settlement in Canada.

Just how comfortably the early residents of Annapolis lived, and with how much affluence, is seen in the description given in the writings of M. Dierville, who was in Port Royal about 1699. The town had then been settled over ninety years, and so had arrived to very fair pretentions as a pioneer in the wilderness, although no more progress had been made than was the necessary outcome of an increased immigration.

Of the residents, Dierville says:—"They feed themselves and have surplus to sell. Hemp and flax prosper. Some use no other cloth but homespun. The wool is good, and most of the inhabitants are dressed in their own woollen homespun. Fruits, pulse and garden stuffs are excellent. Provisions are cheap; wheat 40 sous per bushel, the bushel weighs forty-one and one-half pounds; beef is two sous a pound; a pair of chickens, 10 sous; eggs, five sous per dozen; and hares, four sous apiece. (A sous, it may be mentioned, about equals a cent in our currency.) Game plenty. The founders of Port Royal knew the country well before they selected it as their fortress. They had forts at Port La Tour, at Le Have and at Muscoudabout. These all belonged to individuals, and when a good understanding existed amongst them, which was but rarely, they used to come to Port Royal for refreshments. But it is to be remarked that except Port Royal and Le Have, where they cultivated lands and carried on the fisheries, the other posts were only kept up for trading with the savages. Port Royal is, then, the general store of the country, and fortifying it protects Minas also, where corn is now raised, and cattle."

The first Town Council of Annapolis after its final occupation by the English was organized in the spring of 1720 by Governor Phillips. The members of that board were ten in number. The first work of this council was evidently in the line of superintendence of public repairs. The town was in a bad condition according to report of Governor Phillips. When he landed in April he found the place "in as bad a state as was possible to describe, both within and without."

The criminal courts of these early councils were the occasions of decidedly amusing proceedings. The Jean Picot affair and her sentence to "ducking at high water" have become familiar in history, and other sentences to the early offenders of justice were equally strange and ridiculous. In September, 1716, one Robert Nicols was charged with assaulting one of the officers of the garrison, and a court of four councillors found him guilty and passed the following sentence:—

"You being found guilty by H. M. Council for this Province of the crime wherewith thou art charged, the punishment, therefore, inflicted on thee is to sit upon a gallows three days, half an hour each day, with a rope about thy neck, and a paper upon thy breast whereon shall be wrote, in capital letters, "AUDACIOUS VILLAIN," and afterwards thou art to be whipt at a cart's tail from the prison house up to the uppermost house of the Cape, and from thence back again to prison house, receiving each hundred paces five stripes upon your bare back with a cat-of-nine-tails, and then thou are to be turned over for a soldier."

Evidently to be a soldier was not so high an honor as it once had been. Another sentence given in 1732 was that the prisoner should be publicly whipped "at the cart's tail" at four places in the town, and at each place to receive five stripes on his bare back with a cat-o'-nine tails.

Piracy was rampant in Annapolis during the early years of the eighteenth century, and not only was serious damage done to the property by these attacks, but the onslaughts were usually accompanied with loss of life. There was thus a large element of precariway towards the prosperity with malcontents on every hand spreading dissatisfaction and alarm.

In August, 1781, the town was attacked by two rebel schooners carrying twelve guns each. The ships came up the harbor under cover of night and landed their men, unobserved.

It was a genuine freebooters' excursion, with plans well laid and skilfully executed. The garrison was first attacked, the sentries silenced and the fort taken, while the soldiers slept. As soon as the day broke they turned their attention to the town, surrounded the houses, and, capturing every man and boy, locked them in the fort. Two of the inhabitants more daring than the rest, attempted to escape. They were discovered and promptly hung from the yard-arm of one of the schooners. Their fate served as a warning to any others who might be disposed to make a dash for freedom. After the whole town had been plundered, the guns in the fort spiked, the pirates made off, carrying with them the spoils of a most successful expedition.

A Different Sort of Doctor.

Dr. Charles Harriss, the well-known Canadian musician and composer, who has arranged and will conduct the Empire Concert at the forthcoming pageant to be held at the Crystal Palace, told an amusing story about himself the other day, says M.A.P.

Whilst Dr. Harris was on his way to South Africa, he desired to keep his identity a secret.

During the voyage a gentleman managed to get into conversation with the musician, and asked him if he would medically examine his little girl who was with him on the boat.

"My dear sir," replied Dr. Harriss, "I have never examined a child in my life."

Ten minutes later he overheard the gentleman say, in the smoking-room: "There you are! Didn't I say that man was a fraud!"

A WARM GREETING.

She Overcame the Rules and Met Him at the Station.

She was rushing through the gate past Bill Gibson, the gateman, like a passenger train by a flag station, but Gibson stopped her.

"Let's see your ticket, lady," he asked politely enough.

"Oh, I have no ticket," she said, "but won't you please let me through. I want to"—

"It's against the rules," cut in Gibson.

"Yes, but I want to be there on the platform"—all this breathlessly—"I'm so anxious to meet him."

"Well, go on through," Gibson told her. "I guess it'll be all right." Then to himself he soliloquized: "Why not? Perhaps she won't always be so keen to meet him; probably hasn't been married but a month or so; mebby isn't married yet at all. Far be it from me to interrupt her in such nice little attentions."

The train came in. Gibson sort of looked out of the tail of his eye for a chance to witness the happy reunion. Such sights illumine the dark recesses of the dingy old depot.

In a moment he caught sight of her. But her husband or sweetheart—if she had one or the other—was not with her. However, she was not alone. Under her arm she clutched tightly a compact brindle English bulldog with a countenance like a dissipated gargoyle.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

COUNTING BY TENS.

And a Suggestion as to Why We Buy Things by the Dozen.

Did it ever occur to you as strange that while we count by tens we buy so many articles by the dozen? If we ask the price of apples, oranges, oysters, eggs, collars, handkerchiefs and many other things we will be told so many cents or dollars a dozen, or if large quantities are wanted so much a gross, which means a dozen dozen.

How do you suppose this has come about? It was this way: Nearly all savage people count by their fingers—that is, if they want to tell you they have seen two wild beasts they will hold up two fingers, and if ten they will hold up both hands, and if twenty both hands twice, and so on. Babies also learn to count by their fingers and toes, and to many people it seems as if that were the only possible way.

It is, however, rather a clumsy way, as you find out when you try to divide ten. Say, for example, you have ten apples. You can only make an equal division among two or five persons, while if you have twelve you can give an equal number to two, three, four or six. We find the same inconvenience in dividing a dollar and often have to pay 13 cents for what should properly cost 12½ cents.

If we had been born with two, four six or eight fingers or toes, like some animals, it is possible that we should have counted differently, but it does not now seem likely there will ever be any change in the ten or decimal system, as it is called, especially since the Arabic numerals now used nearly everywhere are based on this system.

How Japs Play Ken.

In its most widely practiced form the basis of the Japanese game of ken is that the fully outstretched hand signifies paper, the fully closed hand a stone, and two fingers alone extended, the rest being closed, scissors. Each of the players, counting one, two, three, throws out his hand at the moment of pronouncing three, and the one whose manual symbol is superior to that of the others, according to the theory of the game, wins the trial. Superiority is determined on the hypothesis that whereas scissors cannot cut a stone they can cut paper and whereas paper is cut by scissors it can wrap up a stone—consequently scissors are inferior to stone, but conquer paper; stone is inferior to paper, but conquers scissors, and paper is inferior to scissors, but conquers stone. There are innumerable varieties of the game.

The Only Thing They Ever Did.

John Bright's powers of sarcasm were almost unrivaled. Some of his sharpest utterances were against members of the nobility. When boasts had been made of the antiquity of a prominent family, that their ancestors came over with the Conqueror, his reply was prompt, "I never heard that they did anything else."

SPOILED THE PLOT.

A Display of Juvenile Affection That Saved the Mongrel.

About three weeks ago there strolled into a Ridley Park house a dirty, disreputable looking dog. He was of no particular breed, but a general mixture of all there are. Out of the kindness of her heart the cook gave him a few bites to eat, and from that time on, try as they would, the family could not get rid of the canine. The small children took a great fancy to the dog and named him Bluie. Their father and mother grew tired of seeing Bluie around and secretly plotted to get him out of the way. They feared to kidnap him openly by day, for there would surely follow much protest and distress on the part of the children. Accordingly plans were made for losing Bluie some place far from Ridley Park by night. The evening that the plot was to be carried out, just after supper, father, mother and a five-year-old boy were in the parlor. The little fellow was fondling the dog as if he were his best friend in the world. Finally he seized the dog firmly under the shoulders and, looking straight into his eyes, lisped out, "Bwoole, do you wove me?" and then after a moment with joy in his voice, "Bwoole woves me and the world is mine." After that touching display neither father nor mother had the heart to deprive the little fellow of "Bwoole's" company, and the little mongrel dog seems sure of a comfortable home for life.—Philadelphia Record.

The Broken Trust

CHAPTER XLI.

Love's Recompense.

They saved his memory as much as possible. Had he lived, the story of his fraud must have been made public. Now, there seemed little need for the great scandal. Sir Vivian Aynsley shrank from bringing so strange a story into the papers, and from being pointed out as "the man who was cheated out of his estates, you know."

Lord Damar, was, perhaps, the most anxious for the secret to be kept. The idea that his beautiful, stately daughter had been for many months the bethrothed wife of a nameless penniless, adventurer filled him with annoyance. He would not have such a stain upon her name for all the wide world. Careless his lordship might be of other things, he was careful enough of her reputation. Nor was the firm of lawyers, so skilfully imposed upon, less anxious. Such a scandal would add nothing to their professional repute. So that, by all those most interested, it was agreed the history of Paul Lynne's sin should be buried with him. Some few were obliged to know, but they did not tell; others guessed, but said nothing of it, for the grave in the country was plain and simple; a marble cross stood at the head, saying in a few words, that Paul Lynne slept there.

The day after the sad tragedy in Belgrave Lodge, Lord Damar sent for Sir Vivian Aynsley. The young officer was surprised to see the change that had come over the cynical noble man.

"Vivian," he cried, "this affair has quite unnerved me. I cannot forget it—not that I care about the man himself, but think what a narrow escape it has been for Blanche. If anything had happened — if they had been married — it would have killed me I believe. Only imagine such an exposure when my daughter was his wife!"

"It is an escape," said Sir Vivian. Does Blanche know anything about it?"

"Not yet," returned his lordship. "To tell you the truth, it was to consult you on that very matter I sent for you. She ought to know, — and she should not discover it from the papers; but I declare to you I do not know how to write. I persuaded her to marry him; she could not endure him, and I shrink from telling her what has happened.

"Do you want me to do it for you?" asked Sir Vivian.

"It would be a great relief to me if you would," replied his lordship, with some animation. "I should deserve her indignation; you are not to blame. If you could find time to run down to Cowes, you would see her the first thing in the morning."

"I will do it with pleasure," said the young soldier. "Lady Blanche waits daily. I suppose, to know the time fixed for her marriage! it would be terrible for her to read of his death in the papers. I can only stay an hour or two, as there is so much business to be attended to; but I will go, and lose no time."

It was still early on the bright sunshiny morning when Lady Blanche weary of the house, weary of the prospect before her, of her own thoughts and everything else in the world, walked slowly down to the water's edge. She rebelled against her fate, but she had no hope of evading it. She envied the fisher girls who passed her with songs on her lips. Down to the water's edge the waves came rolling in, fresh and crisp breaking into sheets of creamy foam and spreading over the golden sands, the morning sunbeams shone upon the sea, until it resembles a mass of heaving gold.

She sat down upon a large piece of fallen rock and watched the rising tide. Ah, dear heaven, year after year the tide would ebb and flow, it would chant the same grand anthem, it would smile and rage, caress and deceive, while she would be — where? Hating the sunrise and the sunset, loathing the needs that too her from the man she loved and gave her to the one she despised, hating the beauty for which he loved her, the life which would only torture her. Tears rose unbidden to her eyes. She did not ofen indulge in them, but the contrast between the light, sunshiny morning, and her own bleak, cheerless life was so great a feeling of pity for herself, a sentiment quite new to Lady Blanche, arose within her.

"Blanche," said a deep rich voice near her. "Why are you weeping? What are you thinking of this bright morning?"

She turned hastily, the tears still wet on her long eyelashes, and saw the lover from whom she had parted in bitter sorrow, near her. She rose from her seat, and tried coldly to bid him welcome, but the color faded from her beautiful face, and she had no word to say.

SIR JAMES GRANT'S ELIXIR.

Ottawa Physician Says He Owes His Own Health to His Remedy.

According to The New York Times, Sir James Grant, of Ottawa, the well-known Canadian physician, believes that he has discovered, not exactly the elixir of life, but at any rate a means of greatly prolonging youth, and apparently of bringing youth back to some extent.

Sir James is himself the best advertisement of his method, for he possesses amazing vitality for his age, now nearly 77 years. He is visiting London, and he looks like a man in his fifties. His secretary, a young man, says it is difficult to keep up with the work his employer does.

Two years ago Sir James created a sensation at a meeting of the British Association by a paper on the extraordinary rejuvenating powers of electricity. He has since then treated himself by his own method, with results that he describes as wonderful, and he has also had much success with a number of eminent patients on the other side of the Atlantic. His treatment consists of electrical applications by means of a special battery and systematized massage.

A writer in The Pall Mall Gazette says he walked with Sir James a distance of half a mile, and could not help commenting on his vigor and energy. He asked Sir James if he wore spectacles, and Sir James replied:

"Yes, I do wear spectacles. I have worn them for forty years—until such time as I began to treat myself with electricity and massage; to-day I do almost the whole of my reading and writing without using any spectacles at all. My hearing is as good as ever, and I feel that I have the energy of a man of 40.

"I notice that your city is full of taxicabs, but so far as I am concerned I never ride where I can walk, and, indeed, if I were challenged I would undertake to run a mile any day. I can hardly believe that I will be 77 in August next; certainly, I feel not more than 45, and for this happy state of affairs I thank my electrical treatment."

A Consul for Regina.

Even the city states in German Europe have diplomatic corps—gentlemen with Vandyke beards and monocles, whose main function is to dance and dine and, on the side, keep the ice to the heated brows of rambunctious nationalists. Regina has gone in for a consulate—quite a new sign of progressiveness indeed. Dr. Jones, American Consul-General for Canada, has told Washington to despatch a diplomat instantly to Saskatchewan's capital. As yet, the name of this diplomat of the plains has not been announced. He will have at least one distinction — he will be first in the business west of Winnipeg.

TIBURON ISLAND.

Its Waters Are Literally Swarming With Ferocious Sharks.

Less than three thousand miles from the city of New York and about a third of that distance from San Francisco there is situated, in the upper reaches of the gulf of California, a small island, worthless even for so mean a purpose as the raising of goats, but nevertheless a center of attraction for the ethnologists and archaeologists of the old and new worlds for many generations.

This rocky peak, rising from the quiet waters of the gulf, is known as Tiburon island. Tiburon is a Spanish word which, translated into English, means "shark." The waters around the islet are literally swarming with these tigers of the sea, and the inhabitants of the island are said to be no less ferocious than the sharks. Tiburon is peopled with a handful of Indians, the only aborigines of their kind in the world, known as Seris. They are reputed to be cannibals, to be so fierce that none of the mainland tribes of Mexican redskins ever dare invade their shores and to possess the secret of manufacture of a peculiarly deadly poison with which they prepare their arrows before battle.—Wide World Magazine.

Not In the Agreement.

Daniel had been cast into the lions' den.

"My main objection," he said as he playfully tweaked a lion's mane, "is that I get no moving picture royalties."—Puck.

South Africa's First Peer.

The first peer to be created since the declaration of the federation of South Africa is Sir John Henry de Villiers, who now becomes Baron de Villiers. He, as Chief Justice of Cape Colony, had the historic task of administering the oath of office of Viscount Gladstone, the first Governor-General of South Africa. Previously he held the post of Attorney-General of Cape Colony for thirty-seven years with satisfaction to Boer and Briton alike. It was largely due to his efforts, as well as to those of General Louis Botha, that South African federation was achieved. He is of Huguenot-Boer descent, and was born at the Cape in 1842. At the age of twenty-three he was called to the Bar, and he became Attorney-General of the colony in 1874. He held the post continuously until his recent elevation to the bench as Chief Justice of the new federation. He has twice visited Canada. In 1894 he took part in the first Intercolonial Conference, which was held in Toronto, as representative of Cape Colony. In 1908 he was present at the Quebec Tercentenary Celebration as representative of South Africa.

WAS ARREST ILLEGAL.

Crippen's Lawyer Says There Was a Flaw In Apprehension of Prisoner.

Quebec, Aug. 10.—A Montreal attorney, who does not wish his name disclosed at present, but who has been engaged by Arthur Newton, the London solicitor who is defending Dr. Crippen, announces there may yet be trouble over the return of the prisoners to England, should extradition be fought. The steamer Montrose is a Canadian boat, and as such is entirely and only directed and governed by the Dominion Marine Act. The arrest of Dr. Crippen and Miss Leneve was made in the middle of the St. Lawrence River by the provincial authorities, which is altogether illegal and wrong. The arrest on the river could not be made by anyone else than the federal police, and with a warrant from the Department of Justice.

Ethel Leneve received a cablegram late yesterday afternoon in the penitentiary, from her father, signed "Dad," urging upon her to maintain the strictest secrecy, and informing her that the money for her defence and Crippen's was being supplied by a famous London newspaper. The father also mentioned that he had given the story of her life exclusively to the same journal, on the understanding that the money would be given by this paper for his daughter's fight for freedom. The name of the newspaper was not given in the cable.

This disposes of the highly incredulous story which has been floating about during the past few days that the money for the prisoner's defence was being supplied by certain wealthy ladies in London, who were in the grip of Crippen, and who were in terror least he should tell the world the many secret discreditable things he knew concerning them. The case, it is understood, will then be fought by the ablest lawyers procurable in London.

FRECKLES.

The Events That Started a Poor Boy on His Career.

By IRA TEN BROECK.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

A zephyr of wind caught up a sheet of paper from the editor's desk and sent it whirling out through the open window. What the editor said is superfluous.

Branton was just rising from his chair to recover the manuscript as a ragged urchin entered the door of the Pinetown Chronicle. When he caught sight of the boy he did what any mortal being possessed with an abiding sense of the ridiculous would have done—he fell back into his chair and laughed.

"Here's yer paper, mister," announced the boy by way of introduction. "I seen it blow out th' window an' fetched it in."

Chance sometimes plays strange tricks. Had anybody told Branton an hour earlier that a gust of wind would blow him fortune he would have laughed at the absurdity of the suggestion.

"Thank you, Freckles," he said. "Here, take this dime for your trouble." The freckled face of the boy broke into a smile as he pocketed the coin and turned to go. He paused at the door, and Branton, looking up from his writing a moment later, saw him standing irresolutely on the doorsill.

Kind hearted Jim Branton was quick to surmise that the lad had something more to say. "Anything I can do for you, son?" he asked kindly.

"N-no, I guess not," answered the boy. "Only I thought p'rhaps you could give me something to do. Y' see, mister, I don't know nobody here, an' I ain't got no place to go, an' if you could"— He stopped awkwardly and fumbled with his fingers.

A few hours later John Jupin, alias Freckles, late of the city of New York, was engaged in sorting the contents of one of those receptacles known in the parlance of the printing office as the hellbox.

"I WANT YOU TO ACT AS REPORTER."

The months that followed were strenuous ones for the Chronicle. Pinetown was in the throes of a political battle over the purchase of a municipal waterworks system. From the first Branton stood firm for municipal ownership, and for a time everything seemed favorable, but then the tide turned.

The political party in the minority saw an opportunity to create a sentiment against the project and charged openly that it was a scheme for graft on the part of the party in office. Branton remained firm in his position.

Affairs were at this point when the leader of the opposition made Branton an offer to desert the now unpopular cause.

All this Freckles learned as he toiled over his types, and he gained a keen insight into the contest. At leisure moments he joined groups of politicians on the street and listened unobserved to the discussions. He gathered a fund of information.

The linotypes were merrily humming and clanking one evening a year after Freckles came to the office of the Chronicle. He had made remarkable progress in his work and through the kindness of Branton had attended the sessions of a night school. He bent all his energies to make the best of his opportunities, and at the end of the term he had graduated near the head of his class.

Freckles was perched upon a box setting headings from a case that was too high for him. He was wondering how much longer Branton could hold out, for it was an open secret that the Chronicle was near the end of its resources. Suddenly he read two lines that startled him:

HEAVIEST TAXPAYER RECONSIDERS ATTITUDE.

DONNELLY FAVORS PURCHASE OF WATERWORKS.

"Donnelly!" Where had he heard that name? Then like a flash he remembered—big Jim Donnelly, one of the leaders of the opposition, the man who had been foremost in denouncing the project. Donnelly reconsiders? Impossible! Only the day before Freckles remembered he had heard him say: "We have won, boys. The election next November is ours." There was treachery somewhere. He must see Branton.

Excitement prevailed in the editorial rooms of the Chronicle that evening. Branton was jubilant. With Donnelly in favor of the project, its success was assured. The news had startled him, indeed, but he cast all suspicions aside when his reporter came in from a personal interview with the leader. Now he saw the Chronicle restored in the good graces of the public and his sacrifices repaid. Freckles found him merrily typewriting an editorial.

"If you please, Mr. Branton, can I see you a minute?" he asked as the latter paused to make a correction.

Branton wheeled around. "Why, hello, Freckles," he said. "What's the matter? Going to give me notice that you've accepted a position as president of the bank?"

Freckles ignored his interrogation and delved at once into the object of his visit. "Mr. Branton, this head is wrong," he said. "There must be a mistake." Then he repeated what he had heard Donnelly say. Branton smiled amusedly.

"Freckles, you're wrong this time—dead wrong. That head describes with minute exactitude just what has occurred. We had it from Donnelly himself, through Billy Curtis." He turned to his desk. "It's all right. Don't worry!"

Freckles was nonplused. He went slowly back to the composing room, thinking hard. What had made Donnelly change his mind so suddenly, or had he changed? It must all be a a mistake. There must be treachery somewhere.

The next day there was great excitement in Pinetown. The office of Jim Donnelly was flooded with visitors, while the big boss passed around cigars to his anxious friends and explained that the esteemed Chronicle had had a "pipe dream." The prestige of that newspaper seemed forever lost—to all except Branton.

In the office of the Chronicle there was equal turmoil. Billy Curtis, the reporter responsible for the article that had set all Pinetown a-quiver with excitement, had resigned and was not to be found. Rumor said he had held an early conference with Donnelly before the presses of the Chronicle were through that morning and had left for the far west. Branton experienced a feeling nearer akin to disappointment than he had yet known. The treachery of Curtis was evident.

The needs of the present aroused him from his reverie. Some one must be found at once to take Curtis' place, some one he could trust. In his dilemma he thought of Freckles.

"I can trust him," he mused. "Anyhow, he can find out what is happening, and I can write the articles at present." So Freckles was roused out of his bed at 10 o'clock by a messenger and ordered to report at the office at once. He went in fear, dreading he knew not what. Branton was awaiting him.

"Freckles," said Branton, "I have made up my mind that we don't need you in the composing room any longer," and Freckles trembled. The next moment he could have shouted for joy. "I want you to act as reporter for me temporarily." Then he explained.

So Freckles went forth from the office an hour later with a jubilant heart notwithstanding the prospects of the Chronicle. Branton had unconsciously stumbled upon one of the secrets of success. He had made an ally of his helper.

He first went to the humble lunch room where he had taken his meals since his arrival in Pinetown. His head was literally awhirl with his sudden promotion. He bore in mind Branton's last words: "And, above all, Freckles, don't let anybody know who you are. Keep that low." In spite of his small stature, Freckles was now eighteen years old, and his sudden good fortune made him feel a man grown. His hard knocks in battling for an existence had taught him many things that were to stand him in good stead. Branton had chosen wisely.

Residents of Pinetown will always recall the events of the following day. The Chronicle was filled with remarks by eminent politicians never meant for publication, with here and there a caustic comment by Branton. The last number of the Chronicle was sold before the sun was two hours high, and Donnelly and his colleagues were raging. The strange part was nobody knew how Branton had secured his information. Nobody had seen him about, nor had any one observed the little figure that quietly lingered near groups of politicians as they conferred in low tones. Freckles went about without attracting suspicion, and the leaders began to whisper of treachery and of betrayed confidence. The next day and the next the Chronicle contained edifying news morsels and told of the growing spirit of disruption among the leaders. Donnelly grew alarmed as leading citizens began to sit up and take notice. The circulation of the Chronicle increased by leaps and bounds. Freckles was, indeed, "making good."

The tide of public opinion soon turned, and Freckles became established in the office of the Chronicle as head reporter, and Branton always said the change was brought about by a sheet of paper blowing from his desk one afternoon.

About a year after his promotion Reporter John Jupin made a trip to New York and after three days' absence returned with a careworn old lady, happiness beaming from her wrinkled face, and introduced her to Branton as "my mother." After that he bought a home in the suburbs, where, like they say in the fairy tales, they lived happy ever afterward.

This Flour Is Milled From The Cream

Not all flours are made only from the pick of the best Spring Wheat of the Manitoba class.

Everybody can't get the "cream"—somebody must take the "skim milk".

See that YOU don't get it, Madam.

When you ask your dealer for FIVE ROSES, you are sure absolutely of getting only the "cream" of the sturdy Manitoba harvest.

You can trust the FIVE ROSES label.

LAKE OF THE WOODS MILLING COMPANY KEEWATIN

We pick it ourselves this wheat—so we know. We have been buying wheat many, many years—we know where the rare grains grow. Often we pay more than anybody else, for we must have the best.

We don't let others buy our wheat—it's too important.

Otherwise how could we guarantee you the very best wheat in Canada—how could we live up to our standard?

Some unknowing housewives to-day or to-morrow maybe will buy a flour made from the low-grade, inferior stuff, the "skim milk" of the crop. Somebody must eat it because, you see, there isn't enough of the "cream" to go 'round.

Now that you do know, Madam, aren't you going to make sure by getting FIVE ROSES?

Fatal Accident on Grand Junction Track.

JOHN WESLEY JORDAN, A G. T. R. BRAKEMAN, MET TERRIBLY SUDDEN DEATH LAST NIGHT — OPINIONS DIFFER AS TO CAUSES OF THE ACCIDENT — DECEASED A YOUNG UNMARRIED MAN.

A distressing and fatal accident occurred in this city at a few minutes after 8 o'clock last evening. The victim was John Wesley Jordan, a Grand Trunk Railway brakeman, and the scene of the fatal affair was on Pinnacle street, just south of Wharf street.

As to the exact cause of the accident there seems to be a diversity of opinion, some alleging that in attempting to board a moving car, after making a "flying switch," he caught his foot in a frog and fell, and others claim his foot was caught in a frog and he was unable to extricate himself and get out of the way before the cars passed over him. The unfortunate man was instantly killed.

At the time of the accident the pilot engine was shunting some cars on the line of the Grand Junction, near the spur which leads into the rolling mills.

In his capacity as brakeman, Jordan was operating the switch and it was whilst he was thus engaged that the deplorable accident occurred.

No person was an actual eye witness to the affair and it was very dark at the time.

A car or two passed over Jordan's body diagonally, crushing both legs and an arm and also inflicted terrible internal injuries.

Death evidently was instantaneous

Immediately after the accident Jordan was missed and his mangled remains were found lying beside the track.

As soon as possible after the accident, Dr. Yeomans, coroner, was summoned to the scene. After viewing the remains and securing what information was possible at that time, he ordered the remains to be removed. They were taken to Tickell's undertaking establishment but were not disturbed, as the coroner decided that he would consult the Crown Attorney before deciding whether an inquest was necessary or not.

The victim of the accident was 27 years of age and had been for some time in the employ of the railway. He was a son of Mr. Joseph Jordan who resides in the 2nd concession of Thurlow, about one and a half miles east of the G. T. R. station. Deceased was unmarried.

It was finally decided by the Coroner that an inquest was unnecessary and the remains were to-day prepared for burial and taken to the parents' home in Thurlow Township.

A SATISFIED AUDIENCE.

A packed house greeted the performers at Griffin's Family Theatre last night and judging by the applause given the actors and the pictures the new regime is making good its promise to give the patrons the best artists procurable. "Dancing" Derrill certainly does credit to title and his rapid fire talk on local topics kept the house in an uproar. Ro-Nero who by his skill in hoop-rolling, juggling and baton swinging, won over his audience, is to be complimented on his dexterity. The illustrated song by Harry Hirst, the popular pianist, called for repeated encores.

Two Kingston Girls Ate Toadstools And Paid the Penalty.

Kingston, August 9.—As the result of eating what is supposed to have been toadstools, two little girls, Cecelia May Kingsbury, aged three, and her sister, Ruth Kingsbury, formerly of this city, and a brother of A. B. Kingsbury, barber, Wellington street, are dead at Rochester, N. Y.

The sad news of the tragedy was received in the city on Monday night, and Mr. and Mrs. Kingsbury left Kingston, at once, for Rochester.

The children's grandmother, Mrs. Hannah Kingsbury, is also in a very dangerous condition, as a result of eating what is believed to have been toadstools, and a report from Rochester states that it is feared that she might not recover.

A despatch from Rochester says that the supposed mushrooms were eaten on Saturday morning, but the children were not taken sick until Sunday afternoon. They died on Sunday evening, after suffering great agony. The grandmother has been kept in ignorance of the death of the two children, as it is feared that her condition will be greatly aggravated, if she knew of it.

A Foul Deed.

It is alleged that when the Grand Trunk local from the west, which arrives here at 9.10 p.m., was coming near this city last night, the engineer about three miles west of Belleville noticed a large pile of railroad ties piled up on the track ahead of his train. It is said that he was enabled to slow up sufficiently so that, though the engine ran into the pile of ties, no particular damage was done. The train crew, it is said brought in two of the ties with them to this city.

AWAKENING OF SCIENCE

TO THE VALUE OF FRUIT

What is "FRUIT-A-TIVES"?

Medical men are just beginning to realize the possibilities of fruit in curing disease. Its action on the liver, kidneys and skin is wonderful. Yet fruit in its raw state is impracticable in treating disease because of the minute quantity of the active or curative principle contained in fruit juice.

A physician in Ottawa, after years of patient work, discovered a process, whereby the medicinal or bitter principle of fruit juice is increased in quantity and thus a more active and more valuable substance is obtained.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit.

Hundreds of prominent people in every section of the Dominion owe their good health to "Fruit-a-tives." Hundreds more are daily becoming stronger and better by taking them. "Fruit-a-tives" is daily proving its inestimable value as a natural cure in all cases of Constipation, Biliousness, Torpid Liver, Backache and Headache, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Kidney and Skin Troubles.

MAYOR GAYNOR SHOT

New York's Chief Executive Is in a Grave Condition.

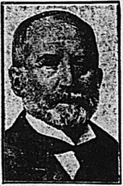
As Result of Attack by a Dismissed Civic Employe, Gaynor Now Lies In St. Mary's Hospital Suffering From a Bullet Wound In His Head —Blood Poisoning May Develop—Was Off For His Holidays.

New York, Aug. 10.—Wm. J. Gaynor, mayor of New York City, was shot in the head and seriously wounded yesterday as he stood on the promenade deck of the steamer Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, by James J. Gallagher, a discharged and disgruntled city employe. Gallagher was almost instantly overpowered and arrested.

The shot was fired at 9.45 o'clock yesterday morning, fifteen minutes before the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse was due to leave her pier at Hoboken, N.J., and the mayor was receiving God-speed from a group of friends preparatory to a vacation trip to Europe. The bullet struck him behind the right ear and ranged downward, inflicting a dangerous, though not necessarily fatal wound. Unless blood poison develops, surgeons are hopeful of the mayor's recovery, although at his age, 59 years, such a wound is essentially grave.

The mayor is at St. Mary's Hospital, Hoboken, surrounded by specialists, with members of his family gathered near. All early reports from the hospital were hopeful in tune, and last night six X-ray negatives of the wound were taken, to facilitate an operation for the removal of the bullet.

Gallagher, the would-be assassin, is locked in a cell at Jersey City, held without bail. He expresses no remorse.



MAYOR GAYNOR.

The big liner was gay with flags and ringing with shouted "good-byes" when the tragedy occurred. Most of those who had been aboard the ship to say farewell to friends and relatives had gone ashore, but a little group remained to talk with the mayor. They were standing on the port side of the vessel, near the promenade deck and were posing for a group photograph when Gallagher, unnoticed, pushed his way almost to the mayor's side and fired point blank at his head.

He used a 38-calibre revolver, and an examination later disclosed that the first cartridge had missed fire. This probably saved the mayor's life, for Gallagher was less than two feet away when he first pulled the trigger. Backing away slightly in his excitement, he pulled the trigger a second time, and sent a bullet crashing into the mayor's neck, below the ear.

William H. (big Bill) Edwards, commissioner of street cleaning, and the former Princeton football star, lunged forward with his 300 pounds, just as Robert Adamson, the mayor's secretary, struck Gallagher's arm. As he did so a second shot pierced Edward's sleeve, inflicting a slight flesh wound on the commissioner's right arm, which remained undiscovered for hours because of the excitement. Unmindful of his wound, Edwards hit the man a crushing blow in the face, and they crashed to the deck together. Gallagher, struggling with the strength of desperation and pulling viciously at the trigger in an attempt to fire another shot.

Edwards was too much for him. He rained blow after blow in Gallagher's now bleeding face, while Adamson and Archibald R. Watson, corporation counsel for the city, flung themselves on the struggling two in an attempt to grasp the weapon. When Mr. Watson had obtained possession of it, Edwards and Gallagher continued a bitter struggle about the deck, Edwards now crying and shouting in his anger and excitement, and Gallagher panting, but fighting hard. When completely subdued by the former football star, a pair of steel nippers were slipped on his wrists by a special officer aboard the ship, and he was rushed through a hooting and threatening crowd off the vessel, into an automobile, and arraigned before Recorder McGovern of Hoboken.

Gallagher, judging by appearances and actions, is not a lunatic, but he has nourished in his heart a hatred for Mayor Gaynor ever since he was discharged as a night watchman in the department of docks and ferries in July last for incompetency. Since then he has repeatedly written the mayor, harping on an obsession that he had been persecuted, and demanding redress. He has even written to the governor, so it became known last night, and he went on board the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse yesterday with the expressed purpose of murdering the man whom he charged with having robbed him of his bread and butter.

FIRE VISITS BOSTON

Million Dollars Is Loss in Big Conflagration.

Lumber District In Vicinity of the Docks Is Swept and Ten Million Feet of Wood Burns, Besides Several Factories and a Tenement—Large Quantity of Fire-Fighting Machinery Falls a Prey to Flames.

Boston, Aug. 10.—A loss of upwards of $1,000,000 was caused by a fire in the wholesale lumber district. Starting in the lumber yards of Blacker & Shepard, at Dover and Albany streets, the blaze asumed early proportions of such magnitude that a general alarm, the first sounded in this city since 1872, followed within ten minutes of the first alarm.

The fire zone extended along both sides of Albany street, south from Dover street, on the east side, wiping out the buildings and ten million feet of lumber piled in the Fort Point channel docks of the Blacker & Shepard Co., and on the west side extending to the Thayer street public playground. Five brick buildings on the west side of Albany street were destroyed. These included a three-storey tenement block, four wood-working factories and the Boston fire department repair station, in which several pieces of fire apparatus were lost. The Blacker & Shepard Co.'s loss exceeds $300,000; the Boston fire department about $150,000.

London, Aug. 10.—(C.A.P. Firebug Pleads Guilty.

Waiting For the Note.

An English churchman tells the following:

"At one of our cathedrals the minor canon was ill and could not sing. A suffragan bishop had a good voice and volunteered to sing the litany. 'Go,' he said to the verger, 'and tell the organist that I will sing the litany and ask him to give me the reciting note.' 'Please, sir,' said the verger to the organist, 'the bishop 'as sent me to you to say he will sing the litany.' 'All right,' said the organist. Seeing the verger remain, he said, 'You need not stay.' 'Please, sir, the bishop asked me to to ask you if you would give him a something—I didn't quite catch—note.' 'You mean the reciting note.' 'That's it, sir; that's it.' Seeing the verger still remaining, he said, 'You need not stay.' To which the verger said, 'Please, sir, shall I take it to his lordship?'"

Camel Carriages.

Camel carriages are not common conveyances in most parts of India, but on the great trunk road leading to Delhi they are frequently to be seen. They are large, double story wagons, drawn sometimes by one, sometimes by two or even three camels, according to their size. Iron bars which give them a cagelike appearance were originally intended as a defense against robbers, and the carts were probably also used for the conveyance of prisoners.

Mr. Stroke

A Boating Story In Which There Is a Mystery.

By KINGSBURY WELCH.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

We were sitting in a room above where the boats were kept, in easy chairs, all university men, talking about boating incidents, oarsmen and the paraphernalia for rowing. The air was thick with tobacco smoke, principally from pipes, the students' favorite smoke. We had met to talk over preparations for the coming season, which was soon to begin. Having finished that subject, we dropped, as I have said, into general chat on aquatic subjects and from this into stories of feats that had been performed at contests on the water in days gone by. A college, being a constantly changing community, is not a good place for handing down legends, but occasionally a graduate will return to tell of some episode that happened in his day and was at the time the talk of the institution.

We had with us on this occasion a man who had dropped in unannounced, remarking that he was a graduate of the college of ten years' standing and had in his day been a member of the university crew. He must have been graduated very young, for he looked scarcely thirty. A cast or some imperfection in his eye gave him an uncanny look, and from the moment of his appearance he was a damper on our spirits.

"These old men," whispered Tomkins, a sophomore, to me, "who were in college before the flood are a nuisance. They're always trying to feel that they are in their teens again, and they only succeed in making us feel as old as they are."

"Did you ever pull in a regatta?" I asked the alumnus.

"Yes," was the reply, "I pulled in one."

"What year was that?" I inquired.

"It's not a pleasant subject to talk about; we lost the race."

"To what did you attribute the failure?" asked one of our number. "There is always a reason for every beating a crew gets. One time it is the stroke, another the training, another the coxswain."

"I was the cause of the failure on that occasion," replied the stranger.

Never were words spoken in a more melancholy tone. There was not a man in the party who did not take his pipe out of his mouth, fix his eyes on the speaker and feel a cold chill pass over him. The stranger continued:

"We had been beaten by our great rival in two successive seasons, and for this regatta had made every preparation, taken every precaution to secure a triumph. We had the best coach the country afforded, a new boat made on the most approved model, our system of training was perfect and our practice constant. The betting began at 3 to 2 on our crew, and before the race was on there were no takers at 2 to 1.

"The day of the race was beautiful; not a cloud in the sky; just enough breeze with plenty of ozone in it for invigoration. When the hour for the race came the temperature was quite hot enough to limber our joints and muscles.

"The scene along the river banks was entrancing. The bright colors of the girls' dresses and parasols made a perfect flower garden, while on the river boats bearing both girls and boys were shooting back and forth like water sprites.

"When we went out on the floating platform to get into the boat there was a mighty cheer from our backers that I can hear to this day. Babcock was No. 1, Ayer 2, Cameron 3, Bosworth 4, Willmarth 5, Frost 6, Mayo 7."

"Singular," remarked one of us, "that you should remember their names so well."

"I shall never forget them."

"You left out the stroke," I said.

"I was the stroke."

Why it was that none of us could muster pluck to ask the man his name I don't know. We all wished to know it, but not a man chirped.

"We stepped into the boat," continued the stranger, "stripped to the waist. Eight good men with not a pound of fat on any of us and in all other respects in perfect condition. I had for months been absorbed in what had now come. For it my studies had been neglected, and I would have to 'bone' all summer to make up 'conditions.' But I cared nothing for that. My whole soul was merged in the idea of beating our opponents.

"We pulled into position, the shot was fired, and we made a good start on the first trial, our boat half a length behind over the line. But we made this up within a minute and were soon half a length ahead. I heard none of the wild cheers. I saw neither the boat, the water nor the shore dotted with waving handkerchiefs. I was conscious only of the mighty effort I was making to get the boat over the course. Once only I saw drops of water tossed into the air when the oar blade of one of our opponents struck the surface instead of sinking to its proper depth. I would not have been conscious of this had it not been that such splashing would retard the other boat.

"We gained steadily, turning the stake boat—it was that kind of a course—two lengths ahead. As we began to pull back down the course, feeling sure of winning, I was conscious of the wild cheering and waving. It may be that we all somewhat relaxed at this time. At any rate, our opponents, having turned the stake boat behind us, made a spurt and overhauled us. Then down again we got to work and had gained three lengths—quite enough considering there was but a quarter of a mile remaining—to give us the race, when"—

The narrator stopped, a pallor came over his face, and he gasped. Several of us started toward him, but he waved us back.

—"something in me gave way. I fell over into the arms of No. 7. Our competitors shot by us and won the race."

I have never experienced such a depressing, not to say thrilling, sensation as when the narrative ended. While the narrator was describing the race it seemed as if I could see the boats dashing onward and hear the cheering. When he spoke of the disaster somehow my imagination pictured blood spouting from his mouth and nose. Not a man among us but appeared to be similarly shocked.

"Come," said one of our number, "let's adjourn to the —— and get some supper."

"Agreed!" cried the rest, glad to break the spell and eager for something to brace us after listening to the weird narrative.

We went out into the darkness, the stranger with us. When we reached the —— some one asked, "Where's Mr. —Mr. Stroke?"

"Don't know," replied one behind. "I thought he was ahead with you fellows."

Every one thought he was with some one else.

Mr. Stroke, as we called him, had evidently taken advantage of the darkness to steal away unobserved. We were quite relieved at his doing so. The effect of his story was, to say the least, depressing, and we were glad to get rid of him. We ordered some supper and while waiting for it talked about him, wondering who he could have been and what race it was that he had lost for his crew. Since he had not given us his name, we did not feel that we possessed sufficient data upon which to make inquiries.

As the season advanced we forgot all about Mr. Stroke and his story. I was much interested in the coming regatta and the preparations for it, though I was not a member of the university crew. Our college had been doing bad work at boating for a long period. In ten years I think we had beaten our principal adversary but twice. This year we hoped for and expected better things. All went well till the day of the race, when one of the crew fell suddenly ill and could not row. Unfortunately all the available material had been utilized. There were substitutes galore, but the man who had dropped out was one of the two most important men of the crew. To put any one in his place would be to surely lose the race.

A few minutes before the crews went out to the water I asked about the substitute and was told that a freshman was to row. I could not learn how or why he had been chosen, but, wishing to have a look at him, I went down on to the float. The men were getting into the boat. The substitute's face was familiar to me, but I could not tell where I had seen him. Then suddenly it rushed upon me that he was the man we had called Mr. Stroke.

Had a freshman been smart enough to sell us all out as a graduate of ten years' standing with a marvelous story of which he was the central figure?

I took a position where I could see the race all the way and had with me a powerful fieldglass. Our crew took the lead almost immediately after the start. I noticed when the crew got into the boat the substitute took the place of No. 6. All through the race I could see that, while he did not appear to be making a herculean effort, he was doing splendid work. Our crew kept the lead they had taken, gradually but slowly drawing away from their competitors. From a length it grew to two lengths, then three lengths, and at the finish the race was won by five and a half lengths.

Never had we been beaten by such odds. I questioned the crew as to how it happened, for our adversaries had made better time than ever before, and was told that it was all on account of the substitute. Every time he put his oar in the water the boat seemed to move forward whether the rest of the crew exerted themselves or not.

I became interested in the freshman substitute. Determined to find out more about him, I made inquiries. But it was at the close of the term, with the summer vacation ahead, and I discovered nothing. Returning in the autumn, I looked for him among the sophomores. He was not to be found. Some said he had not returned to college. The singular feature of the case was that I couldn't learn his name. I went to the man who was responsible for his acceptance on the crew and found him disposed to hush the matter up. He admitted to me that the proceeding had been irregular, that the substitute had come to him at the last minute, begged hard to be accepted and promised to win the race if allowed to pull. My informant said that he had acted hastily, taking the man's own representation that he was in college. Of course where there are several thousand undergraduates one is not expected to know them all.

It now occurred to me to examine the college record of the man we had dubbed Mr. Stroke. I went to the register and made inquiries about the race in which he had figured. The records mentioned the names of the crew he had given, his own being Champlin.

"That race," said my informant, "was lost by Champlin's breaking a blood vessel and dying in the boat."

Beneficial results are said to have attended experiments in a London hospital by which asthma, bronchitis and even tuberculosis patients were required to breathe compressed air for a few hours at a time.

COINING IN PRISON.

Primitive Plant Operated In Massachusetts Prison.

Boston, Aug. 11.—How three inmates of the state prison at Charlestown were able to construct a counterfeiting outfit and manufacture spurious half dollars has been discovered by secret service officers. Ever since July 21, when the state prison officials learned that counterfeit half dollars were in circulation in the prison, and that some had got outside an investigation has been in progress At that time it became known that Patrick Hanley of Lynn, who is serving a 25-year sentence as a habitual criminal, was involved.

Last night it was stated that two other prisoners had been found to be accomplices of Hanley, and that the cases of all three would be presented to the federal grand jury next fall.

The method of the counterfeiters was ingenious. They secured from unknown sources some scraps of tin and lead, a jeweler's crucible and some plaster of paris. One of the trio who has a knowledge of electricity cut in on the electric light wires in Hanley's cell, attached two pieces of carbon and placed them on a small sheet of iron covered with fireproof cement. On the white hot carbon the crucible was placed, the metal was melted and the coins were manufactured in a plaster of paris mould.

It is suspected that there was an accomplice outside the jail who assisted in the distribution of the coins and the supplying of material for their manufacture.

London, Aug. 11.—Miss May Kerr of Hamilton had a terrifying experience in the heavy electrical storm on Tuesday night, when a bolt tore a whole in the roof of her sister's house and entered the room where she was and wrecked things. Pictures were torn from the walls and the mantel was torn out and hurled across the room. Miss Kerr suffered greatly from the shock, but was otherwise uninjured. DRIVES FIRST SPIKE

Sir Wilfrid Starts Work on the Alberta Central Railway.

Hon. G. P. Graham Assists at Function at Red Deer, When In the Presence of a Big Gathering of Representatives of the United Farmers of Alberta New Railway Is Inaugurated—Asks Lower Tariff.

Red Deer, Alta., Aug. 11.—In the role of a railroad mechanic, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, with the assistance of Hon. G. P. Graham, drove the first spike in the Alberta Central Railway here yesterday afternoon. The company is operating under its own charter, but the general belief is that the C.P.R. is behind the project. Simultaneously with the ceremony at Red Deer, the Canadian Northern & Alberta Central locked horns before the Railway Commission in Ottawa over right of way plans.

The charter of the Alberta Central includes a line from Moose Jaw to Red Deer, and it is the intention to push the line through to the Pacific, although there is talk of a more southerly route to Vancouver.

Red Deer is the constituency which sends to Parliament Dr. M. Clark, who has made a name for himself by taking the views of the Manchester school in Parliament, even when it meant criticism of the Government. This lent special interest to the representations of the United Farmers of Alberta, which here were presented by the executive of the provincial association. Their arguments were presented in written form. They recognized that Sir Wilfrid agreed with them in having free trade as his ideal, but the memorial went on to criticize the Government for having made practically no reductions in the tariff in fourteen years. Though it seemed, stated the deputation, that Britain received preference, yet American imports had the advantage over British Protection was useless to the farmers, it argued, because the prices of farm produce were higher in the United States than in Canada. Statements were also presented on co-operation, the Hudson Bay Railway and the chilled meats trade, on which it was made clear that the association opposed all subsidies to private corporations, and wanted a Government system of abattoirs only.

The Premier postponed his reply till the public meeting this afternoon.

On the way to Red Deer from Edmonton, Sir Wilfrid made a brief visit at Wetakiwin, Ponoka, and Lacombe. At the latter place, a motor trip was made to the experimental farm, where extensive experiments are being carried on in the values of different kinds of oats. Receptions along the line were good, and at Red Deer the welcome was participated in by a company of the 15th Light Rifles and a cadet corps.

Musician Pounded to Death.

Buffalo, Aug. 11.—Because he stopped playing his violin in a vacant lot, late Sunday night, Jacob Kziozo was so battered and kicked that his injuries yesterday resulted in his death. The police, seeking his assailants, gave out the story yesterday. Kziozo, who was a laborer in the daytime and a dance hall violinist at night, was crossing a vacant lot homeward after midnight, when held up by several men who ordered him to take out his violin and play.

Kziozo played softly at first, many popular airs, then louder, hoping to attract the attention of some passerby. Pausing a moment in the weird recital, he was brutally pounded and knocked down. Then, yanked to his feet, he was ordered to continue. He played until exhausted. Further blows were rained upon him and he was left helpless.

It was morning before he was discovered and removed. His skull was fractured.

Sailors Jumped Overboard.

Halifax, Aug. 11.—Worried over the scarcity of bait and fish, the captain of a Portuguese schooner fishing off the Grand Banks, jumped overboard and drowned himself several days ago, to be followed by one of his crew three days later. Both along shore and on the Banks there is a great scarcity of bait and fish; something unusual for this time of year. An American fishing schooner that arrived at Louisburg brings news of the suicide of the Portuguese captain and one of his sailors.

English Scouts for the Exhibition.

Ottawa, Aug. 11.—General Sir Baden-Powell authorizes the announcement here yesterday that he and the English boy scouts now encamped at Cochrane, Alta., will attend the rally of scouts to be held at Toronto Exhibition to meet the scouts from Toronto and district who will attend there. Their itinerary will include seven days' camping on the shores of Lake Superior, at Winnipeg, Aug. 19, Toronto Aug. 30, Ottawa Sept. 2, Montreal Sept. 6. They will sail from Quebec on Sept. 9.

The Cadet Movement.

London, Aug. 11.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—In the course of an interview regarding the cadet movement here, Lord Dundonald said Gen. Lake, in a recent report to the Canadian Government, entirely agreed with the views previously expressed by himself. There had been a great change of opinion in Canada lately on the question.

THIS DAY IN HISTORY.

CURRENT EVENTS.

Heavy dew last night. No connection with the Crippen case, however.

Days are pulling in rapidly. The electric fans will soon be laid away in cold storage.

It takes the folks of St. Michael's to run a successful picnic. No mistake about that.

Bad quarters are said to be in circulation in the province. Some of them alas, are liable to find their way to the collection plate.

Crippen and Leneve will sail for England next Tuesday. That is a couple, anyhow, that Canada can do without.

The attempted assassination of Mayor Gaynor of New York, is another instance of peculiar Yankee methods. Freedom, in the United States, seems to be interpreted as the right one man has to shoot another against whom he has a real or fancied grievance. We do things more calmly and sanely under the Union Jack.

Gen. Sir John French, in his report on the Canadian Militia, points out three matters which loom large to him:

The peace organization and composition of the militia should be such that, in the event of war breaking out, the forces would be ready to take the field forthwith. The General finds that this is not the state of affairs at present.

Better qualified and more effective staffs should be in command of brigade divisions.

The period of annual training is wholly inadequate to produce results.

General French finds that the city regiments devote too much time to purely ceremonial movements, and have too little practical work. That there is good material in the militia he admits, but he strongly emphasizes the need of more qualified officers, an essential which is now lacking. The general conclusion is that the peace organization as at present is not such as could prove effective in the event of a modern outbreak of hostilities.

In plain English, the General finds that, in the Canadian Militia, too much attention is given to play and not enough to real work.

Sometimes true fish stories are more impressive than the "Canterbury tales" our friends tell us. For instance: In the Niagara river, on Tuesday, a 150-pound sturgeon leaped into a motor-boat, crippled the engine and caused the occupants considerable trouble before they succeeded in getting the launch landed. The surprising part of the story is that it is verified by a score of people.

Buffalo will allow Sunday baseball after this. Now listen to the men of Belial singing: "Put me off at Buffalo."

Boston had a million dollar fire. Awful thought! Perhaps the beans were scorched!

Chicago writer says:—"No man dies until the fire of his ideals dies down until his heart has perished within him, until he has lost hope for himself and concern for his destiny and usefulness." How true! Only it's wise to keep out of the way of automobiles or you may lose the whole lot at one fell swoop.

Some of the Liberal papers have suddenly discovered that the West is likely in a short time to hold the balance of political power and shape political settlement. Yes, and if we are to judge from the expressions of opinion the sentiment is anything but favorable to the Laurier Government.—Kingston Standard.

A correspondent of the New York Tribune doesn't like the word "electrocute." We do not say "strangulocute," he urges, when a man is hanged. There is reason in the objection For a short word how would it do to say the criminal was "elected."—Buffalo Times.

The telephone girls cannot understand why subscribers get so irritable if they are kept waiting, while the number wanted is busy. They say it one goes into a drug store, a dry goods store or a grocery, he generally has to wait to be served. When a man goes into a barber shop, the time is rare when he has not to wait his turn. The same rule, they claim should apply to the telephone business. When a number is busy, it is just like one customer being ahead of the other. Don't blame the hello girl. She can't help it when she has to call out "busy."—Kingston Whig.

Steamer Belleville Was in Collision.

Ogdensburg Journal — The steamer Britannic bumped into the steamer Belleville as the two were coming up the river Friday night from Morrisburg. A fender of the latter was smashed and the paddle box of the Britannic was damaged, but to what extent was not learned by those on board the Belleville. The collision occurred after the boats had got by Cardinal and it created intense excitement on board the Belleville There were nearly fifty passengers nearly all men, among them being the Ogdensburg baseball team. To those on the Belleville it looked as if the Captain of the Britannic was trying to run across the Belleville's bow. The Britannic sideswiped the other craft, squarely amidships and had she hit her bow on she might have cut the Belleville in two. All of the passengers on the latter craft pulled down the life preservers from the racks overhead, hastily adjusted them around their waists and then were prepared for the worst. When it was found that the boat did not have a hole punched in her and that she was safe and sound there was a general sigh of relief, which turned to feelings of anger towards the master of the other boat. No explanation of the cause of the accident was vouchsafed to the passengers and as far as they were aware nobody on the Belleville had the least idea of what she other boat was trying to do when she got so close to the Belleville.

She Knew Enough.

Recently a most fastidious young man in a certain town bought a pair of overalls and found in them the name of the sewing girl, who had made them. He very promptly wrote her a letter with all the effusiveness necessary in such a case, and in due time he received a reply which, however, was void of the romance usual in such cases. Here it is: "I am a working girl, it is true, but I make a good living and I do not care to support a husband, as I would probably have to do, if I married some silly noodle, who gets mashed on a girl he never saw. Permit me to further say, that I do not know how my card got in the pair of overalls, and that when I do marry, if ever, it will be some fellow who can afford something better than a forty-seven cent pair of breeches."

Toronto Loses Her Brilliant Pianist

Toronto is to lose one of her ablest and most distinguished musicians in J. D. A. Tripp, who has been called one of the most brilliant pianists before the American public. As one of the senior teachers of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, a member of its board of examiners and a prominent concert pianist, Mr. Tripp has attained a reputation throughout the Dominion as one of the foremost Canadian musicians.

Mr. Tripp was conductor of the Toronto Male Chorus Club for 13 years and also of the University of Toronto Glee Club. He was this season selected president of the Conservatory Alumnea Association and more than once has filled the same position in the Toronto Clef Club, an organization composed of the principal Toronto musicians and one of the strongest clubs in the city. Mr. Tripp has decided to make his home in Vancouver.

The greatest regret is expressed in Toronto over the loss of Mr. Tripp but it is safe to say that his adoption of the Western City will be productive of even finer results than in Toronto while the advantage to musical interests of having so able a musician in such an immense territory where such ability is needed doubly, is well nigh incalculable.

Blown to Pieces By Dynamite Stick Carried in Pocket.

CAUGHNAWAGA INDIAN MAY HAVE CHOSEN GHASTLY WAY OF COMMITTING SUICIDE.

Montreal, August 10.

Carrying with him a stick of dynamite of sufficient power to blast from its position thousands of tons of rock, or to crumple down the greatest building of which Montreal boasts, Tim Smith, a Caughnawaga Indian, late last night tripped and fell. This morning portions of his shattered body were found within a radius of several hundred yards, along the path leading to the Caughnawaga stone quarries.

Smith, who was aged about twenty-four years, had been on an extended debauch. His death may have been a deliberate suicide. He was an employee at the quarries, and knew very well the fearful danger of the capped dynamite stick, so that it is hardly conceivable he would have handled it carelessly had he not desired to put an end to himself, depressed and discouraged, as he was, after his lengthy dissipation. He had not been working for a few days and must previously have concealed a stick of dynamite about him.

He was on a path near the quarries when the explosion took place, the terrific force tearing a great hole in the ground, and hurling the man's body for hundreds of feet around the ghastly fragments.

Nearly one hundred yards from the spot where the explosion took place, the bleeding stump of a leg was found. Three hundred yards away, another portion of his body was discovered, and all about in a large radius there were bits of flesh and bone.

The accident is the first of its kind which has ever occurred at Caughnawaga, and has been reported to the coroner.

RUBBER BARBARITIES

ATROCITIES EQUAL TO THOSE OF CONGO UNMASKED IN PERU.

Peruvian-Amazon Rubber Company's Territory In Eastern Peru Is Reported to Be the Scene of Terrible Crimes Against the Natives, and Sir Edward Grey Is Taking Steps to Wipe Out the Evil—Wholesale Massacres.

Horrible as were the atrocities in the Congo region of Africa, when the agents of King Leopold mutilated and murdered at will the poor natives who failed to furnish the amount of crude rubber demanded of them, they are equalled today, perhaps, indeed, exceeded, by the barbarities practiced in eastern Peru.

This region is rich in trees, or vines, which yield the crude material, and was worked by the simple natives under an agreement with the Government of Peru. Ten years ago the Government granted the right of gathering rubber to the Peruvian Amazon Rubber Co. It was a sad day for the natives when this concession was made. Formerly, the gatherers in their canoes paddled up the rivers and streams and after securing all the rubber they could handle returned to some central station where the product was sold to the Government.

But the Peruvian Amazon Rubber Co. changed all this. They laid impossible, or practically impossible, tasks upon the natives and then punished them, very often with death, for not performing them. Their greed for gold, or for the rubber which yielded it, was insatiable and in gratifying this rapacity they stopped at no crime and were restrained by no dictates of humanity.

The Foreign Minister of England, Sir Edward Grey, has documentary evidence of the shocking barbarities perpetrated by the company, or its agents, and now is seeking to put an end to the horrors. To the disgrace of Peru, there is evidence of a close connection between the Government and the company.

In the evidence before the English Government numerous instances of shocking atrocities are cited. One of them deals with the appearance at a clearing in the rubber forest of a band of Peruvian rubber collectors, all of whom were armed and most of whom were half castes and semi-barians, clothed with the authority of the Peruvian Amazon Rubber Co., whose agents they were. They attacked the natives, presumably because they were not producing rubber fast enough, and killed 25 of them. Then they took the Indian, or native, women of advanced age, whose presence and the necessity of caring for whom might retard the work of gathering the rubber, and rowed them to the centre of the Amazon river where they killed them. Other incidents are cited where the agents of the Peruvian Amazon Rubber Co. seized the men who were engaged in collecting rubber for another concern and after tormenting them put them to death. Some of these are well attested, the cases having been investigated by the Colombian consul stationed at Manaos, Brazil.

One instance is recorded where the heads of natives who had been put to death were brought in by agents of the company at headquarters. At Ultimo Retiro, one of the stations, a shocking massacre of the natives was carried out by a company agent named Fonseca. The natives, or Indians, had been invited to the station and when they were assembled, unsuspecting and unarmed Forseca and six of his men began a merciless slaughter. The report says:

"Fonseca with his machete massacred right and left the poor wretches, who bathed in blood and in the agonies of death, dragged themselves piteously over the ground, appealing in vain for mercy. This tragedy over, Forseca ordered all the bodies to be piled up and burned. This scene was still more horrible, for as soon as this order was obeyed and they were being burned cries of agony and desperation resounded on every side, these proceeding from those victims still living, who, aroused by the fire, gathered strength to cry and lament for a few moments while they were being consumed by the devouring flames.

After satiating his fury Fonseca cried out, "I want to exterminate all the Indians who do not obey my orders about the rubber that I require them to bring in!"

The natives who are thus being slaughtered are a simple and kindly people, naturally so orderly that they never go armed. The atrocities of which they are the victims should be ended, if not by proper representation to the Peruvian Government, then by force. A Government which permits them or connives at them should not be permitted to live.

The commercial world will note that the company is producing more rubber than ever before. In 1900, before the company took charge, the production amounted to $1,500,000; in 1907 it had reached $6,000,000, and last year it was $8,900,000. And yet there are less gatherers now than 10 years ago.

MUSIC HATH CHARMS.

But For the Most Part the Savage Beasts Were Immune.

One morning not long ago, before the weather got so hot that the lion longed for the comfort of the tropical jungle, a party of three made a pilgrimage to the Riverdale Zoo on an unusual quest. It was to make observations and photographs upon the effect which different music as rendered by a phonograph has upon different animals.

There is the usual temptation to offer hasty conclusions as to the character of animals from the manner in which they received different selections, but this will be resisted, while a few general and safe conclusions are hazarded. For example, the noble lion was regarded as a fit subject for something robust. Ah, we have it. We will try Caruso on him. With the first mild notes of the Italian songster, the lion stood and pawed the floor in the keenest animation. Then as Caruso warmed up the lion became more attentive, and as the song grew in volume until the roof fairly raised, the king of the jungle turned and stood facing the phonograph horn in a state of wrapt contemplation that was a tribute to the king of tenors.

Of all the unresponsive inhabitants of the Zoo, the goats took the prize. This experiment just put them where they belong in the scale of culture. The phonograph man hunted out a Sousa march which we felt sure would be popular in goat pastures. But it had no effect whatever. Cornet solos and other delicacies were tried in vain, but when a resourceful attendant put some grass in the mouth of the horn there was a procession up the inclined post that did more credit to the goat stomach than to the goat brain.

The procession of experimenters presently visited the Scotch deer. Here, we thought, is an opportunity to test this clanishness to the utmost. So out over the Don Flats there pealed Harry Lauder in his best voice, singing "Stop Yer Ticklin', Jock." The so-called Scotch deer must have come from a remote fastness, for Harry Lauder had no charms for him, and he remained at the far side of his pen and would not be comforted.

The llama made a picturesque effect as he came up to the phonograph, all alertness and curiosity. He was evidently pleased with the cornet solo selected for his diversion. When we came to the buffalo wolves we had real wild things to deal with. A band selection drove them hither and thither over the pen. Then we remembered the old story of the man lost in the woods who saved his life by soothing the wolves with a violin. So we put in a violin solo by Mischa Elman. The result was that the wolf stood on his hind legs, threw his head back and howled.

So the narrative might go on. The monkeys jumped about and scolded; the peacock strutted at the sound of the band music; the brown bears tried to dance on hearing the band play; while the eagles, who were unresponsive to all other efforts, were all alive on hearing a yodel song by Madame Schumann-Heink.—The Toronto Globe.

Growth of Postoffice.

The figures show that in the ten years previous to the Postmaster-General's report for last year, new postoffices had been established at the rate of one for every working-day. With the tremendous inrush of people into the Canadian West this rate of extension must be greatly accelerated. Last year, the postoffices in the provinces west of the Great Lakes numbered 2,716, as against 645 in the same territory twenty years ago. In Saskatchewan alone there were, last year, 861 postoffices, or almost one third more than in the whole of the West in 1889. The increase has not been in the West alone, however, but has been general throughout the Dominion. Ontario last year had 3,694 postoffices, as against 3,228 ten years ago, and 2,971 twenty years ago. That the increase in postoffices means better facilities for existing population as well as new facilities for new places is proven by the fact that Prince Edward Island, which has increased but little in population, had, last year, 465 postoffices as against 409 in 1899, and 315 in 1889. For New Brunswick the figures are 1,397 for 1909 as against 1,180 ten years ago, and 1,085 twenty years ago. The number of offices in the Yukon last year was 21.

Blow the Trumpets

The Peterboro Examiner thinks a city or town which has not a public demonstration to attract outsiders at least once a year lacks progressive spirit. It says:

"While Peterboro may be said to be a progressive city, at the same time there is one feature of city life, at least, in which it may be said to be sadly lacking and that is in the manner of public demonstrations, holidays attractions, or something that will not only keep many of its people in the city on public holidays but that will also attract people from towns and villages in this portion of the Province.

"Mostly every town of city, of any importance in Ontario has its annual big attraction. The citizens of the city, or town, as the case may be pride themselves in this event, and exert all their energies year in and year out towards making the affair more successful than the affair of the previous year, and equal to any attraction of their rival towns. And so we have the Cobourg Horse Show, the Guelph Fat Stock Exhibition, the Canadian Henley at St. Catharines the Galt Horse Show, and scores of other leading attractions that are distinctive features, in so far as their respective towns are concerned and which not only advertise the town, but attract to it people from all the nearby towns and villages or in fact from all over the province."

There is a certain amount of truth in what the Examiner says. As a town or city grows in size and importance to citizens are apt to think they can get along without the holiday demonstrations, with their trades parades, sporting events, band tournaments, etc., which they were wont to go to no end of trouble to arrange. As a consequence the amusement-loving element is apt to run to Toronto on highdays and holidays, spending much money which might better be left at home. Of course Belleville has done her fair share this year with the Old Boys' Reunion, but it may well be asked, has not the city, in recent years, been a little backward in providing holiday amusements for the younger element? Many people think so, at all events.

Hon. Mr. Murphy Again

Mr. Charles Murphy is at it again As a result of the disclosures in the Printing Bureau there are a number of vacancies. These vacancies he has set himself to fill by the old way. For some time the reformed system of appointments which Mr. R. L. Borden forced on the Government has been in effect, and when a department desires men to fill positions it applies to the Civil Service Commissioners, who advertise for applicants for the vacancies, but whereas when other Minister's want men the advertisement says to apply to the Civil Service Commissioners, these advertisements said, apply to Mr. Murphy

The Civil Service Commissioners objected, and claimed the right to name the appointments. Mr. Murphy resisted and carried his point. The appointments will be made by him. The Civil Service Commission is good enough for the other Ministers, but not for Mr. Murphy.

Not for the Rising Statesman. His feet stand in the old paths.

Teachers on Tour.

Good results should be certain to flow from the visit of the Canadian teachers to England. A big party of some 160 ladies and gentlemen from the schools of Central Canada are now learning geography at first hand. On August 5, they will finish their visit in London where they are studying not only the new places, but are having the privilege of visiting the House of Commons, the English education department, where they have been received by Mr. Runciman, the Minister of Education. A notable day has been spent at Lambeth Palace where they were received by the Archbishop of Canterbury. On leaving London they will make a grand tour of the provinces, and the last of their six weeks tour will be spent on the continent, seeing Paris, and the Brussels Exhibition. It would be well for English folk that similar facilities were afforded to their school teachers for widening their outlook by studying the problems of the Empire from Canada in holiday times.

I. O. O. F. Grand Lodge

FIFTY-SIXTH SESSION OPENED YESTERDAY IN TORONTO OVER SIX MILLIONS IN BENEFITS DISTRIBUTED LAST YEAR.

Toronto, August 11—The fifty-sixth session of the Grand Lodge, Independent Order of Oddfellows, was opened yesterday forenoon in the Y. M. C. A. Hall on Yonge street.

The Hon. D. Derbyshire, Brockville presided at the opening session which was attended by all the leading members, of the order, numbering 600 in all. Mayor Geary, who was present welcomed the Grand Lodge on behalf of the local lodges. The Grand Master replied in graceful terms on behalf of the 45,000 Oddfellows in Ontario.

In his opening address, the Grand Master referred to the benefits of the Society, and stated that last year, the order as a whole distributed over $6,000,000 in relief.

The report of J. B. King, Grand Secretary, was full and complete. Reference was made to the fourteen new lodges that had been instituted during the year; to the usefulness of the O. F. R. A., which had paid out in its financial year $221,880.52 in benefits, and held over $837,000 in assets; to the splendid service of the fraternal press, headed by the Independent Odd Fellow; to the need of a new history of Odd Fellowship, bringing it up to the present date To the great growth of membership in the order, and to the $128,380.72 that had been spent in relief, sick and funeral benefits last year; to the 121 veterans' jewels which had been presented during the year, and to the gratifying reports which had been received from the lodges in every part of the jurisdiction.

The Oddfellows' Home Board reported that the net cost for the maintenance of the home and orphanage last year was $2,023.36, and the net surplus at the end of the year was $22,471.55. Early in April the directors sold the Oddfellows' home at Oakville for $35,500, and a new property was purchased on the northeast corner of Davenport Road and Ossington avenue, Toronto, for $35,000. As values are going in Toronto the new property in a few years will be worth $50,000. From the sale of the home a net profit, after deducting the expense of transfer, was $17,000, as the original investment in the property at Oakville was but $18,318.88. In the home at present there are six aged people and six children, and applications have been made for many other admissions.

Although not definitely announced, it is understood that Major Evanson, of Prescott, has been elected Grand Warden. It is not yet known how many candidates there will be for the Grand Mastership, the election for which takes place today but at present the candidates are Joseph Powley, the Grand Scribe, and Col. Miller, Peterboro.

Moved by Judge E. C. S. Huycke seconded by J. F. Clarke, and endorsed by speeches of Wm. J. Crossen car manufacturer, and Reeve Wm. J Maher, of Cobourg; Mayor Robert A. Mulholland, of Port Hope; Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Belleville; R. S. Hudson, General Manager Canada Permanent Mortgage Corporation, Toronto; Edward T. Adams, M. D. Toronto; R. J. McLaughlin, K. C., Toronto; Joseph Knox and James Mark of Havelock; Col. H. A. Ward, K. C Port Hope, H. T. Bush, President, Standard Ideal Company, Port Hope.

"Resolved that the shareholders of the Northumberland-Durham Power Company, Limited, in general meeting assembled, desire to place on record their high appreciation of the services of John Alexander Culverwell, Managing Director and Advisory Engineer of company, in connection with its business from the beginning down to the present time We recognize that his untiring energy, ability and perseverance amidst great difficulties and in the face of apparently insurmountable obstacles have been of the highest value and service to the company and have brought the business of the company to a very satisfactory issue. When all this is remembered we feel strongly that no words can adequately express our confidence in his integrity and our indebtedness to Mr. Culverwell for his untiring zeal and unflagging energy in our behalf.'

Carried unanimously by standing vote.

There were present at this meeting also a number of members of two other syndicates owning water power properties on the Trent River who were partners with the Northumberland-Durham Power Co., namely, the Culverwell-Campbellford District Power Syndicate, and the Culverwell Trenton District Syndicate, who also heartily endorse the resolution.

In all there were about sixty gentlemen present, and there was no dissenting voice, though there was a great deal of discussion.

It was explained that although a deal had been financed with leading Montreal capitalists to the extent of two million dollars capital and a firm contract made, yet on account of the properties of these three concerns being in many cases connected with other properties of an opposing Power Company being stubborn—it was finally decided by the Culverwell interests to sell out for cash, which was done

All shareholders made a handsome profit in the sales and cheques have been and are still being issued to pay off the stock. The decision of the directors in having made the sale and thus relieving the situation was considered wise and was heartily endorsed by the shareholders.

The properties interested in this deal are simply those properties located south of Rice Lake on the Trent River, and this deal in no way has any connection with another Power Company, namely — The Central Ontario Power Company, Limited, which owns Burleigh Falls and Buckhorn Falls powers located north of Peterboro.

These properties will be developed at once under the managing direction of Mr. Culverwell and already contracts have been secured from the leading manufacturers of Cobourg and Port Hope the local directors of the Company being Messrs. Wm. J. Crossen, Cobourg, car manufacturer; Col. H. A. Ward, K. C., and H. T. Bush, President Standard Ideal Co., Port Hope, and J. A. Culverwell, Port Hope, besides other Toronto directors There are already a large number of local district people interested as shareholders.

Growing Corn For Cob Pipes.

Probably not one smoker in a hundred who likes the "real American pipe"—the corncob—is aware of the fact that many acres in Ohio, Illinois, Missouri and Nebraska are devoted to raising corn for the especial purpose of producing cobs suitable for fashioning into pipe bowls. The grain itself is marketed, of course, but the cob on which it grows is the real harvest and is cut carefully into proper lengths, smoothed and polished, the soft inner pulp being gouged out by specially constructed machinery. The corncob pipe goes to every country in the world where men smoke and is especially in favor in Australia and New Zealand, where it is regarded as characteristically American, because it suggests the idea of Yankee ingenuity. The brier is the favorite with Englishmen, who are probably the greatest pipe smokers in the world.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

ROYAL EDWARD OF CANADIAN NORTHERN LINE BEATS ALL COMPETITORS.

Montreal, Aug. 11—A unique transatlantic record was established last night, when the Royal Edward of the Canadian Northern Steamship Line docked here six days following her departure from the British port of Bristol. This is the first time that any steamer has completed the journey from an English port to Montreal within six days. The Royal Edward reached Quebec at 10.50 a.m. yesterday, beating all previous Canadian transatlantic records by over six and a half hours; she also reduced the land-to-land record by several hours being only three days fourteen and one-half hours in the run from the English to the Canadian coast.

IN MEMORIAM

FRANCIS FOSTER.

Francis Foster was born in Ireland March the 23rd, 1854, and departed this life from his home on the 6th concession of Sidney July the 26th 1910, as the result of a fatal fall from his load in the hay field received a couple of weeks previous to his death. Mr. Foster, was an old, much esteemed resident of Sidney, living upon the old Foster homestead for many years, caring for and comforting his aged parents until they passed the bar. He married Miss Ida Scott in 1890, four children blessed their union, two of whom survive him. Some time after her death he married Mrs. George Evans who likewise proved a true helpmate and remains with the children to mourn the loss of a loving husband and a devoted father. Mr. Foster was soundly converted to God about 30 years ago, during a wonderful revival conducted by Rev. W. H. Peake, Rev. Mr. Young Mr. Vermilyea,, Hallelujah Band, etc., in the old Wesleyan Methodist Church, Frankford, in which many of the present standard bearers of Frankford Methodism enlisted. From the time of his conversion until his death our brother lived a consistent, faithful and influential member of the Methodist church. On the death of his brother, Thomas, Frank was elected to take his place as leader in which position he commanded the respect and esteem of his class and the entire church, many of whom wept tears like rain as they surrounded the last resting place of their beloved leader and heard dust to dust and ashes to ashes. Our brother was a true consistent loyal Orangeman and did honor to this society and to his church, by honoring all men, loving brotherhood, fearing God and honoring the King. The loyal Orange society did honor to so good a man in watching by his suffering couch, smoothing the painful pathway to his grave, marching in his funeral procession, dropping mementos of love into his resting place, sharing with the Methodist church the solemn service of the dead The funeral sermon was preached from Job 14:14, by his pastor, Rev. J. S. McMullen in Frankford Methodist Church to an immense concourse of people of all churches and members of the Loyal Orange Association This good man's life was service— his heart was sympathy — his end was peace — his eternity must be bliss O may we triumph so. As Tennyson sung:

Sunset and evening star, and one clear call for me,
And may there be no moaning of the bar when I put out to sea.

The Broken Trust

"Have you heard any news Blanche?' he asked, anxiously, "that I see trace of tears?".

"No," she answered, "there could be no news that could be move me so unless—nothing has happened to my father."

"No," he replied, gently. "It was he who asked me to come."

"He asked you to come?" she said bitterly. "Have you been offered a peerage, that you should be an acceptable suitor to Lord Damar's daughter."

"Something very unforeseen and terrible has happened," he said," and Lord Damar thought I could bring you the intelligence."

Still no idea of the truth entered her mind.

"What is it?" she asked. "Do not fear to tell me. Is it duns or bailiffs or is papa quite ruined? Have no fear ever since I was ten years old I have been waiting for some such news.

"It is more than that. You did not love Sir Alan, Blanche, and he was even less worthy your liking than you believed him to be. I have come to tell you the contract that bound you two together is null and void—you are free."

A beautiful, tender gleam of light came over her face.

"Free!" she cried raising her face to the morning skies. "Free!" how can it be, Vivian.

"I do not want to startle you." he said. "You are free because he is dead."

Dead! It was not possible; why, it seemed only yesterday that he had left her full of life, and strength, and animation. Dead! While the sun shone and the crisp, fresh waves broke with a musical ripple on the shore!

"I am very sorry," she replied gently. "I did not like him, but I am sorry he is dead. How and when was it?"

Suddenly, while the sad gravity stole over her beautiful face, she remembered that the man before her was now master of Carsdale, in his own right, and that she was free.

"I almost began to wish," he said "that some one else had undertaken to tell you the story."

"Not so," she replied gently "whether it be good or evil report let me hear it from your lips.

She sank again upon the piece of fallen rock and he upon the sands at her feet.

He never forgot the horror in her face as he told of the base, shameful fraud. She only interrupted him once, to ask him, with quivering lips how she ought to thank God best that she had escaped such a man. Horror indignation, shame, scorn, all these died away when he told her of Esther Bruce's agony.

"He could not have been all bad," she murmured, "or such a girl would never have loved him so much."

Lady Blanche wept over Esther as she had never wept over herself.

"I always thought that girl was noble," she said, "her face struck me from the first; and he was the lover of whom she nearly died! Oh Vivian, how she has suffered!"

"Yes," he said, gravely, "and pitiful as was his life, cowardly his death her love throws a halo over both Blanche, Carsdale is mine now; it ought to have been mine long ago. I value it as I value my title, because, my darling, they will win you. Lord Damar will not say nay when I ask for his daughter.'

She made no reply, but a look of great content came over the beautiful-face, such an expression of perfect peace and rest as he had not seen there since the December day when, under the gray light of the wintry sky, she said farewell to her love.

"We will not speak of that time now," said Sir Vivian; "when the grass has grown upon his grave, and the mists of death have passed, I shall come again, Blanche, and ask you to be my wife."

For one-half moment she thought she must be dreaming — his wife! When only an hour before she had been weeping over her lost and blighted future.

Sir Vivian had left Lady Blanche where he had found her — on the sands. It was understood between them that his visit should not be mentioned, and that she, Lady Blanche, must keep the dead man's secret.

Lady Belmont was sitting aghast with the morning paper in her hand; she overwhelmed Lady Blanche with tears and condolences.

"So very shocking, my dear, so terrible. No wonder you look white and bewildered. You have heard the news I see."

"Yes, I have heard," replied Lady Blanche, in a faint, trembling voice

"Killed by the sudden explosion of a revolver," said Lady Belmont. "Poor Sir Alan! That handsome young officer will be lord of Carsdale. I always preferred his style to the late baronet's."

Ainsi va le monde — the man who had loved the world with so terrible and fatal love was forgotten before he was buried.

And Lady Blanche, by night and by day, repeated:

"How could she best thank God, for having escaped such a man?"

ARE ALWAYS THE SAME.

Some of the Splendid Qualities Which Distinguish the Irish.

"I like an Irishman because he never ceases to be an Irishman," declares Job Hedges. "I know some other people who cease to be lots of things, sometimes without any visible regret on the faces of their neighbors.

"I have never known of an Irishman who objected to how much somebody else had, if he had enough. I have never known of an Irishman, however much he had, who would not divide with a human being whom he loved and who had less than he had.

"An Irishman never gives the power of attorney. An Irishman is never diffident, because he is born with a degree of confidence in himself and his extraction which is clear, comprehensive and all embracing. I never knew an Irishman that would not help somebody in distress.

"There is no climate or country in the world that can destroy the good spirits of an Irishman. Irishman have said more in short sentences than most people have narrated in books.

"There is no need of passing much time in describing the Irish. They admit it. There is no need of telling a man he is great when that is his first instinct. There is no need of telling a man what he has done when he did it first and did it intentionally.

"But the Irish race has stirred more emotions in the human breast than any other race that walks the earth. They have gone through the gamut of human experience, and they have never surrendered their personality.

"You can persuade an Irishman to do something, but you cannot make him. The only subject I have ever heard them agree on was Ireland and the Irish, and on that they are a unit. They are not always strong in aggression, but when they are on the defense you cannot tell how many of them there are, because they only look like one."

The Art of Writing.

Writing began with the rude picture writing on bone and rock and passed slowly by a natural and inevitable transition from the literal representations of the objects to the symbolic suggestion of idea, to a word alphabet and then to pure sound signs. The whole process is manifest from the very infancy of Egyptian picture writing, as crude as that with which the savage peoples still record their deeds. From these crude signs the process went on in its slow transformation to the phonetic writing typified in the Kosetha stone to the Phoenician, Greek and Roman modifications which brought us to the arbitrary sound symbols which the voice combines into articulate speech.

An Arctic Bill of Fare.

The Eskimos at home in their native frozen wilds do not believe in cooking. Their meat, be it seal, fish, venison, trout, salmon, whale blubber or codfish, they devour in its natural raw state and with the same gusto with which the average small boy tackles a watermelon.

As for bread and vegetables, they have none of them. They set their seal oil lamps going, suspend a soapstone dish filled with snow over it, and with the water thus obtained they mix an equal quantity of molasses procured from the Hudson Bay Co. That they drink and are happy. That is the sum total of an Arctic cuisine.

A Star That Winks.

There is in the constellation Pegasus a little variable star that may reasonably be said to wink. Two or three times in the course of a single night this curious star can be seen to fade and then to brighten like a signal light. For about two and three-quarter hours it becomes fainter and fainter. Then comes a change, and at the end of two and three-quarter hours more it is as bright as at the beginning. Unfortunately it can be seen only with a telescope. Yet it ranks as a sun.

Her Troubles.

Single Man (to himself)—I am sure that darling little angel loves me. She takes me into her confidence and tells me all her troubles.

Same Man (some years later)—Confound it all! From morning till night and night till morning when I'm at home I hear nothing but tales about the servants, the butcher, the butler, the baker, the candlestick maker and all the rest of 'em.

The Limit.

Mr. Cribbs—Mrs. C., I have borne with resignation—nay, even cheerfulness—antique chairs that wabbled, antique clocks that were always thirteen hours behind time, antique rugs that some prehistoric Turks wove, antique china, antique bowls, pans and kettles. All this I have smiled at, but when you give me antique eggs for breakfast I draw the line, madam; I draw the line.

Qualified.

"That boy of mine," said Nupopp proudly, "is going to be a great baseball enthusiast some day."

"I'd like to know how you can tell," rejoined his friend Bleecher. "He's only two weeks old."

"Yes," said Nupopp, "but he can yell louder than any chap of his age and weight I ever saw."

AVIATORS ARE INJURED

Walter Brookins Falls Under Aeroplane While Landing.

Herr Heim's Machine Crashes to Earth In Exhibition at Johanisthal, Germany, and Aviater's Injuries Are Considered Grave — Brookins' Nose Is Broken, But He Is Not Badly Hurt.

Asbury Park, N.J., Aug. 11.—Walter Brokins, the aviator, was seriously injured yesterday afternoon, while making a landing in his aeroplane, in a desperate effort to avoid injuring a crowd of spectators. Brookins saw that his machine was likely to strike a group of onlookers and he make a quick turn. The machine turned over and fell to the ground, striking several spectators in his descent.

Brookins was picked up stunned, badly bruised and with his nose broken, but his injuries are not fatal. Several spectators were injured.

Walter Brookins created a world's record for high flying on July 9 at Atlantic City, N.J., where he reached an elevation of 6,175 feet he received a $5,000 prize offered by the Atlantic City Aero Club. Brookins created other records for high flying at Indianapolis.

Walter Brookins shared with Count de Lesseps the honors of the Montreal meet, where he did some sensational high flying. He went to the Toronto aviation meet, but only remained for one day.

German Aviator Hurt.

Johanisthal, Germany, Aug. 11.—The aeroplanist Heim met with a serious accident at the aviation meeting here yesterday afternoon. While flying at a height of about 225 feet in a Wright machine, one of the propellors broke. The other continued to run causing the shaft to turn over several times. It fell with a crash and was completely demolished. Heim was immediately carried off the field unconscious. Later he regained consciousness, but his injuries are considered very grave.

Fall From Car Fractured Skull.

Ottawa, Aug. 11.—While on her way to Rockliffe Park to attend a picnic Tuesday, Mrs. Israel Pare, aged 42, either fell or was thrown from a street car, just as it was going round a curve. Her skull was fractured, causing death at one of the city hospitals at 5.30 yesterday morning. She leaves a large family.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Hogs Active and Higher—Cattle Steady, Prices Unchanged.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Aug. 10.—(Special.)—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market the offerings this morning were 650 cattle, 600 sheep and lambs, 800 hogs and 250 calves. Owing to the smaller supply of cattle, there was a firmer undertone to the market, and prices in some cases were a trifle higher than on Monday. The weather was unfavorable, it being warm and sultry, consequently the demand from butchers was somewhat limited, and only for small lots to fill actual wants. Choice steers sold at 6c to 6¼c; good at 5¾c to 5⅞c; fairly good at 5c to 5½c; fair at 4½c to 4¾c, and common at 4c to 4½c per lb. The trade in cows was slow at prices ranging from 4c to 5¼c, and bulls at 3c to 4¾c per lb.

Owing to the increased demand for sheep and lambs for export account, the tone of the market continues strong, and prices have scored a further advance of ¼c per lb. for the former and 50c each for the latter. Selected lots of sheep sold at 4c to 4¼c, and the culls at 3¾c to 3¾c per lb. Sales of lambs were made at $4 to $6 each, as to size and quality.

The demand for calves was good at prices ranging from $3 to $12 each. The market for hogs was weaker, on account of the more liberal supplies, and prices ruled lower than on Monday. At the reduction the demand from packers was fair, and sales of selected lots were made at $9 to $9.50 per hundred pounds, weighed off cars, and rough, heavy stock at $8.50.

At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market the supply of live stock offered consisted of 450 cattle, 360 sheep and lambs, 875 hogs and 350 calves. A fair trade was done in all lines, and the prices realized were much the same as those quoted above, with the exception of hogs, which sold at $9.50 per hundred pounds, weighed off cars, for selected lots.

Windsor Wants Public Dock.

Windsor, Aug. 11.—Following a short visit, which William Pugsley, Minister of Public Works, paid to Windsor on his way up the lakes, there will probably be a renewal of the agitation for a Government dock here. On looking over the river front the Minister admitted the need of a public dock. Plans, prepared by Maj. Lamb, of London, Government engineer for the western district, will be discussed on the trip up the lakes.

Will Not Be Governor.

Ottawa, Aug. 11.—J. G. Turriff, M.P. for East Assiniboia, has returned to Ottawa, after spending a month in western Canada. He denies the report that he is either slated for or wants an appointment in the near future as Lieutenant-Governor of Saskatchewan. The new governor in succession to Lieutenant-Governor Forget will, it is understood, be a Saskatchewan man.

Slated for Vice-President.

Ottawa, Aug. 11.—It is expected that T. F. Ferguson, Toronto, vice-president, will be elected grand president of the Supreme Grand Lodge of Oddfellows when the officers are elected to-day. Yesterday the delegates were busy on routine work. Last night 300 of them were guests of Mayor Hopewell and the city at a banquet at Aylmer.

The damage and waste caused by smoke in the larger cities of the United States each year is estimated at $500,000,000 by an official of the Geological Survey, who says his figures are conservative.

COT BY THE SEA

How a Woman With Ideas Furnished Her Home.

AN INGENIOUS EXPEDIENT.

A Beautiful Plan to Amuse Children on a Rainy Afternoon—In China They Call "Hello" Girls by Poetical Names. The New Outing Hat.

Dear Elsa—I have been spending the week end with some friends of mine who have bought a wee cot (which really isn't wee) at a summer resort about an hour's ride from New York city. This gabled cottage looks for all the world like the gardener's lodge of an English country estate. It is only one story and a half high, but rambles over a fifth of an acre of ground and has bewildering nooks and crannies both inside and out. Don't you love such a place? The lower portion of the house is of dull soft red brick. The upper part is of gray rough finished plaster inclosed in squares of dull black beams. The casement windows open on charming views of green woods and blue sea. Can't you see the place in your mind's eye, and the porch, too, which shelters a high backed settle on either side of the door?

And where the big chimney juts out from the house wall there is a covering of wistaria and ivy. It's all so new, yet there's a delightful appearance of age about the place.

As I know that you are interested in houses, both inside and out, I am going to make you mentally see how this cottage owner who had ideas has arranged the exterior of her home. Here goes: The living room would seem rather bare to any one who had a taste for artistic litter, but, thank goodness, that age is mostly past. There are in this living room built-in bookshelves breast high, with square windows opening above them, and these high windows are gay with red geraniums. There is a big double writing table lighted by two large, low, chintz shaded lamps of crystal with straight columns and a flattened bowl for oil. The chairs are of brown wicker with cushions of brown art serge and of chintz in big old fashioned pattern in tones of brown and red. A long low couch at one side of the room is covered in brown leather. Above the polished bookcases of brown oak the walls are painted a warm shade of yellow.

FROCK OF SCOTCH GINGHAM.

The dining room is a mass of sunshiny color, as the owner of the cottage believes in reversing the order of things. A bright, happy looking dining and a dim, somber living room are the result. The woodwork of the dining room is a dull white, and the walls are hung with a cool sunny shade of green. On the simple buffet are some stunning pieces of copper and a brass samovar. These with a few old blue plates make a pleasing effect against the green walls.

The mistress' sleeping room is furnished in rather an unusual manner. The woodwork is stained silvery gray, and the chairs, bookshelves, writing table (the room served for boudoir as well), dressing table and bedstead are of the same tint. The walls are hung with two toned striped French gray paper to the picture rail. The ceiling, which is brought down low, is papered with a design of gray lattice through which creep masses of purple wistaria and pale green leaves. The covers on dressing table and bed and the hangings at the doors and windows are of chintz which exactly matches the ceiling paper. Under the double window at one end of the room is a couch covered with wistaria chintz. My soul found an uplift and a delight in this house that it has not experienced for some time. Really my sensations were what I imagine a cat feels when it purs for sheer content.

Do you remember the time I got that tight ring on my finger and couldn't get it off? Well, I watched a mother remove a ring from a child's finger the other day that recalled the incident. The child had put over his chubby finger a ring much too small for it, and the flesh on either side began to swell. Crying with fright and some pain, I imagine, it ran to mother, who with the calmest manner in the world began to make preparations for removing the ring even while trying to comfort her offspring. She threaded a flat eyed needle with linen, which was strong but not coarse, soaped it and passed the head of the needle under the ring. She pulled it a few inches toward the hand and wrapped the other end of the thread tightly and regularly around the finger toward the nail. She then took hold of the needle and began slowly to unwind the coil, carrying the ring along with the thread until it slipped easily from the end of the finger. It was a painless operation; in fact, it interested the child so much that it forgot to fret. I asked the mother where she learned the trick, and she told me that she once had an experience with a tight ring which a jeweler removed for her in just that way. She always remembered it and found it useful in many cases before she had a family of her own. Knowledge like this is of value, as I often reflect when I see it put to practical use, and then I promptly forget to use the same knowledge when an occasion arises.

And while on juvenile topics let me tell you how an armful of paper bound up the broken hearts of a half dozen children the other afternoon who were house bound by the rain when they had anticipated a picnic. It was the big sister of one of the children who came upon the scene when disappointment was at its height with a panacea for the "dumps." Under one arm were half a dozen dolls of as many sizes and under the other arm rolls of crape and tissue paper and a handful of the most suggestive things, such as coils of wire, some tinsel of various sorts and some tiny artificial flowers, thread, needles and a tube of paste. Until the supper bell warned the group that the afternoon was over the room looked like a miniature millinery shop. Even automobile, Shaker and Quaker bonnets were turned out in more or less nice imitation of Fifth avenue models. And every lassie voted that she had had a finer time then if the rain had not interrupted her plans.

For the last few days I've been absorbed in the mysteries of dressmaking, and the tub frock of Scotch gingham which I've sketched for you is the result of my labors. It is a blue and white check trimmed with a plain blue of the soft shade known as "blotting paper." I'm just crazy about the odd arrangement of the collar and cuffs with their insertions of black ribbon and frills of plaited muslin. I do hope you like the creation.

A man has been fixing the telephone while I have been scribbling to you, and I'm almost insane with buzzing noises. By the way, do you know that in China the "hello" girl is called either "lily of the air" or "butterfly that talks?" Here in the United States we are apt to call a spade a spade, with no flowery names to embellish the appellation of that humble and useful article the telephone. Imagine central answering to "sweet lily of the air!" She'd very likely reply: "Say, what do you want? Hurry up and don't get gay." Yours devotedly, MABEL.

Housekeeping Hints.

When preserving, after emptying a glass jar of fruit or jelly, wash and dry thoroughly and fill with sugar. Keep in a dry place, and when ready to preserve or make jelly you need only to buy the fruit, as you have the sugar.

Table Linen.—The cheapest table linen may be made to take on a sheen as beautiful as the finest linen by ironing in this manner. After the linen has been carefully washed and boiled rinse carefully and then roll up in a clean dry sheet and leave for one hour. Iron until thoroughly dry. The linen will escape the wear and tear of swinging on the line and will not get out of shape as when dried in the usual way.

Autograph Cookbook.—An autograph cookbook is quite a new fad and a really desirable one. Any serviceable bound blank book will do. It should contain the favorite recipes of your friends and will not only be a memento of the writer, but will be a valuable household help.

Uses For Paper Bags.—Save all sizes of paper bags for fruit canning time, and when the fruit is ready to put away slip the jar in a bag, tie the top securely and write on the bag the name of contents.

FIGHT IN THE DARK

Story of a Duel In the Carpetbag Days In the South.

By ROCKFORD KING.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

My father was a South Carolinian. He was graduated at West Point, served twelve years in the artillery, married a northern woman and resigned. Some time after his death I found myself in possession of a plantation in his native state. This was shortly after the civil war, and a plantation in the south was worthless unless made valuable by close attention and special effort. Therefore I resolved to go and live on it and manage it myself.

That was the "carpetbag" period, and there was a great deal of prejudice against northerners. Strange as it may seem, my only intimate friends were two or three ex-officers of the disbanded Confederate armies. Among them was a physician, Dr. Armitage, who had been a regimental surgeon. These men not only called on me, but invited me to their houses. When I told them that I was doubtful as to whether it would pay me to suffer the "slings and arrows" constantly fired at me by my neighbors they promised to stand by me, and if I would be patient the persecution would eventually die down.

AS WE PASSED HIM HE HISSED "YANKEE CUR!"

Rosalind Armitage, the doctor's daughter, was ten years my junior. There was in her veins through her mother the blood of Norway. This gave her a mingling of physical features that was peculiar, not to say beautiful. She had Titian hair, dark eyes, fair skin, with roses in the cheeks. She was a very hot rebel, but this did not keep us from falling in love with each other. Her father, though my senior by fifteen years, became my intimate friend, and he made no objection to the match. We were married, a few of the neighboring planters coming to the wedding. The balance would not attend the nuptials of a southern girl with a northern man.

The man who persecuted me most effectually was an Irishman named Murphy. He had been an overseer before the war and during the struggle had made money by getting cotton through the Federal lines and selling it at an enormous price. As soon as the Confederacy collapsed he bought a plantation near mine and began to court the society of those who had always regarded him as an inferior. His bitterness against me was intended as a means of currying favor with them.

When it became necessary in consequence of an insult received from Murphy that applied equally to me and to Dr. Armitage to call the enemy to account there arose between the doctor and me a dispute as to which should have the post of combatant. Murphy had stated publicly in the bar of the tavern that Armitage in receiving a "northern mudsill" into his family was a traitor to the south and that he (Murphy) proposed to drive me back north, where I came from. Here were two men insulted. I as the younger man and the first cause of the trouble argued that I should resent it. Dr. Armitage argued that as a northern man I was not fitted for such a contest with a southerner who had belonged to the poor white class, and it was his own part, both for himself and his daughter's husband, to chastise Murphy. And chastisement, of course, meant a shooting match.

Both Mrs. Armitage and my wife, who knew of the trouble, were very much frightened, understanding that Murphy's insult in South Carolina must be resented and dreading the consequences. Armitage called a meeting of several of his intimate friends and asked them what course they recommended him and me to pursue. They were very indignant at Murphy's act, and some were in favor of sending a committee to him to request that he leave the state. Neither the doctor nor I would assent to this. Then one of the planters asked if some ruse could not be adopted by which Murphy would be put out of the fight. This suggestion found favor with my father-in-law, and he adjourned the meeting, saying that he would think it over.

The result was that the next day he told me he had formed a plan. I was to purposely meet Murphy and slap his face. Some of our friends were to go with me to see that Murphy did not draw a knife or a pistol on me, the object being to force him to challenge me. The plan the doctor had in view turned upon the terms, which were sure to give me an advantage over my enemy—indeed, so great an advantage that, while I could conquer him, I need not kill him. In other words, the affair was to be not a duel, but a method of ridding us both of Murphy's persecution.

The next evening I went to the barroom of the tavern where Murphy had given the insult and where I knew he was to be found every evening drinking mint juleps. I entered the room with two friends, and, that I might not be considered to have come especially to find him, we called for juleps, paying no attention to Murphy, who sat at a table with another man. On seeing me he scowled, but said nothing till we had finished our juleps and were about to leave. As we passed him he hissed:

"Yankee cur!"

I brought the palm of my hand across his cheek and quickly stepped back, and my friends placed themselves between him and me. One of them said to him:

"You have repeatedly injured a man whose ancestors were South Carolinians. He is worthy of his fathers, and, though they were gentlemen, which you are not, he is ready to give you satisfaction. I shall expect to hear from you at my house at your convenience."

With that we left the tavern.

Mr. Murphy now had to choose between sending me a challenge and being considered in the neighborhood what he had called me—a "cur." The challenge came, and I handed it to Dr. Armitage. A reply went back that I would meet Murphy, but, being the challenged party, I must insist on my own terms. These were cavalry sabers in a dark room, the time limit of the contest to be fifteen minutes, at the expiration of which the doors were to be thrown open and the affair ended. The hour of the meeting was to be 8 o'clock p. m. or at twilight.

Twenty-four hours elapsed and we were beginning to think that Murphy had been bluffed when a reply came accepting the terms. A bedroom was secured at the tavern from which every article of furniture was removed except the carpet. There were but two windows, which were boarded up, rendering the room as nearly dark as possible.

At half past 7 Dr. Armitage, my second, and myself entered the tavern and passed upstairs to a waiting room that had been assigned us. The doctor took out of his vest pocket a vial and a camel's hair brush.

"Sit down there," he said, pointing to an easy chair.

I obeyed, and, dipping the brush in the vial, the doctor drew the former across my eyes. This done he bandaged them, and I remained for some twenty-five minutes in total darkness. At 8 o'clock the bandage was removed. I passed across a hallway and entered the room where I was to meet Murphy. There was another door by which he was introduced to the room. The two doors were closed simultaneously, and we were in total darkness.

At least we were supposed to be in total darkness. Murphy was really so. I was not. Dr. Armitage, having dilated the pupils of my eyes by means of a drug and then having kept them bandaged for awhile, had enabled me to take advantage of the little light that filtered through any crack in the windows or between the door and the sill. I was astonished, knowing, as I did, that every possible ray had been shut out from the room, that I could see Murphy with fair distinctness. I could also see that he was oblivious to every object in the room, including myself.

I advanced stealthily and touched his chest with the point of my saber. He drew back, and I made a detour to another part of the room. It was amusing to see him grope, every moment expecting that he might receive a thrust. I could not discover the expression on his face, but his attitudes were quite plain to me. Most of the time he sidled along the wall, but at the slightest sound from me would retreat in any direction his fright dictated.

For awhile I amused myself by getting quite near him and touching him with my saber. His agony at such times must have been extreme. But, finding that my increased sight was diminishing, I presently began to give him some stinging blows with the flat of the steel. In this way I felt justified in punishing him for his insolence and now and again belabored him soundly. He struck at me wildly, but I was never where his thrusts came or his blows fell. Once he made so quick a stab that I barely had time to avoid getting the point of his weapon in my ribs. Irritated, I approached him and gave him a blow on the cheek that drew blood. At that moment the doors were thrown open, and, with a cry of "Time's up!" the seconds rushed in to stop the fray.

The strain on Murphy had been so terrible that as soon as it was over he swooned. I think I should have done the same had an unseen enemy been thrusting a saber at me for a quarter of an hour, I expecting with every thrust to be killed. As it was, I got credit for extraordinary nerve, no one being in the secret except Dr. Armitage, my second, and myself. Neither Mr. Armitage nor my wife knew anything about the affair till it was all over.

Murphy never troubled us again.

BOXING

Langford Thinks He Could Beat Johnson.

The persistency of Sam Langford in seeking a match with Jack Johnson, the champion, and the confidence of Langford in his ability to beat the tall negro, says the New York Press, have challenged the attention of those interested in boxing. While it is known that Langford would be handicapped seriously in the matter of weight, size and reach, still his claim that he soon would bring Johnson down to his size and win on gameness and hitting has excited general interest. The apparent disinclination of Johnson to meet Langford in the ring has had its effect, and the champion seldom appears in public that he is not greeted with the query as to his failure to meet Langford.

Langford's faith in a victory for himself over Johnson is built on the result of a bout he had with Johnson four years ago, and in order to get Langford's version of the encounter he was asked to describe that bout. Langford had just finished a peppery set-to with George Byers, once a clever and able middleweight, when the challenger for the title was asked to tell how his fight with Johnson came out. With a wide grin the stout Boston negro, who has the trunk, shoulders and arms of a Hercules mounted on short, but serviceable legs, said:

"It was this way: Mistah Johnson and I had a fuss at Chelsea on April 26, 1906. It was to be fifteen rounds. I see he says he licked me good and plenty. If that there am the case then I ought to be very easy for him now, and he jes, ought to hurry and get some easy money licking me again.

"I was pretty light in them days, and I didn't weigh more than 148 pounds when I got into the ring. I suah give away fifty pounds to that gent Johnson, and he looked down on me just like he was on top of the Singer building.

"He suah thought he had a cinch with a little fellow like me, and he danced around grinning fine. He had that nice little left jab working fast, and for a few rounds he suah did have me butting my face against his left glove. For five rounds he made more points than a hunting dog, and I was No. 2 in the parade.

"Believe me, when that sixth round come around I was gettin' mad. I couldn't reach that tall gent, and I got desperate. I just rushed in to slam him or die, and he cut loose with a left hook that caught me on the chops. Down I goes like a bag of oats and took the count of six.

"When I jumps up Mistah Johnson jes' nachully pokes me in the face with his right and I hits the boards again. This time I stays down until eight seconds is counted, and you bet I didn't give that gent a chance to nail me again before I got my hands up.

"But he comes right after me, cuttin' loose with a lot of speedy ones. But I was settled down. These two knockdowns showed me I wasn't making any headway by gettin' mad and I was as cool as a cucumber. As he comes in I measures him and pastes him a honeycooler with the right on his pie biter. Say, you ought to see that gent bust into the ring floor. I suah thought he was going through the boards. Say, he was almost a white man in the face when he peeks up at me. He stayed on them boards till the referee says "Nine" when he jumps up and runs like a rabbit on the snow. I put on all steam and gets after him, but his long legs was too much for me. I'm no foot racer Besides it was close to the end of the round, and he gets to his corner befoar I could soak him again.'

"Foh the nex' nine of that there fight Mistah Johnson didn't do a thing but cover-up, run away and hug. He forgot everything but to take care of his features, and while I was trying hard I couldn't git him to stand long enough to fight. He didn't have no moah fight left in him.

"Now,' that's what makes me think I can hit that gent the next time. Mistah Johnson would get tired runnin' 45 rounds, and I'd ketch him suah.

"But I tell you this, son, make the ring floor strong an' put big ropes around or Johnson suah will try to jump out."

FAMOUS BAND AT FAIR

Grenadier Guards Band to Play Twice Daily at National Exhibition

General Baden-Powell to Review 5,000 Boy Scouts

It can be fittingly said of the Canadian National Exhibition "That time cannot wither or custom stale its infinite variety." Each succeeding year the management has offered the public something new and better than had gone before, and this season they have eclipsed all previous efforts by securing the engagement for the entire two weeks of the Fair of the famous band of His Majesty's Grenadier Guards. With one single exception this wonderful organization has not crossed the ocean since 1872, when under the baton of the premier leader, Dan Godfrey, they electrified the people of the United States with a series of concerts.

The Grenadier Guards Band is a part of the history of Great Britain. Its origin has been traced back to the days of Charles Second, who signed the warrant bringing it into being in 1665. It was with the appointment of Dan Godfrey in 1866 that it assumed a commanding position as the King of Military bands. Under Lieutenant Albert Williams, who succeeded Godfrey in 1897, it has steadily progressed until it stands without a peer. Who has not hummed or marched to the swinging air of "The British Grenadiers."

The special features of the Canadian National Exhibition will be in advance of other years. General Baden-Powell and his boy scouts will prove a fine attraction. The Model Military Camp will be occupied by American Troops this year, the spectacle before the Grand Stand will comprise a battle between a warship of the dreadnought type and an airship, a naval review at Spithead and many equally attractive scenes. A timely display will be models of British vessels contributed by the great English ship builders.

A Grim Threat.

An extraordinary occurrence in the churchyard at Wettenhall, Eng., is troubling the people residing in the district. The discovery was made the other morning that, during the night, someone had dug a full-sized grave, at the foot of which were the initials "A.K." The initials are those of a young woman in the village, who for some time has been the recipient of unwelcome attentions from an acquaintance. Seven weeks ago a grave similar to that described was dug in the night, and a board placed at the head bore the initials "A.K." In the last case the culprit wheeled a barrowload of sods from the grave and tipped them opposite the gate leading to the home of the woman referred to.

The Way It Is.

I said to my friend, "Tell me my faults and I will know you are my friend." And he told me my faults, and I spurned him, for I thought him a fool.

I said to a second friend, "Tell me my faults frankly." And he said I had no faults, and I spurned him, for I knew he was a fool.

I said to my third friend, "Tell me all my faults." And he told me my faults, and I thanked him. And he spurned me, for he knew I was a hypocrite.

Circumstantial Evidence.

Mark Twain on circumstantial evidence: "Even the clearest and most perfect circumstantial evidence is likely to be at fault, after all, and therefore ought to be received with great caution. Take the case of any pencil sharpened by any woman. If you have witnesses you will find she did it with a knife, but if you take simply the aspect of the pencil you will say she did it with her teeth."

A Queen Who Was a King.

Only once in the history of the world has a queen been officially known as a king. This was in Hungary when the Hungarians gave the name of king to their Queen Mary in order to avoid the infamy which the laws of that country cast upon those who are governed by women. She bore the title of King Mary until her marriage with Sigismund. After that she took the title of queen.

Strategy.

The conductor put his head through the doorway.

"Can't you move up to the front a little?" he pathetically inquired.

"Impossible!" a clear voice called back. "There's a fat man wedged in the aisle."

Whereupon a hasty move up the aisle ensued, and the situation was promptly relieved.

Her Dearest Friend.

"If you were I," she said to her dearest friend, "would you be married in the spring or the fall?"

"If I were you," was the unhesitating reply, "and had actually secured a man I would set the wedding for the earliest date possible."

Poor Human Nature!

Waggles—He couldn't remember why his wife tied a string around his finger, so he was afraid to go home and stayed out all night.

Jaggles—What was it he should have remembered?

Waggles—To come home early.

Made It Clear.

Diner—Is there any soup on the bill of fare? Waiter—No, sir; there was, but I wiped it off.

A Rain-Soaked Summit.

On the top of Ben Nevis the rainfall amounts to 126 inches in the course of a year.

ANIMALS AT PLAY.

Some A Found to Play Real Practical Jokes.

All animals, from ants up to whales and elephants, play together in youth, and some are fond of taking such diversions at intervals through life. One might search the world over and not find more playful creatures than puppies and kittens, but there are other dumb animals which not only frisk about, but actually descend to practical jokes.

A Brazillian parrot once succeeded in making a railway party believe that they had run over a child. Sudden cries, followed by a low moaning, rang out from beneath the wheels. The train was stopped, and the employes nervously searched the track, but no child was to be seen. No clue to the situation was to be found until a large green parrot, swinging in his cage, uttered a mocking laugh.

A monkey on shipboard used to amuse himself in the cook's absence by turning the water-cocks, in order to enjoy that worthy's surprise when he returned and found the water running over the floor; and there are scores of authenticated instances of actual deception practiced by animals to gain some desired end.

A certain Skye terrier used to attempt deceiving its master by going through the action of killing a fly, and then assuming an air of success. One day, however, when proof was given him that his hypocrisy was detected, he slunk under the furniture, evidently quite ashamed.

The merry antics of monkeys are many and diverting. Humboldt was acquainted with a monkey in India which took delight in riding a pig. Every morning the creature caught one, leaped astride his back, and clinging there with great firmness, took his fill of riding.

Another monkey, domesticated by a missionary, used to put the family cat, a strong, good-natured animal, to the same use.

The favorite game of others seems to be that of sliding down hill. They climb to the top of a high snow-ridge, lie flat upon the stomach, with the fore-feet bent backward, and giving themselves an impulse with the hind-legs, glide down the hill head foremost. In summer they select a sloping river bank, which has a clayey soil, and where the water at its base is of considerable depth. Climbing this bank, they start from the top, slip swiftly over the sloping ground, and plunge into the water.

The gambolling of whales is often witnessed by sailors, and Paley says that any observer of fish must acknowledge that "they are so happy they know not what to do with themselves. Their attitudes and frolics are simply the effect of an excess of spirits."

Old Cordage.

Much money is made by the sale of old rope and string. Thousands of dollars are netted by the buying and selling of old fishing nets alone, but this amount is a mere bagatelle to the cash that is turned over in the handling of old cordage at the docks. When it is considered that the cordage, not including the fitting, of a large sailing vessel costs from $8,000 to $15,000 and that this cordage must constantly be renewed it will be seen that an enormous trade must be carried on in this particular respect.

The Oldest Libraries.

The oldest libraries of which we have any certain knowledge are those brought to light by excavations among the ruins of the east. Among these are the Babylonish books inscribed on clay tablets, supposed to have been prepared for public instruction about 650 B. C. It is said by Aristotle that Strabo was the first known collector of books and manuscripts. This was about the year 330 B. C.

Wisdom

The owl is generally regarded as the symbol of wisdom, and certainly with his goggled eyes he looks wise.

Spectacles do not always make the wearer wise, but wise people always wear spectacles when they need them.

They realize that to postpone their use is a fight against nature, an uneven contest. Glasses that are correctly fitted are a constant source of pleasure; they cost but a trifle more and often not as much as those purchased from irresponsible vendors.

Take chances with ill-fitting shoes or clothes if you must; and lose your money. But with ill-fitting glasses you risk not only your money but your eyesight as well. Be eye-wise. Do not take chances with nature's greatest blessing and fill your life with regret. Consultation free.

St. Michael's Picnic Was Grand Success

FOUR THOUSAND PEOPLE IN ATTENDANCE AND EVERYBODY WAS HAPPY—SOME FINE SPORTS—THREE BASEBALL MATCHES—PARK NINE AND GRAND TRUNK PLAYED SEVENTEEN INNINGS—SUMMARY OF SPORTS.

A grand success!

Such was the remark heard on every hand in reference to the picnic held yesterday afternoon in Holton's grove, West Belleville, under the auspices of St. Michael's church of this city.

It was estimated that between 3,000 and 4,000 persons were upon the grounds during the afternoon and evening.

Everybody appeared to be in a happy frame of mind, and nothing occurred to mar the pleasant proceedings.

The grounds were well prepared for the event, being decorated, provided with seats, dancing platform and booths, where everything desired could be procured. Conveyances of every description were kept busy during the day, conveying, free of charge, visitors to the grounds. Dinner and supper were served by the ladies. The menu was certainly of the best, and the attendance all that could have been desired.

The various booths, which were in charge of obliging ladies, did a great business.

In the centre of the beautiful grove a platform was erected, and to tuneful music furnished by the I. O. O. F. orchestra, dancing was indulged in during the afternoon and until 10.30 at night. The I. O. O. F. band was also in attendance during the day, furnishing selections which were much enjoyed.

Rev. Father Spratt, who was director of the day's proceedings, was a busy, but happy man. He was ably assisted by his curate, Rev. Father Meehan. Every member of the large committee did all in his power to secure the comfort and pleasure of all present.

GREAT PROGRAMME OF SPORTS

The programme of sports provided was excellent, and all the events were well contested. In the morning it was intended to have two baseball matches, but only one took place.

ONTARIOS BEAT FLATS

The teams were the Ontarios and Coleman Flats, for a prize valued at $15. This was an interesting match and 10 innings had to be played in order to determine which team was the winner. The Ontarios won by a score of 4 to 3. Mr. James McCourt, of Chicago, was umpire, and "Jimmy" did his duty well. The line-up of the teams was as follows:

	ONTARIOS	FLATS
Pitcher	LaVoie and McGie	Purtell
Catcher	Wardrope	Campbell
1st Base	Hagerman	Clement
2nd Base	Ketcheson	Draycott
3rd Base	Moore	Orr
Short Stop	Wallace	Jarrell
Right Field	Mills	Minns
Left Field	Pales	Finkle
Centre Field	Muir	Gorman

THE TOTAL ABSTAINERS PLAY

In the afternoon two baseball matches took place. The first was between the T. A. S. of Peterboro, and the T. A. S. of Belleville. This was a good game, but the local men were unable to hold the visitors, the score at the end of the 7th inning, when the game was called, being 5 to 2 in favor of Peterboro. Mr. R. Gillespie was umpire. The battery for the winners was Rose and McFadden, and for the losers, Whalen and Hagerman.

THIS WAS THE GREATEST GAME EVER SEEN IN BELLEVILLE.

The second afternoon game, being a league match between the Park Nine and the Grand Trunk teams, proved to be the greatest game ever seen in this city. Victory was not secured until 17 innings had been played. It was a pitchers' battle royal. McDonald, a Toronto twirler, was on the slab for the Park Nine, and he pitched the entire game, appearing to be as strong in the last inning as he was in the first. Sullivan, for the Grand Trunks, pitched five innings, and was then replaced by a stranger, named Saunders. For 12 innings the latter certainly pitched good ball. In the second inning the Grand Trunks secured two runs and the Park Nine evened up in their half of the fourth inning. They secured another run in the fifth and eighth inning, and the Grand Trunk two in the eighth, making the game a tie 4 and 4. For the next eight innings not a man on either side was able to reach the plate. The Park Nine in their half of the 17th inning, were blanked, but the Grand Trunk were more fortunate as they succeeded in scoring the winning run after one man was out.

It happened this way: Shorty Brown, of the Trunks, was on third, with one gone. Then they worked the "squeeze play." As McDonald wound up "Shorty" dashed for the plate. The batter made a weak bunt, but there was no chance to catch Brown at the plate. He scored and the game was won.

The spectators went wild. It was surely a great game. Mr. O'Hern, of Peterboro, was selected as umpire, and he was certainly the right man in the right place. His decisions were most impartial.

The line-up of the teams was as follows:

	G. T. R.	PARK NINE
Pitcher	Saunders and Sullivan	McDonald
Catcher	P. O'Neil	Wilder
1st Base	Young	Gerow
2nd Base	Saunders	Reeves
3rd Base	Ewarts	Connell
Short Stop	Brown	Brennan
Left Field	Lefleur	Thomas
Centre Field	G. Brown	Bolger
Right Field	O'Neil	Connolly

The score by innings was as follows:

Park Nine.. ....00021001000000000—4
Grand Trunk .... ..02000002000000001—5

Although the game was started quite early in the afternoon it was not concluded until 6.40.

THE OTHER SPORTS

At the conclusion of the ball game the sprinting events were called and it was quite dark before the last event was run off. The first were the children's foot races which were all well contested. The winners were as follows:

Boys' race, 10 years and under, 100 yards—Ernest Galiagher 1st, Vincent Wims 2nd, Fred. Ross 3rd.

Girls' race, 10 years and under, 75 yards—Irene Fitzgerald 1st, Teresa McCauley 2nd, Lottie McCourt 3rd.

Boys' race, 16 years and under, 100 yards—Ed. Gaulin 1st, H. Simmons 2nd, J. Alexander 3rd.

Girls' race, 16 years and under, 100 yards—Rosa Smith 1st, Lizzie McCauley 2nd, Eileen Flagler 3rd.

The winners in the other events were as follows:

100 yards, open—Ed. Roche, Deseronto, 1st; J. Corkery, Peterboro, 2nd; V. Brown, 3rd.

5 mile race—There were six entries for this event, namely, H. Vickers, F. Bryant, C. Wallace, J. O. Adams, Belleville; W. Willis, Peterboro, and J. Schuman, Trenton. At the start Willis took the lead and maintained it to the finish, although he was, on the last lap, closely pressed by Vickers, who made a desperate effort to win. Schuman was the third to cross the line. Time 30.19.

2 mile race—J. Alexander, of this city, captured first place, being closely followed by H. McGorman, of Trenton. H. Symons, of this city, was third. Time 13.20.

220 yards dash—Ed. Roche, Deseronto, 1st; J. Corkery, Peterboro, 2nd; A. Steele, Belleville, 3rd.

440 yards race—J. Corkery, Peterboro, 1st; A. Steele, Belleville, 2nd; Ed. Roche Deseronto, 3rd.

The prizes in the more important events were valuable. In the five-mile race the 1st prize was a gold watch, valued at $25; 2nd prize, silver watch, valued at $15, and 3rd prize a valuable suit case.

THE OFFICIALS

Mr. Wm. Connolly was starter for the sprinting events; Messrs. J. Fitzgerald, Wm. Smith and J. R. Cushing, judges, and Ed. Lee, secretary.

NOTES

It was one o the most orderly crowds ever seen at a picnic and all enjoyed themselves.

Visitors were present rom Peterboro, Trenton, Deseronto and other places.

Rev. Father Connolly, a former popular curate of St. Michael's, now of Trenton, was present, and was cordially welcomed by his many friends.

Todd Says Things Are Going Nicely.

G. T. R. STRIKE AGREEMENT IS ALL RIGHT, AND MEN ARE SATISFIED WHEN IT IS EXPLAINED TO THEM.

Toronto, August 10 — Mr. Thomas Todd of Hamilton, a G. T. R. conductor, who was one of the General committee who made the agreement with General Manager Charles M. Hays was in Toronto, last night for a short time en route from Portland to his home town. In discussing the settlement with the company, he declared that when it was understood, there would be no objection to it.

The story that the officials were not treating the men right was, he said erroneous. "I cannot understand where they come from, and I will take every opportunity to contradict them." He also denied the statement that the officials were not treating the members of the General Committee fair.

"They have had no opportunity to treat us unfair, because the committee has not generally reported for duty."

Mr. Todd declared he had nothing to fear regarding the settlement. At all terminal points where he had talked to the men and explained the situation, they appeared satisfied. He expected that when the opportunity had been given them to explain the agreement to the men in Hamilton, they would also be satisfied.

PERISHES BEFORE CROWD.

Strange Man Wades Into Niagara Above the Falls.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Aug. 11.—In plain view of hundreds of tourists, a man, thought to be Charles E. Stolz of Buffalo, committed suicide late yesterday by going over the American Falls Prospect Park was filled with tourists when the man leisurely deposited his coat, hat and umbrella on the river bank, midway between Green Island bridge and Prospect Point. He attracted no attention by this act, as the day was warm and many others had acted similarly.

The crowd was horrified when, instead of lying down by his discarded wearing apparel, the man coolly walked to the river and waded into the swift current a distance of nearly 50 yards before the water carried him over the cataract. After entering the water, the man did not so much as glance back over his shoulder at the wildly gesticulating crowd on the bank, whose calls he must have heard above the roar of the falls.

When the swirling waters carried him from his feet, the suicide was whirled around several times. Watchers say there was no look of terror on his features, but rather a smile of delight. A woman who watched from near the point where the man entered the water, fainted as the suicide disappeared over the brink.

Melancholy over unsuccessful ventures in stocks is believed to have been the cause of the suicide. In the pocket of the man's coat was a note book, containing a memorandum of deals in stocks, as well as a certificate for 50 shares in the Lost Chance mine, made out in the name of Stolz.

Supt. Regan of the Buffalo police, notified Reservation Supt. Harris last night that the man was evidently Stolz, who left home early in the morning, and had not returned. Members of the family with whom he boarded said the description was that of the missing boarder, whom, they claim, had acted queerly for the past week. They said he had kept closely to his room and seemed downcast.

Farewell to "Queen's Own."

Toronto, Aug. 11.—With several thousand relatives and friends crowding the galleries of the Armories and overflowing out on the parade floor the officers and men of the Queen's Own Rifles took part last night in perhaps the most unique ceremony in the history of the Canadian militia. The Lieutenant-Governor, the Premier of Ontario, and the Mayor of Toronto united in bidding "God speed" to the regiment, voicing the farewell of the people of the province, and dwelling upon the precedent in Imperialism that the regiment is setting in its visit to England, a journey the importance of which will not be truly estimated until the years to come.

Six hundred men, splendid in their new uniforms and equipment, paraded, under the command of Lieut.-Col. P. L. Mason, with Major Robert Rennie and Major A. G. Peuchen second and third in command.

Among the notable on the platform were: His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor, the Premier of Ontario, Col. Sir Henry M. Pellatt, Capt. Douglas Young, A.D.C., Col. W. C. Macdonald, commanding Toronto Infantry Brigade; Major Carpenter, R.C.R.I.; Major J. O. Thorne, Quartermaster Capt. George, Capt. Cooper, Mayor Geary, and Controllers Ward, Spence and Church.

Tobacco Crop Damaged.

Leamington, Aug. 11.—A storm of hail, rain, wind and electricity swept over the fruit, vegetable and tobacco district of South Essex, known as the Leamington fruit belt, yesterday afternoon. The drought was beginning to look serious, but whether the rain will do as much good as the hail has done harm, is a matter to be estimated later.

The hail storm lasted for several minutes, and must have done great damage to the tobacco crop in this section, as the crop is now far advanced. The corn, vegetable and fruit crops will also be great sufferers from the storm. Hail stones weighing from one-half to one ounce were picked up on the streets of Leamington. No damage from lightning so far reported.

The Bay Is Ours.

London, Aug. 11.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Morning Post, surveying the history of the ownership of Hudson Bay, says Canada possesses an indisputable and clearly defined claim to the bay and adjoining regions.

The Financial Times in a lengthy article discusses the anticipated Canadian timber boom, and says the prospect of such issues in London is not particularly alluring.

Australian Note Issue.

Melbourne, Aug. 11.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Government has decided to invite the British Association to pay a visit in 1912 or 1914.

In the House of Representatives Hon. Mr. Fisher moved the second reading of the bill providing a federal note issue. It provides for the maintenance of a gold reserve of 25 per cent. for the total issue of £7,000,000.

Discovered New Comet.

Boston, Aug. 11.—The discovery of a new comet was announced at the Harvard College Observatory yesterday. The discovery was made by Rev. Joel H. Metcalf at Burlington, Vt.

The comet was found to be moving in a northwesterly direction. It could not be definitely stated yesterday at the observatory whether the comet is nearing the earth.

Lockouts Spreading.

Kiel, Aug. 11.—The shipbuilding interests yesterday notified the managers of the Germania, the Howalds and the Kolbe shipyards, all in or near this city, to lock out their workmen on Saturday unless in the meantime the strikers of the Hamburg-American Steamship Co. at Hamburg return to work.

Interest on Loan Lowered.

Ottawa, Aug. 11.—A Canadian loan of $7,500,000 falls due on October 1 in London, and will be renewed at 3 1-2 per cent. The old loan was at 4 per cent.

A small aeroplane being tried out in England is driven by human motive power, the aviator working peadls geared to bicycle wheels while it is on the ground, and to apropeller when it rises.

GAYNOR IS DOING WELL

There Is no Immediate Cause For Alarm Ssy Doctors.

No One Is Able to Say Whether or Not Blood Poisoning May Set In, But the Mayor of New York Is Resting Quietly and Everyone Hopes For the Best, Even Gallagher —Policeman Prophesied Crime.

New York, Aug. 11.—Wm. J. Gaynor, mayor of New York, lies in St. Mary's Hospital in Hoboken last night with two segments of a split bullet, fired Tuesday by James J. Gallagher, who sought to assassinate him, still buried in his neck and mouth, but he has shown not an alarming symptom. It is beyond human power to say whether he will recover, for no one can say whether blood-poisoning will be the aftermath, but as yet the mayor's temperature has given no cause for alarm on this score. Every indication is that the wound is healing beautifully.

Bulletins issued yesterday and last night did not vary in their tone of optimism, and so cheerful was the patient, and so hopeful were his attendants, that Mrs. Gaynor, after an almost sleepless vigil at the bedside, left the mayor's side late yesterday afternoon for a 40-minute spin by automobile.

Quartered in a larger and better lighted room in the hospital, the mayor chats pleasantly with those who are allowed to see him, and confidently predicts that he will be out in a few days. As yet he has not discussed in any way the tragedy of Tuesday, or is he even aware of the identity of his assailant.

The mayor's highest temperature during the day was 100 3-5. As blood poisoning invariably indicates its beginning and spread by a raise in the patient's temperature, the nearly normal standard maintained yesterday was one of the most cheering signs to his physicians. His appetite is good, although his diet is necessarily limited to broths and liquid foods; he has shown great stamina of body and mind, and, so far as those who conversed with him can learn, he is not worrying greatly over the outcome.

One of the most extended conferences on the mayor's condition was held last night, but at its conclusion there was issued merely a brief bulletin, and no announcement was made as to when, if at all, an operation would be performed. In this respect it is pointed out that many persons have lived with bullets in their bodies, and as living proof of those, a man recently wounded in a manner almost identical to that in which the mayor was shot, visited the hospital yesterday evening.

The following bulletin on Mayor Gaynor's condition was issued at 9.30 last night: "The mayor's progress today has been satisfactory. He had good strength, has rested well, has taken considerable nourishment and is in good condition this evening."

"The bulletins disguise nothing," said Dr. Arlitz, commenting on the 9.30 bulletin. "We are trying to tell the whole truth."

Interest, of course, centres on the mayor's condition, but Gallagher, now professing a trace of penitence for his deed, commanded further notoriety from his cell in Jersey City yesterday evening. An anonymous letter, vulgarly couched and threatened the life of Street Cleaning Commissioner William H. Edwards, whose blows felled Gallagher to the deck of the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse on Tuesday, started a perfunctory police investigation, but generally the communication is attributed to a crank. Although it predicted for Big Bill a fate similar to the mayor's, the former football player was unconcerned.

Two young girls, who declared that they overheard an intoxicated policeman indiscreetly remark on Monday night that the mayor would be shot either on his departure for or on his return from Europe, furnished the foundation for another police inquiry. Policeman J. P. Hock of the Madison street station, whose number, 7,846, is the number given by the girls, was suspended from duty last night, pending investigation.

Schurman for Governor.

Oyster Bay, N.Y., Aug. 11.—Theodore Roosevelt is thoroughly in touch with the political situation in New York yesterday as a result of a long conference with Wm. Loeb, jr., collector of the port.

The conference began Tuesday evening, lasted until nearly midnight and was resumed yesterday morning, concluding only when Mr. Loeb left for New York City. Mr. Roosevelt will not attempt to state who the Republican nominee for governor shall be, but it is understood that Loeb told his former chief, who he would appoint. Report has it that Jacob G. Schurman, president of Cornell, will be the man.

Scow Turned Turtle.

Brockville, Aug. 11.—A farmer named McKian, living near Westport, sustained a heavy loss Tuesday. His buildings, containing the season's crop, besides farming implements, caught fire and were totally consumed.

A large scow, belonging to Riley & Donovan, turned turtle at the Brewery dock yesterday. The craft was exposed to a heavy sea, which caused the cargo of 1,200 bushels of sand to shift. The cabin was also torn off by the stove crashing into it when the scow capsized.

G.T.R. Brakeman Killed.

Owen Sound, Aug. 11.—A brakeman on the Grand Trunk, Ralph Tucker, of Stratford, was instantly killed in the yards here yesterday. Tucker was coupling freight cars at the Canada Cement Co.'s wharf, when a coupling pin stuck in the draw head. He stepped in to fix it. The train of cars approaching him was evidently moving faster than he calculated, for he was caught between the two heads and the back of his body was crushed to a pulp.

A Fire In The Woods

When It Was Over There Was a Change of Heart

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

The Sunday dinner was over, and Rebecca was washing dishes in the big kitchen. Henry Miles and his wife came out dressed in their best clothes and got into the waiting buggy. Ever since they had been married twenty-five years before the Sunday afternoon ride had been a regular proceeding.

Their daughter Beth waved them a farewell as they drove out of the big gate.

Beth looked anxiously away toward the woods that bordered the distant wheatfields. Behind them rose a pale gray cloud now and then flecked by flying cinders. Rain had not fallen for several weeks, and the woods were like tender, and the paths were thickly carpeted with dry leaves fallen from last year.

The kitchen windows faced the wheatfields, and Rebecca's red face was pressed anxiously to the pane. Then she saw Beth and came to the door.

"The woods are afire, Miss Beth," she said excitedly. "Your pa's wheat will be done for if the wind don't change pretty soon."

The wheatfield was an undulating sea of pale green blades six inches high. The dry weather had slightly parched the tips, and Beth bent down to assure herself that the grain was too green to be affected by the fire even if it should reach the fields. When she looked up again several men were running across the field. One of them saw her, paused and turned back.

Slowly she walked through the wheat, her light tread scarcely crushing the young shoots. Her fair cheeks took on the rose tint of early dawn, and her blue eyes were veiled under a thick fringe of lashes. The man watched her coming toward him, his handsome eyes drinking in her fresh, spring-like beauty. Her pink gown fell softly about her slender form as the green wheat rippled about her feet.

At last Beth lifted her shy eyes and saw his good looking face with its reckless, smiling lips—saw the immaculate whiteness of his collar and cuffs and the trim neatness of his handsome clothes. He carried his coat on his arm and slipped into it as she came up with him. They had smiled a greeting into each other's eyes, and their first words were commonplace enough.

"The woods are afire," said Ralph Clinton. "Don't you want to go along and see the fun, Beth?"

A look of disappointment crept into the girl's face. "Aren't you going to fight it, Ralph?" she asked.

The young man laughed good naturedly. "It isn't necessary. There are half a hundred trying to kill it with sand or back fire, but it's got too big a headway. Besides, the wind is strong from the southwest, and nothing can stop it until it dies out for want of something to burn."

"Where is it now, Ralph?" questioned Beth quietly.

"Out in Deep Hollow woods—a spark from the railroad started the blaze and away she went! There were five miles burned over at Wayneville yesterday."

"Deep Hollow woods belong to my father. He owns right through to the farm here. It means a serious loss to him," said Beth.

"It's too bad, Beth, but nothing can save it, so there's no use in worrying," returned Ralph carelessly. "Come; let us go and see the fun. The woods are great at this time, you know. Perhaps you may find a moccasin flower."

"Wait a moment," said Beth, and she turned and with flying feet recrossed the field to the barn. When she returned she carried a shovel in one hand.

"There!" she panted, thrusting the utensil into his unwilling grasp. "Take that along, Ralph. I'm ashamed to have you appear there unprepared to fight the fire."

"Not in these clothes—not on your life!" ejaculated Mr. Clinton inelegantly. "I'll carry the shovel for the looks of the thing, but if I fight a forest fire it will be by proxy! Some of the negroes from the hollow will be smoked out and glad of a job to take my place for a consideration, eh?"

"Those poor negroes!" cried Beth, disregarding his selfish speech. "I forgot all about them. Their little homes will be ruined. Let us hurry, Ralph. In spite of your joking I am sure you are going to help in a time of need like this."

Without further parley Ralph helped Beth over the fence and into a woodland path, through which they hurried at a greater speed than the young man fancied. Given this time and opportunity, he felt that the April woods were an ideal spot in which to ask Beth the momentous question that had been hovering on his lips for weeks. He was quite sure of her answer, for she had shown her preference for him during the past winter, and his cleverness and wit had quite thrown Ben Wyatt into the shade—raw, country bumpkin that Ben was!

Ralph's lips curled in a little smile of contempt as he thought of the rival who had quietly withdrawn from the contest for Beth Miles' favor when the rivalry became the subject of open comment.

The smoke grew thicker, and the air was filled with flying cinders that fell in crisp flakes on their heads. In the distance they could hear hoarse shouts of men, the crackling of burning trees and underbrush and the barking of dogs.

Where the three roads crossed was to be the battleground. If the fire crossed Deep Hollow road the little gathering of negro cabins was doomed. The fire was coming toward them now, and they could see the forms of men through the smoke. Strange, fantastic forms they were, frantically beating back the encroaching flames or shoveling loosened soil on the creeping fire that ate along the ground.

The group of cabins was untouched, but in grave danger. The unfortunate occupants were removing their poor bits of furniture, and two ramshackle carts were being filled with the goods. Old Uncle Peter Green occupied a chair of state in one cart. A tottering chair it seemed owing to the uneasy antics of the frightened mule in the shafts. Weeping and praying and lamenting, they moved dolorously down the road along which Beth had just come.

"Go down to the farm, Judy," she said to the dominant spirit of the group. "Rebecca will take care of you till the danger is over."

Out of the thick of smoke a man turned and recognized her; saw her standing there in her pink cotton dress dazed by the smoke. Beside her was Ralph Clinton leaning on an idle shovel, whistling softly as he watched the battle with the approaching flames.

Ben Wyatt leaped into the road and confronted them. Clad in blue flannel shirt and corduroy trousers, hatless, his sun browned face and arms black with soot and grime, he presented a sorry contrast to Ralph Clinton. But somehow Beth's glance caught his steady gaze and lingered there for a brief instant, and she saw nothing to despise in Ben Wyatt, homely farmer that he outwardly was.

"Get back there, Clinton!" commanded Ben angrily. "Take Beth away from here. Can't you see it's no place for a woman?"

"Mind your own business, Wyatt!" retorted Ralph. "Get to work there on your fool's job!"

There was no time for further argument. The men, who had strung out in a wide semicircle, were drawing closer together. They had started a back fire, and there was danger when the two fires met that the sudden leap of flames might ignite the vegetation on the bluff. If it did the woods were doomed. But the farmers fought valiantly, and little by little the flames were beaten back from the crossroads until they smoldered down and left charred and blackened desolation wherever their blasting fingers had touched.

Tired and exhausted, the fire fighters lay panting in the sand of the roads.

It was Beth who sent a lurking pickaninny to call the fugitives home to the cabins, and it was she who found a pail and dipper in Judy Brown's kitchen and went to the bubbling spring for water to refresh the tired men. Before it came Ben Wyatt's turn to drink from the dipper she slipped away down the road toward home. As she passed him Ralph Clinton arose and followed her.

"See here, Beth," he said disagreeably, "I'd like to know what I've done to deserve such treatment at your hands."

Beth turned and surveyed him with level eyes. "It isn't anything you've done, Ralph," she said quietly. "On the contrary, it's what you haven't done. I don't think you can understand how I feel about it, Ralph. I thought I cared for you, but I am afraid it was your appearance I loved after all. Please forget all about me if you can." Beth said contritely.

"Well, I seem to have got all that's coming to me today," he said jauntily. "Goodby!"

"Goodby," said Beth gently. As she watched him walk slowly away she felt a pang at the shattering of a cherished illusion, while at the same time there was a strange, sweet joy in her heart, mingled with a fear that she had dallied with real love and lost it.

Ralph Clinton turned to fling a backward taunt. "I suppose you think you can whistle Ben Wyatt back, but you're too late, Beth!" Then he went on and disappeared.

The girl's face whitened at the taunt and its insinuation, and with a little strangled sob she leaned against the friendly trunk of a tree and hid her eyes.

Ben Wyatt's voice behind her startled her to betray telltale tears on the thick lashes. Grimy and scorched, hatless and tattered and scratched, he was a sorry looking lover. The look in his faithful eyes made up for everything that seemed lacking.

"I heard what that pup said just now, Beth," said Ben grimly, standing with folded arms before her. "I ought to have stepped in long ago and told you what I want to say right now, but somehow I thought you liked him best. This forest fire isn't a patch to the fire I've been through this winter! You don't have to whistle Ben Wyatt back—he's here. Beth, darling, shall he stay?"

Beth came to his arms with a happy cry, and they must have forgotten the passage of time, for the returning cavalcade of the fugitives startled them into embarrassed realization that their secret was no longer their own, but was shared by the grinning denizens of Deep Hollow wood.

"Land uv love!" shouted Aunt Judy exuberantly, and to the two, blushing under the oak tree as the procession passed, it was verily a "land of love."

Beneficial results are said to have attended experiments in a London hospital by which asthma, bronchitis and even tuberculosis patients were required to breathe compressed air for a few hours at a time.

CAPTAIN SCOTT'S EXPEDITION.

It Is a Matter of Personal Interest to Rear-Admiral Kingsmill.

Rear-Admiral Kingsmill, the Canadian officer of the Royal Navy Staff, is an old shipmate of several of the officers of the "Terra Nova" Antarctic expedition, and is naturally much interested in the accounts of the fitting out and departure of the expedition. Admiral Kingsmill is surprised that Capt. Scott chose the "Terra Nova" for the expedition in preference to his old ship the "Discovery," to which he was greatly attached. The first time Capt. Scott ever saw the "Terra Nova" he resented her appearance. He was out in the lonely Antarctic then, cut off from the world. It was on a sunny morning in January six years ago, the Discovery was fast in the ice, and her situation and indeed that of the whole expedition, was a little serious. The Government had guessed this, and had sent this old but carefully chosen whaling vessel in tow through the Mediterranean and Suez Canal, until with the other relief ship, the "Morning," she came up to the edge of the Antarctic ice pack. Captain Scott and some of his companions were discussing after breakfast, their plans for the day, when suddenly they saw a ship. Then one of them exclaimed, suddenly, "Why, there's another!" and there was the "Terra Nova." The sight meant safety and home again, but there were considerations which made the reflection not completely delightful. Before he turned in that night, Capt. Scott wrote in his dairy: "In spite of the good home news, and in spite of the pleasure of seeing old friends again, I was happier last night than I am to-night."

The "Discovery" was accorded the rank of a regular unit of the Royal Navy and flew the naval ensign. The "Terra Nova" does not fly that, but by a special grant of privilege, which is very useful as well as ornamental, she becomes a member of the Royal Yacht Squadron and flies its white ensign. She has officers and men aboard her who are of the navy, being lent by the Admiralty and remaining on full pay, so that they may wear their uniforms abroad. They could not be gazetted to the "Terra Nova," which has no place on the Admiralty lists, but use is made of the imaginary H.M.S. "President," to the service of which they are told off while they are in the Antarctic. Admiral Kingsmill expects the expedition, equipped and led as it is, to accomplish complete success.—Chesterfield in The Family Herald.

Remarkable Lakes.

On the Mangishlak peninsula, in the Caspian Sea, there are five small lakes. One of them is covered with salt crystals strong enough to allow man and beast to cross the lake on foot. Another is as round as any circle and of a lovely rose color. Its banks of salt crystal form a setting white as the driven snow to the water, which not only shows all the colors from violet to rosy red, but from which rises a perfume of violets. Both the perfume and the color are the result of the presence of seaweeds.

MAY NEED COMMISSION.

Laurier Premises to Look Into Cold Storage Requirements.

Red Deer, Alta., Aug. 12.—A generous thunderstorm, accompanied by a high wind, marred the beginning of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's meeting here yesterday afternoon. The interruption occurred before Sir Wilfrid spoke, and an adjournment was made to the Lyric Theatre.

The Premier, after preliminary remarks, turned his attention to the tariff. He reproved the grain growers for an invidious distinction, in the memorial presented yesterday, between the farmer as a class and the manufacturer as a class.

"If there is a distinction, such should not exist," he declared. "The farmers are working for the country and the manufacturers are working for the country, and it is to the interest of both farmer and manufacturer that they should work for a common purpose. I think it should be done for the advantage of both."

Sir Wilfrid again declared his faith in the leaders of British free trade, and declared that Fox, Cobden, Bright and Gladstone were the great men of English history. Canada was a young country, however, and the same methods could not be applied here.

Discussing the chilled meat industry, Sir Wilfrid admitted that the present method entailed hardship and sometimes loss. Australia and New Zealand were the largest exporters of dressed meat, and what those countries could do Canada could do. If cold storage facilities were required, similar to what had been provided for the butter and cheese industry of Ontario and Quebec, that could be done also for the new trade of the west. Sir Wilfrid concluded by stating that he had written Hon. Sydney Fisher, to look into the matter and appoint a commission, if necessary.

Stand for Freedom.

London, Aug. 12.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Antwerp International Free Trade Congress has resolved to send the following message to the leaders of the Canadian free trade movement: "The International Free Trade Congress, representing twenty-six countries, desire to convey to Canadian free traders their congratulations on the stand which they are making for freedom, and, in the name of all the countries represented here, to thank them for the example of a high unselfish ideal, which they are setting to humanity. Louis Strauss, president."

Ready to Bring Earl Grey Back.

Ottawa, Aug. 12.—Alex. Johnstone, Deputy Minister of Marine and Fisheries, has been advised by wireless telegraph, that the Government steamer Earl Grey, which will meet His Excellency Earl Grey at the mouth of the Hayes River, and bring him and his party back to civilization, has arrived at Port Burwell. There the Government steamer Stanley, which went north early in July, under command of Capt. Sam Bartlett, was met. Capt. Bartlett and the pilot took charge of the Earl Grey and proceeded on the way to the Hayes River.

Wouldn't Take Prisoner Further.

Brockville, Aug. 12.—Five prisoners, sentenced to terms in the Central Prison, were brought in from Ottawa Wednesday night by the provincial bailiff and left at the county jail until noon yesterday, when the trip was resumed. The discovery was made here that one of the quintette was of unsound mind, and the bailiff refused to take him further. The prisoner was taken back to Ottawa by the chief turnkey of the Ottawa jail, who was returning after leaving a convict at the Kingston Penitentiary.

Lightning Struck Church.

Montreal, Aug. 12.—During the severe electrical storm yesterday, St. Andrew's Church, Beaver Hall Hill, was struck by lightning. Firemen crawled up the inside of the steeple and extinguished the blaze before much damage was done. Lightning also struck a trolley wire and burned the fuse out of a car at the corner of Green avenue and St. Catharine streets. A hole was burned through the car. The motorman's hands were severely scorched.

Big Dredging Contract.

Ottawa, Aug. 12.—A number of contracts have just been awarded by the Department of Public Works. Dredging in Miramichi Bay, N.B., W. J. Poupoure, Montreal, and A. & R. Loggie, each get a contract for $100,000 approximately. L. Cohen & Son, Montreal, will dredge at Montmagny, the total being about $8,000, while N. Trudel will build a breakwater at Matane costing $5,500.

Some Improvement.

Montreal, Aug. 12.—The fact that the strike on the Grand Trunk has been brought to a conclusion and that strike conditions have ended was shown by the statement of earnings exhibited by the company, when a decrease of traffic earnings of $195,967 was shown, while during the week previous, when the strike was in full progress, a decrease of over $400,000 was registered.

HAS COMFORTABLE DAY

Mayor Gaynor Continues to Show Improvement.

Rumor That Friction Exists Among Physicians Attending Him Is Denied by His Friends — Bullet Is Lodged In the Arch of the Pharynx But Doctors Do Not Think It Advisable to Operate at Present Time.

New York, Aug. 12.—The following bulletin on Mayor Gaynor's condition was issued at 10.30 last night by his physicians:

"Mayor Gaynor has had a comfortable day and he has taken sufficient nourishment. He is cheerful, stronger and is now resting quietly. The complete radiographic examination by Dr. C. D. Caldwell shows definitely that the bullet is lodged in the vault of the pharynx, easily accessible, but it is not considered wise to attempt to remove it at present. The blood examination is also satisfactory."

Judging from official bulletins, Mayor Gaynor spent a satisfactory day, and as yet his physicians say no sign of blood poisoning has developed. On the other hand, rumors were afloat yesterday that his condition was worse and that his surgeons were in the midst of a disagreement. Robert Adamson, his secretary, and E. J. Lederle, health commissioner of New York, gave out a statement discrediting the reports of friction among the medical advisers. The statement does not deny the report specifically, but by implication.

Advised Against Rupture.

Paris, Aug. 12.—A despatch to The Temps from Madrid quotes Marquis de Ojeda, the recently recalled Spanish ambassador to the Vatican, as endorsing the policy of Premier Canalejas, but at the same time denying that dissensions existed in the Vatican, and expressing the belief that a solution of the trouble will be possible through a display of good-will on both sides.

The Temps, under reserve, also reproduces from The Madrid Epoca a statement attributed to Premier Briand of the French Government, who is at Ramouillet. The Premier is said to have strongly advised King Alfonso against breaking with Rome, and is quoted as saying: "We slid down hill farther than we intended. But for the clumsiness of the Vatican, the papal nuncio would be still in Paris, and the ambassador of France at Rome."

Madrid, Aug. 12.—Premier Canalejas, following an interview with Marquis Emilio de Ojeda, the ambassador to the Vatican, who was recently recalled, yesterday announced that the Spanish diplomat probably would not return to Rome.

C.N.R. Crop Reports Optimistic.

Toronto, Aug. 12.—The latest western crop reports received by the Canadian Northern Railway yesterday, confirm the optimistic feeling that has lately been gathering strength.

It is shown that grain cutting is becoming general, while in some places it began a week ago. Recent hail storms appear to have done little damage.

In some localities the outlook is poor, but these are comparatively isolated instances. For example: Vonda, on the C.N.R. main line, reports that the average yield of wheat is only about one-third. Marshall states that some fields will reach 25 bushels to the acre, and oats 50 bushels.

Over Falls In Barrel.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Aug. 12.—Bob Leach yesterday signed a contract with a Toronto man, named Ellmore, to go over Niagara Falls in a steel barrel some time before the end of September. Each party to the contract deposited $100 with George Holliday, Thorold, as evidence of good faith.

Leach has twice gone through the whirlpool rapids in the barrel. He expects to take the same route as that traveled by Anna Edson Taylor in her memorable trip over the cataract in 1901. Ellmore has returned to Toronto to organize a syndicate to take moving pictures of Leach's proposed trip.

Raised the Rates.

Brantford, Aug. 12.—Brantford license holders, together with the license and police authorities, held a conference here yesterday, when the trade promised to be good and keep hotel. The presence of undesirable persons around hotels was discussed, and the hotelkeepers promised to immediately notify the police on such occasions. With only nine hotels left in Brantford, the rates have been raised to $1.50 per day and up.

Stabbed and May Die.

Brantford, Aug. 12.—Two serious rows were reported here yesterday among local foreigners. Steve Kovalka and Jolin Howarth were victims, the former being kicked by a man named Fedoz. Howarth was stabbed by Steve Kovatch, who is under arrest. Both men are in a serious condition, and it is thought Kovalka will die. The latter's assailant fled to Buffalo.

Sent Down for Trial.

Huntsville, Aug. 12.—As the result of an infant found last Saturday at the Kent House, Mrs. Nora Reynolds came up before Acting Magistrate Hutcheson at the Court House Wednesday afternoon, and was sent down for trial at the Bracebridge Assizes.

CURRENT EVENTS.

A lad of sixteen was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary for stealing $6.75 at Hamilton. A "striker" in Brockville waylays a man, and half kills him, because he elected to work for the Grand Trunk Railway during the strike, and he is let off by paying the cost. Justice in such cases is becoming a farce.

The time has arrived in Canada, when it is a question whether we live in a free country or in a state of labor terrorism. Here is another case of unionism. The masons and bricklayers at work on the new Parliament buildings at Regina have gone on strike because the contracting firm employing them is involved in a labor dispute at Montreal. The men in Regina had no trouble with their employers, yet they strike because the employer had trouble with their men in Montreal.

A telegram from Winnipeg of the 9th says: It is understood that the Manitoba Government has decided upon the policy of buying all the elevators offered by the Elevator Commission. The Manitoba Government is not to be envied. It is laying up for itself a heap of trouble. If it succeeds in satisfying all who store grain in its elevators, a monument should be erected to its memory.

A Magistrate at Sarnia fined the Grand Trunk Railway $650 for bringing from the United States men to do its work which old employees had thrown up at the instance of other men from the United States. The magistrate interpreted the law, which forbidding a Canadian employer to get helpers in his business where he can find them, permits men from another country to come here and order and direct strikes damaging to the trade of the whole community The law as it is made by some politicians still merits the old charge that at times it "is a hass." If this is the law the sooner it is repealed the better.

A short time ago, a man supposing to be entering the country to seek employment from the Grand Trunk Co., was accosted by one of the Government officials and asked if he had $25, and upon his showing the money the impertinent official asked where he got it, which, not knowing the law the man would in all probability have told him had not a gentleman stepped up and told the man not to answer the question. Such insolence deserves dismissal.

Albert Rochon, who uncoupled a locomotive from a G. T. R. passenger train at Montreal, during the strike was sent to jail for six months. It should have been for six years. Had the act not been discovered, there is no telling how many lives might have been lost.

London, Aug. 9—The Morning Post surveying the history of the ownership of the Hudson Bay, says Canada possesses an indisputable and clearly defined claim to the Bay and adjoining regions. Canada will know better what her rights are when the Hague award is rendered, as there is no telling what the Yankee commissioners may persuade those of the Conference to do.

United States journals have learned that coercion has not accomplished much when practiced upon Canadians They are now trying the sunny ways. Here is what the "Springfield Union" says: If there is any country under the sun toward which we can afford to deal liberally in the matter of the tariff it is Canada, where the general conditions and habits of the people are so similar to those that obtain within our own borders. Let us avoid a policy of erecting unnatural and undesirable barriers between ourselves and the Dominion. If, in encouraging larger commercial relations, some changes in the present tariff should appear necessary, let those changes be made as speedily and with as little fuss as possible Canada wants none of it.

Fully a thousand men have been on strike in Springhill, Nova Scotia, for a year and have been living on strike funds. Business in the town is at a standstill and the civic finances are in a deplorable state. The soldier are still guarding the loyal workmen and the output is daily increasing. On the 10th inst., these strikers celebrated the fifty-second week of their idleness by forming a procession and marching through the principal streets in the business section to the picnic grounds a mile from the town, where a great demonstration was held. There were hundreds of red flags floating in the breeze in the mining town of Springhill where the striking U. M. W. miners were celebrating. The red flags indicate mischief which, if attempted, will have to be met by rifle and bayonet.

Lost Some Things

Brockville Times: G. E. Chapman returning from Belleville last night by the Toronto local, stepped off at Kingston to get a lunch at the railway restaurant, leaving a box of fish, an umbrella and a suit case in the coach He lingered just a trifle too long and missing the train was forced to wait over until the early morning express Upon arriving there he found the box of fish on the platform but there was no trace of the other two articles The matter has been reported to the police.

Large Barn Burned

During the severe electric storm on Wednesday night Mr. Percy Wilson's large barn at Niles' Corners, Prince Edward County, was burned. Fortunately all his stock was out and his machinery was in the drive house, which they managed to save His pig pen which was a new one just built this summer was also destroyed. His grain was all in except a few loads of oats and they were expecting the threshing machine in a few days. But it as well as his hay was burned, also a wagon and all his fowl. The barn was insured for $800 which would no more than cover the cost of the grain and hay. Mr. Wilson has the sympathy of this entire neighborhood in his misfortune.

Masonic Grand Lodge.

"The Masonic Sun," a journal published in Toronto, speaks in glowing terms of the accommodation and reception received by the members of the Order, in Belleville at and during the sessions of the Grand Lodge.

Referring to the proceedings the Sun makes special reference to the "report on the condition of Masonry," by our fellow citizen Col. W. N. Ponton, which it characterizes a "brilliant effort displaying a complete grasp of affairs, a careful perusal of which will afford food for thought to the Mason who is desirous of preserving the ancient landmarks, and will cause one to ask whether are we drifting."

The Sun follows these remarks with a short resume of the report as follows:

AN EXCELLENT REPORT.

The report of R. W. Bro. W. N. Ponton on the condition of Masonry presented to Grand Lodge, was an excellent one. He very aptly in his opening paragraphs said that "Masonry is a living organism, full of ideas and ideals, which must be interchanged and expressed, to keep the current flowing; and every District Deputy Grand Master, as indeed every Master, should be a man of light and leading, able, and by his close contact with men and Masons throughout the year, inspired to contribute some thought of vital value, some suggestion of practical wisdom, to the reservoir power in the Grand East thence to be dissiminated throughout the Craft."

By the organization of Past Masters' Associations throughout the jurisdiction the report said a distinct advance had been made, not merely in light and knowledge, but also in the development of the true spirit of Masonry — unobstructive yet vital sympathetic yet virile, progressive yet truly conservative of good, adaptive yet ever consistent. Their steadying influence has already been felt—they preserve the landmarks by showing their significance, they help to guard the portals, they dissuade from too hasty degree work which is not the all in all, and they have by lectures on various Masonic topics proved themselves the true knights of learning, and justified their existence in ample form.

As to "special nights" held in City Districts, such as Canadian Night Irish Nights, Birthday Night, Military Night, Ladies' Night, and so on, the report stated that from an educative point of view and as showing how close is the touch between human progress and the spirit of the age with Masonry, these auspicious occasions are most commendable but it is hoped that the stable fabric and quiet dignity of the Craft Gatherings will not be honeycombed by too many dramatic or emotional features, and that the Brethren will not be led to prefer rhetoric to reason or pageant to preparation and the ways of peace.

BOXING

Langford-Kaufman Go Was Called Off.

Philadelphia, Aug. 11.—The Kaufman-Langford fight, scheduled to take place at the Philadelphia ball park, this evening, was called off at noon to-day.

Disagreement between the two fighters over a postponement was the cause.

Sam Langford last night asked for a week's postponement of the contest, claiming that he was not in fit condition. To this Kaufman refused to accede, and Harry Edwards, the promoter, upheld the Californian, and to-day called off the bout .

When Langford first made his request through his manager, Edwards was willing to consent to the delay, for he wanted both men to be in the best of shape. Word was sent to Bob Deady, manager for Kaufman. The latter notified Edwards that unless Langford lived up to the articles of the agreement and meet Kaufman tonight there would be no fight. He claimed it was an old trick of the game to have an opponent on edge, and then make him go off form by a week's postponement. Edwards attempted to straighten out the matter in justice to all, and informed the colored fighter that many people had come here from a distance, and that it was not fair to them to ask that they remain in the city for a week to see the fight. Langford listened to all, and then repeated his statement that he was not feeling right; that he thought he would be beaten if he entered the ring in his present condition.

SPORTING NOTES.

The peerless Ty Cobb has taken to writing to the papers censuring his critics about what he terms the unjust remarks about him and the Detroit team. Ty admits he's liable to make mistakes. He says the club is going good, that there is no trouble on the team, and that the Tigers will beat them all home.

Bob Fitzsimmons gets $650.00 per week appearing in vaudeville. Fitz seems to be the one man whose services increase with age. He says that when he and Mrs. Fitzsimmons go on the boards in the new sketch now being written for them by Jack London, he expects to draw down from $1,500 to $2,000 per week.

The Skit, owned by H. J. Leighton, of Ogdensburg, won the 21 mile race and the free for all at the Frontenac races Tuesday. In the former race her time was 45 minutes 6 2-5 seconds, defeating the Onion which did the distance in 45 minutes 55 3-4 seconds. In the free for all the Skit defeated the Pirate and the Duquesne II, her time being 45 minutes and 41 seconds.

After overcoming all the opposition of the staging of a bout in San Francisco Jim Coffroth now finds it hard to get a go which would have sufficient drawing powers to make it worth while. All the boxers interviewed want big guarantees to go to the coast and they cannot be blamed much for their demands. Wolgast only asks $10,000 win or lose, to meet Attell, and even the lesser lights are there with the big figures.

Mr. Tom Flanagan, the famous Toronto sporting man, was in the city today. He had charge of the sporting events at Campbellford yesterday, and was en route to his home in the Queen City.

The Ontarios and T. A. S. will play a city league match on the local diamond to-morrow afternoon.

Mr. James Richards Started Something

Mr. James Richards, Superintendent of School Buildings, in the city, was this morning engaged in repairing a walk near Queen Victoria school, when he struck a hornet's nest. Mr. Richards although making a hasty retreat and leaving his tools behind, was stung upon the face and hands by the hornets, who objected to being disturbed.

CHILDREN'S AID NOTES

Any market gardener or others who could give any produce to the Shelter, will kindly leave same at City Treasurer's office.

A patent has been granted on a roasting-pan for meat which automatically bastes its contents by collecting the juices through a percolator and delivering them in the form of spray.

Price of Motor Cars May Soon Come Down

Mr. Westinghouse, the American inventor, has designed a motor car with steel tires, the shocks of the road being absorbed by air cushions, and experimental trips support a notion that this new car rides more easily than the present air cushion tires machine. If Mr. Westinghouse's invention, upon further trial, proves reliable, it may mean a big change and advance in the art of motoring and a correspondingly large decrease in the price of the cars.

Former Belleville Folks in Accident.

On Wednesday afternoon, at Toronto, a fuse blew out in a King street car, causing considerable excitement amongst those in the car. Amongst the passengers on the car were Mrs. W. T. Sutton and her sister, Miss Annie Day, both of whom were former residents of this city, and sisters of Messrs. Harry and William Day. Mrs. Sutton sustained slight injuries in attempting to jump from the car. Miss Day was uninjured.

Only Those Who Are Insured May Vote.

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 11. — At the meeting of the Supreme Lodge of the Sons of England it was decided that only members who were insured in the lodge could vote on insurance questions.

The meeting decided to establish an advisory council for each district which will be in place of the present district council. The delegates are very anxiously considering the formation of provincial grand lodges, which the Winnipeg men are urging. It is understood that if this one is granted similar applications will be made from Quebec.

Belleville Scots Made Good Showing

The annual Gathering of the Clans for this district was held at Campbellford yesterday, and was in every respect a successful affair. Many from the city were in attendance.

The famous 48th Highlanders Band, of Toronto, furnished music for the day.

Bellevillians, as usual, captured many of the prizes offered for competition, the winners being as follows:

Best dressed Highlander—Mr. John McIntosh, 1st.

Highland Fling for Boys—Master John McIntosh, son of Mr. John McIntosh, 1st.

Best dressed Highlander Girl—Jessie McIntosh, 3rd.

Mr. Thomas Bowie, of this city, entered in several events, securing a goodly number of first and second prizes.

Sent to Mercer

Anna Dixon, a young woman who was arrested here a week ago on a charge of vagrancy, was this morning brought up before Magistrate Masson and pleaded guilty to the charge. The accused is a resident of Gananoque, and her reputation is by no means of the best. The Magistrate, after giving her some timely advice, sentenced her to the Mercer Reformatory for six months at hard labor.

Griffin's Offering

Charles and May Munro are the talented musicians who are delighting the people of Belleville this week at the Family Theatre.

Musicians will appreciate the work of Mrs. Munro when told that in playing the cornet and piano together, she has to play in two keys, a feat that at first sight appears to be nearly impossible with the class of music she has mastered on the two instruments.

Daily Intelligencer.

Sir Wilfrid Two Sided.

The English press is beginning to understand Sir Wilfrid and his "good Lord, good Devil" insincere and unmeaning utterances. Oratory couched in flowery language, susceptible of two or three meanings, is not relished by John Bull, whose practical common sense revolts at such attempts to deceive. The London Morning Post referring to Laurier's tour, says that the premier has certainly a genius for being all things to all men, for letting his views be affected by what Burke called the "Immorality of Geography." It thinks that Laurier's efforts in the direction of maintaining protection, while denouncing it, and belauding free trade, without taking any steps to attain it, as not singularly happy.

Commenting upon the trade question as it affects Canada, the London News says it had hoped that the perilous game of misrepresenting colonial opinion had been dropped by reputable Conservative papers.

The Right Hon. Alexander Ure, Lord Advocate of Scotland, speaking at Great Missenden on the 2nd August, made the following chaste remarks, in which he ignorantly or designedly misrepresented the position taken by Canada on the question of preferential trade. His language was:

"Those self-made, muddle-headed people who preached preference wanted to give Canadian farmers an artificially increased price on their produce, but the farmers themselves, the very day this policy was preached in the Commons, repudiated it, and said they only wanted fair play in their own market." It is proposed, he said, to give Canada a preference she did not want, and to shut out Australia and South Africa.

The News says the spread of revolt against a preference to Canada is the most recent and the severest blow to the tariff reform cause here. "The west is supplying the driving force to Canada, turning against tariff in the very hour the English protectionists are exhorting her to testify on behalf of protection."

The Morning Post protests against the repetition of the free trade press report of a "gigantic delegation" to Sir Wilfrid Laurier in favor of the abolition of the tariff, and says Laurier is as likely to commit political suicide as to embark on a fatal free trade policy from the practical view point.

The Right Honorable gentleman is in error when he charges that "it is proposed to give Canada a preference she did not want, and to shut out Australia and South Africa." No such proposition was ever made or thought of by any Canadian. All who have advocated a preferential policy, included the whole Empire, the adoption of which they believe would be a benefit and advantage to the whole Empire, and tend to the cementing of a Union between its outlying portions and the Motherland. Nor is he correct in saying that the Canadian farmer does not want a preference in the market of Great Britain. It is to be feared that the vaporings of a few westerners in favor of free trade has been taken by the Right Honorable gentleman as the sentiment of the people of Canada. The Morning Post has grasped the true sentiment of the people of the Dominion as a whole in its protest against the repetition of the free trade press report of what are represented to be gigantic delegations to Sir Wilfrid in favor of the abolition of the Tariff which if Sir Wilfrid were to propose his tenure of office would come to an end the moment the people would have an oportunity of casting their ballots. No! No! Sir Wilfrid is too fond of power to commit "political suicide."

The Empire has become large and powerful, and will remain so in spite of the Little Englishers and such rabid free trade politicians as would destroy her prestige and power by a policy fitted only for one section. Unity is the secret of power and success, and the sooner such politicians as Ure learn and act upon that principle the better for the Empire as a whole

The General Conference

(Christian Guardian)

The meeting of the Quadrennial Conference of Canadian Methodism is an event of more than ordinary interest to every member and adherent of the church. The very success and growth of the Methodist church in Canada demands the frequent enlarging and even changing of the plans and policies of the church, and in all these changes and enlargements every intelligent adherent of the church should be keenly interested.

In a church so democratic in spirit as ours there is certainly no excuse for any member not being in active sympathy and close touch with the whole inner life and work and thought of the body. And yet there are frequent signs of a lack of just that intelligent interest in and appreciation of the plans and policies and programmes of the church as a whole that we could expect. And there is frequent need for a call to enlarged vision and broadened sympathies that such a gathering as this is inclined to give. One of the very good things that the great quadrennial Conference does is to direct the thought of the individual member of the body to the great enterprises and movements and interests that concern the institution as a whole, and give to him some sense of the greatness and importance of the work in which he is associated with a multitude of others as members or adherents of the Church of Christ.

No gathering of the nature of a General Conference of Methodism can be unimportant. It must deal with matters of vital moment, not to the body in any narrow sense merely, but vitally important to the church at large and to the great interests of the Kingdom of Christ. This year it would seem as if there were several matters of critical importance to be dealt with, matters calling for unusual wisdom and care and patience. Would it be out of place to ask that the members of Conference might have the benefit of the prayers of a united church. The problems that have to be solved, and the plans that have to be outlined and perfected can only be wisely and righteously met, as the great Head of the Church controls and guides and inspires.

In facing the questions that the General Conference will have to face, whether as members of that Conference or as members of the church who only read the debates and discussions, we may all find our need of humility, of patience of the wisdom that is quiet and teachable. It is not easy for very many of us to recognize God's leading and direction in ways and plans and policies that are alien to our own. It is difficult to subordinate our wishes, our ideas, our plans of others, or to the facts of life. But it is undoubtedly wise and absolutely necessary so to do sometimes. And to learn so to do will ofttimes prove a way of life to us.

If the best is to come to the church out of the deliberations of her great legislative body, those deliberations must be taken up absolutely in the fear of God, and in the utter absence of any thing that is partisan or narrow, or self-seeking. As far as men may, by the grace of God, and the strength of the purposes that He forms within, we must go about our Christ-like business in a Christ-like way, no matter what that particular business may be, if it is ever to work out the results for which we hope. Our zeal, or our earnestness or our wisdom will never atone for our irreligion in any work we are trying to do for the church, even though it is true that zeal and earnestness and wisdom are splendid things.

THE DRAGOON COTILLON

Soldiers Turn from Strike Duty to the Mazes of the Dance.

During the past few weeks the people of the various parts of Ontario have seen the troopers of the Royal Canadian Dragoons on duty for the preservation of law and order at points affected by the Grand Trunk strike. At the coming Canadian National Exhibition they will have an opportunity of seeing them in a more attractive guise when picked riders will execute in front of the grand stand the beautiful and intricate figures of "The Dragoons Cotillon."

This embraces all the picturesque and complicated figures of the stateliest of old fashioned dances. As the cotillon reaches its climax the movements attain a puzzling complexity out of which horses and riders extricate themselves in a most graceful and precise manner. The spectacle in daylight as the red-coated horsemen perform their evolutions with lances and bannerettes fluttering in the breeze is beautiful in the extreme but it does not equal in any sense the exquisite picture at night when each lance point is tipped with a tiny flame. This episode is invariably greeted with riotous applause by the thousands who nightly visit the Canadian National Exhibition.

That Comet.

Did the earth pass through the tail of Halley's Comet, or did it not? Some scientists seem at variance on the point.

At a meeting of the Royal Society at Edinburgh, just held, Dr. John Aitken submitted the query: "Did the tail of Halley's comet affect the earth's atmosphere?" and he was followed by Prof. Dyson, who wondered if the earth went through the tail at all.

Dr. Carse would only commit himself to the extent that the comet exercised very little influence on the state of the atmosphere. He would not say that the earth actually did pass through the tail.

Prof. Forbes, however, was positive that there could not be the slightest doubt that the earth did pass through the tail of the comet, because it could not help doing so.

So the man in the street can take his choice.

The Making of a Great Telescope.

Whether man will ever reveal the mystery of the stars to such a degree as to demonstrate whether the planets are inhabited or not, offers a big field for skepticism. But it is certain that improvements in telescope-making are keeping pace with progress in other inventions, and it can hardly be doubted that in a few years we will know much more about the surface and the other geographical phenomena of Mars and his brother planets than we do today. Within a month or six weeks there will be an item of news at Mt. Wilson Observatory which will interest the entire world. It will be known at that time whether the 100-inch lens, recently cast in France is to be a success or not. If it is, new secrets of the heavens will be revealed as soon as it can be set up on Mt. Wilson.

The attempt to cast the big reflector was once before made and the result was a failure. It takes several months for the big casting to cool, and the second one is in that process now. The first reports are that it will probably come out all right.

Some idea of the difficulties to be overcome in mounting the big lens that is coming will be gained from the fact that it weighs five tons. This piece of glass must be hung so that it will move with perfect ease in order to be kept in a fixed position by the clock-work attachment which overcomes the motion of the earth. Dr. Hale's invention is a steel bearing floating in mercury, a principle in use on the sixty-inch lens which weighs one ton.

Astronomers originally doubted the efficiency of the larger lenses. It has been demonstrated that the spectra of stars are increased in a ratio corresponding to the size of the lens, and with the 100-inch disc there are remarkable possibilities of developing new facts in regard to the universe.

This lens, weighing five tons, will have to be transported to the top of a mountain a mile high, where tons of the original material of construction had to be packed over a narrow trail on the backs of burros. The wagon trail built for the purpose of getting the sixty-inch lens to the top will again prove indispensable.

Baggage Smasher Fell in the Drink.

Kingston, August 11.—Passengers on the steamer Kingston yesterday on her down trip witnessed some happenings that were not included in the regular routine. When the big boat was pulling out of Brockville, assistant baggageman Laurie stepped on a gangway and as he did so the deckhands started to pull in. He was on the end and a second later a splash indicated his whereabouts. He was quickly pulled out and aboard the steamer.

In the excitement a woman passenger dropped her purse into the water. It was also fished out and thrown on the main deck as the steamer was several feet out from the wharf.

G. T. R. Earnings.

Montreal, August 11.—The fact that the strike on the Grand Trunk has been brought to a conclusion and that strike conditions have ended was shown last night by the statement of earnings exhibited by the company, when a decrease of traffic earnings of $105967 was shown, while during the week previous, when the strike was in full progress, a decrease of over $400,000 was registered .

The figures as published show that since the strike was called off, traffic on the G. T. R. has rapidly resumed its normal course, and it is expected that within a short time the usual weekly reports will indicate increases ,instead of the decreases which were brought about by the labor dispute.

The traffic earnings of the Grand Trunk for the week ending August 7, were $725,508, as against $832,475 last year, a decrease of $105,475. During the same week the Canadian Pacific showed one of the biggest weekly increases it has yet registered, which was due to the general increase of business and the disarrangement of affairs on the Grand Trunk. C. P. R. earnings for the week ending August 7 were $2,065,000, as compared with $1,627,000 last year, an increase of $438,000 for the seven days.

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

CHAPTER XLII.

The Dawn of Happiness.

When the May flowers bloomed next spring there was a grand wedding at Woodale.

Lord Damar's only daughter, the beautiful and accomplished Lady Blanche, married Sir Vivian Aynsley of Carsdale.

The day was one of the fairest—there was no cloud in the deep blue sky, the sunbeams fell warm and bright, the sweet south wind was laden with the odorous breath of spring flowers, the hawthorne was white upon all the hedges, the grass green in the meadows, the birds sang a thousand songs — while Sir Vivian, remembering the December day when he parted from the only woman he loved, felt that his present happiness was without limit or bounds.

There had been on trouble over his succession to Carsdale, Soon as Paul Lynne was laid in his grave, Sir Vivian went down to the abbey, where he was received with warm welcome as are all new sovereigns. One of his first acts was to order from Paul Westerne, a large painting of Alan Wayne to be copied from the title sketch that had been of such value to him Those who had never heard, whom even the faintest rumor of the story had never reached — wondered why the dark face of Sir Alan Aynsley did not appear with the other portraits Sir Vivian also besought the artist to continue the picture he had commenced for the late master of Carsdale.

"You must not forget Alan Wayne's last letter Mr. Westerne," said Sir Vivian. "He prayed me, whenever I met you, to be your best friend and truest friend. You must not deprive me of the pleasure of fulfilling his wishes."

But it was long before gentle tender-hearted Paul Westerne could forget the man who, despite his faults and crimes, had been good to him. There was one thing the artist noted Edith, who never touched peaches or grapes sent by Paul Lynne, enjoyed the dainty fruits and rare wines that found their way from Carsdale, and never made the slightest objection to receiving them.

With the discovery and the restoration of the rightful heir to his estate, all Edith's pertinacity vanished, she knew the fair-haired boy who loved her so well was dead — buried on the far-off Australian shores where the waves of the mighty ocean chanted his requiem. She knew that he was at rest, the wrong righted, the fraud discovered, and she went on her way, quiet, gentle, devoted as she had never been to her father.

But fate had something in store for Edith. Lord Helstone, when he had been Paul Lynne's great friend, was captivated with her fair face and gentle wisdom. He made frequent visits to the artist's studio, he ordered several paintings, and, finding that after each visit he grew worse instead of better, Lord Helstone proposed for Miss Edith Westerne and was quietly accepted.

So quietly that the artist was puzzled. He had been married in a perfect whirlwind of rapture. He could not understand the placid, calm manner.

He thought then, as he thought often afterward, that all the romance of his daughter's life lay buried in Alan Wayne's grave. Yet Lady Helstone was very happy; though better than diamonds or jewels, or any costly treasure, she valued the little square picture; though when quite alone, her serene, lovely eyes wore a dreamy far-off look, as though she were watching the waves beat on some far-distant shore. Ah! there are few lives without some such secret.

Sir Vivian most faithfully executed Alan Wayne's last wishes. He was a true and constant friend to the artist. He sent out to Wabash and caused a monument to be erected there for Edgar Wayne. He did still more; he sent out his own steward to Otana who took down the gravestone bearing the name of Paul Lynne and in its place there rose a stately white marble monument, bearing the name the rank, the age of him who slept so quietly below.

One loving evening in June a group that Watteau could have done justice to were assembled on the lawn at Carsdale.

The slanting sunbeams fell upon the grand old abbey, gilding the walls and tinting the ivy-clad turrets with flame. The summer sky was blue and bright as the sky of Italy. On the lawn the acacia was in full bloom and its white blossoms fell on the soft, thick grass. From over the meadows came the perfume of the newly mown hay and the pink hawthorne the golden laburnum drooped its delicate blossoms; the fragrant lilac lifted its plumes, a thousand flowers yielded their fragrance; roses in whose crimson breasts purple butterflies lay sleeping; white lilies, whose golden hearts gleamed brightly. The birds were singing of love and beauty and all that makes life fair.

Under the spreading shade of a large cedar sits Lady Blanche Aynsley, the sunbeams glistening in the diamonds fastened around her white throat. Time has added to her beauty and has changed it. The proud defiance has died out of her eyes, the scornful curves have left her lips; there are beautiful gleams of tenderness in her lovely face, a laughing light in her dark eyes.

She looks what she is — a perfectly happy woman.

The light in her eyes deepens as they rest upon the handsome face and fair hair of Sir Vivian Aynsley, who who is vainly trying to teach his son and heir some wonderful gymnastic feat.

Lady Aynsley called her first born son Alan, in memory of the young kinsman who died so many years ago in the strange, distant land. He is a noble, beautiful boy, with his mother's Spanish eyes and his father's Saxon face.

Old Time Journalist Says Few Believed In It In the 'Seventies.

Thomas A. Gregg, the veteran journalist, who is personally well known from Toronto clear through to Dawson City, has lately been giving some interesting reminiscences illustrative of the Ontario politician's attitude toward the West during the seventies. "In May, 1879, the first colonization train from Ontario left for the Northwest," says Mr. Gregg. "As a junior reporter on The Toronto Mail, I was ordered by the late Mr. Bunting, then managing editor of the paper, to go with the party and tell the readers of The Mail how they fared upon the way and how they reached their destination, for such a party and such a journey were odd or unique things at that time, and subject of remark and wide speculation. The rancorous days that had marked the transference of authority over the Northwest to the Dominion Government had passed away and the tumult and the noise that had marked the first rebellion of Riel had some time subsided, and the people at large were beginning to turn their attention to the prairie region as presenting grand possibilities. Part of the punitive force sent forward to restore and maintain order in that region had remained and gone on the land, and sent back glowing accounts of the fertility of the soil, while the disbanded volunteers that had returned were offering land scrip, given to them as gratuity for their services, at bargain day prices that would not now be conceivable. Yet only the venturesome looked in the direction of the Northwest. It was difficult to get there. A proposal to build a railway into the newly-acquired territory had overturned one Government and proved the imbecility of the next, and now those who wished to make the new land accessible were met with denunciation, and, what is worse, ridiculed. It should never be forgotten that Edward Blake advised the people not to go to their own Northwest, but to go to Kansas and grow corn. Nearer home, Hon. Mr. Hardy and Hon. John Dryden, also deprecated the efforts of those who would populate and plant their own waste places, and cried to the multitude: 'Don't go to the Northwest, where naught is seen but snow and sky, but go to the fertile plains of Dakota and get rich.' And in order to aid their fellow-citizens to locate easily, they syndicated a lot of land in Dakota and offered it at a slight advance to settlers as an earnest of their good intentions. The men who took Mr. Blake's advice and went to Kansas are now limping back to Saskatchewan and Alberta, old and bent, and often poor and with years of regret behind them that they had not followed their first inclinations and stayed in their own country. And they that died in the effort to get rich growing corn on the arid fields of Kansas must have laid strict injunctions on their sons to get back to their own people, or how account for the great number of young Americans, of Canadian extraction, to be met with in the West. As to the Dakota 'boom,' those who put their money and their faith in the land syndicates have grown grey waiting for tangible tokens of their confidence, and the deluded few who sought fortune in the cyclone-swept state, long since let the high winds blow them over to the land where the wheat is as hard as nails, and oats weigh forty-eight pounds to the bushel.

Ascum—He's particularly pleasant when you get him in a reminiscent mood, don't you think?

Borroughs—Not always. He was in just such a mood the other day and recall a loan of $5 he had made to me.

BOAT IS HIT BY FERRY

Party of Twelve Thrown Into Toronto Bay at Night.

John Pearce Is Drowned In Accident to the Sailboat Director, When the Mayflower Runs Smaller Craft Down In Dark—Eleven Young Persons Are Rescued From Death In the Bay—Skipper Too Daring.

Toronto, Aug. 12.—One more death and perhaps three were likely added to the awful toil of drownings in Toronto Bay for 1910, last night, when the island ferry boat Mayflower crashed into the 17-foot sailing skiff "Director," of the National Yacht Club fleet.

The sail boat carried a party of 11 people, and all were dumped and had to be rescued in various ways by people, who were near the scene.

The missing man is John Pearce, 116 Crawford street.

Those reported safe are: Alex. Jaffray, Mrs. Alex. Jaffray, Norman Jaffray, Miss Olive Jaffray, Miss Margaret Jaffray, Arthur Jaffray, Miss Esther MacMahon, Miss Viola Fleury, Robert Jennings, Robert Rumney and Ruddy Rumney.

The collision took place about fifty feet from the end of the Centre Island dock. Norman Jaffray was handling the Director's tiller, and was steering an easterly course from the direction of Hanlan's Point across the path of the Ferry, which was heading for Centre Island and was just crossing into the slip.

Jaffray apparently believed he could glide safely past. There was a pretty fair breeze blowing, but close to the island it was freaky and came in puffs.

They were struck about midship and everybody in the party was precipitated into the water.

Olive Jaffray and young Jennings alone clung to the overturned craft and it was their shouts that attracted rescuers from various small boats and the shore. Thomas Patterson and J. Seabrook of the I.C.Y.C. rendered effective service in a rowboat.

Six of the party were brought to the mainland by the Mayflower on her return trip. Others were brought by the ferry tug Jasmine, and were delivered to their homes in a carriage.

The police had difficulty in getting anything like an accurate tally of those accounted for. It was for a long time feared that five were missing. Then it dwindled down to three.

Doubts were entertained about Miss Margaret Jaffray, Miss Viola Fleury and John Pearce. Later reports purported to have come from the Jaffray home, 17 Pacific avenue, stated that Miss Margaret Jaffray and Miss Fleury had been taken into a cottage on the island and decided to stay there for the night.

So that the only person unaccounted for is John Pearce, of 116 Crawford street. Still, Robert Jennings' brother, in conversation with a reporter at 2 a.m., declared that his brother had just 'phoned him from the Jaffray residence, and they had not heard from Miss Margaret or Miss Fleury.

The accident happened at 9.30. Mait Aykroyd was summoned and dragged until midnight. Weeds were very thick on the bottom and the dragging was difficult.

The sailboat is said to have carried the proper quota of lights, and it is said that Capt. McMaw of the ferry made an effort to direct his course sufficiently to miss a collision.

Young Jaffray was a very able sailor and although the Director was owned by Rudd Romney, it was Jaffray who usually sailed her.

Ship Liners Want Arbitration Board.

Montreal, Aug. 12.—Ship liners are making an application to Mackenzie King for a board of conciliation under the Lemieux Act. The men want more wages than the shipping companies are willing to pay. It seems that cattle shipments have fallen off considerably and consequently the number of men employed has been under the normal. It is expected the Minister of Labor will grant the request.

Good Sons of Britain.

Pretoria, Aug. 12.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Premier Botha said his Government still awaited the Unionist program. He heard people were being stirred up to "vote British," but had not the Empire every reason to regard him and his party as her sons and as good as any other?

Mr. Smuts advocated training on the Swiss basis with a nucleus for a striking force.

Mrs. McCaughan Dead.

Belfast, Ireland, Aug. 12.—Mrs. William John McCaughan, who was injured by jumping from the window of a burning hotel on July 16, died yesterday. Mrs. McCaughan's husband, pastor of the May Street Congregational, and formerly of Toronto and Chicago, was a victim of the same fire, and died from injuries received on July 21.

Didn't Think It Was Loaded.

Regina, Aug. 12.—Tony Hagel, a Rusian newsboy, was shot and probably fatally wounded at an early hour yesterday by a restauranteur, named Walkeoff. Walkeoff was playing with a small rifle used in a shooting gallery and snapping the hammer, apparently thinking it unloaded.

To Abandon Port Burwell.

London, Aug. 12.—Additional confirmation of the report that the C.P.R. will shortly abandon Port Burwell for Port Stanley, is lent by the unofficial announcement made yesterday, that next year there will be a daily boat between Cleveland and Port Stanley "to connect with the C.P.R."

The Wheat Crop.

London, Aug. 12.—J. K. Carthew's annual estimate of the world's crops gives Canada 1,350,000 quarters, 35,000,000 bushels less than in 1909. Total crops are estimated at 375,000,000 quarters, an increase of 500,000.

The Australian government is considering plans for a transcontinental railway from east to west, to develop inaccessible country, to expedite the mails and for military purposes.

BUILDING A NEST

A Story of a Love Developed From Childhood.

By CHAUNCEY WARDWELL.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

It began by our capturing the sugar bowl. She was a black eyed girl of five, I a towheaded boy of six. I was playing with her brother, who was flying a kite. The kite broke away, and he ran after it. Nellie took me to the sideboard and showed me the bowl full of big white lumps. The back door was standing open, and I could see the sun shining on the trees. There is a natural connection in a boy's mind between the greenwood and robbery. That's what makes the story of Robin Hood so fascinating to him. I couldn't help taking up the sugar bowl and running like a deer to the wood, Nellie following. She wore a sunbonnet, which as she ran fell on to her back and was held there by the strings tied around her neck, her hair flying in the wind.

We were chased and captured, having perpetrated the crime without reaping its fruits. The bowl was taken from us before we had had a chance to eat a single lump. I was sent home and received a whipping. Nellie was let off with a scolding. I, being older than she, was held accountable for the whole affair.

"Shame on you," cried my mother, "to lead away a little girl only five years old!" And she administered another dose of her slipper.

The next time it was I who led. I was eight; Nellie was seven.

"Let's go to the woods and climb trees," I said to her.

"Mother has forbidden me to go there," she replied.

"I'm going," I said.

I started, but presently looked back. She was following me. I waited, and she caught up with me. The wood was quite dense, large trees interspersed with saplings and little shoots. I sat down on the root of a tree, she on a log opposite me. It was very still in there, the only sound being so light that it might be imaginary, something like the rustle one hears by putting a seashell to the ear.

"SO JACK ASHURST CUT THOSE LETTERS!"

"Do you hear the leaves grow?" I said.

"I don't hear anything," she replied.

"Yes, you do. Listen!"

She listened and heard what I did, a faint confusion of whispers. "Is that the leaves growing?" she asked.

"Of course it is."

If a modern scientist should hear the leaves grow he would consider that an important discovery had been made. To the child it was simply one of those incidents common in fairy tales.

There was a large beech tree near, and, taking out my knife, I cut a big "N" on the bark, the initial for Nellie. She watched me, much pleased with the crooked letter. Then I said:

"Let's play we are birds and build a nest up in a tree."

"Let's," she said.

A fallen tree leaned against the beech on which I had cut the letter "N." I scrambled up the fallen one, Nellie following. She stopped at the lower branches, while I climbed higher, looking for a convenient spot for the nest. At last I found one.

"Here it is," I cried—"three shoots from one stem. It will rock the little birds when the wind blows. Come up and see it."

"I'm afraid."

"What are you afraid of, you little goose? Come on!"

She did come on, but slipped, and I heard a thud on the ground. I looked below and saw her lying in a heap. Her face was toward me and white as marble. I scrambled down and shook her, thinking to bring her to herself, but she did not respond. Then I called to her. Still there was no awakening. I began to be frightened. I was a strong boy. I took her up and carried her to her home.

It was a long while before she recovered from that fall. I received another whipping on her account. I was rather pleased at this, for I considered it in the nature of penance for persuading her to climb the tree. Neither of the whippings I received impressed me as a consequence to the offense. Children don't bother themselves as to the cause of their punishments. They simply consider them something to be endured like other disagreeable events. Nevertheless I was very ill at ease till I heard that my little chum was out of danger and that she would suffer no lasting ill effects from her fall, for at first it was feared she had been killed and later that she would be a cripple. I occupied my mind by going out to the wood and cutting the other letters to the name I had begun on the beech from which she had fallen.

I was not allowed to see my little girl friend again. Her parents considered me a very bad boy indeed, and I was forbidden to come to their house. My own parents probably agreed with them, for they sent me to a boarding school for little boys. Before I went home for my first vacation our family had changed our residence, so that the childish association between Nellie and myself was ended.

I forgot all the children with whom I had played at that early age except Nellie. It is a mistake to suppose that children have no love affairs. I did not know when I suggested to Nellie that we go up in a tree and build a nest like the birds that I was obeying a law of nature. That something which draws the birds to mate and provide for their young was in me. At any rate, I considered Nellie my sweetheart, and my sweetheart she remained.

I will admit that fifteen years later whatever remained of this childish affection lay dormant. Nevertheless it was in me and, like a spark, needed to be fanned into a flame. I had prospered for a youngster of twenty-four and, though I was far from Nellie, I longed to see her. At last business called me to a city near which she had lived, and I determined to go and discover if she was still there.

Upon inquiry on my arrival I learned that she had not yet left the parental home—the home she had occupied when I had seen her last. It was a bright summer morning, and I strolled up a familiar street and stood before the house I sought. I did not wish to make a formal call, so I loitered in the neighborhood till a young lady came out into the front yard to water some plants. Approaching her, I asked:

"I believe a family of Ashursts once lived opposite you in that house over there. Do you remember them?"

"Indistinctly. I was very young when they lived here."

"I think there was a boy—an incorrigible young rascal. I suppose you were too young to remember him?"

"I remember him. There was a circumstance that fixed him in my child's brain. I was with him one day in that wood back yonder, or in what is now left of it, and we climbed a tree together. I fell and was severely hurt."

"That must have been Jack Ashurst. He was always trying to break his neck or inducing his playmates to break theirs. What became of him?"

"I don't know. I never saw him after my fall. May I ask if you are a connection of the Ashursts?"

"A very near connection. Jack told me about this escapade you mention. He said he cut your name on a beech tree out in the wood. Is that tree still standing?"

"It is. The letters are barely distinguishable."

"I'm going out to see it."

"I'll show you where it is," she replied, and, opening the gate for me, we passed through the yard and over open ground to the wood. She led me to a tree and showed me the name "Nellie" on its trunk. The N and the two l's were the only letters distinguishable.

"So Jack Ashurst cut those letters! Well, well, well! He must have been between eight and nine years old, and you, I suppose, were"—

"About seven, I believe."

"I understood Jack to say that he had cut only the letter N on the day you fell."

"When I was recovering he came out here and cut the others. They told me he was broken hearted at having suggested my climbing the tree."

"Why did he wish you to climb it?"

"He suggested that we play we were birds and build a nest. He found a place for one and called me to go up where he was and see it. In doing so I fell."

"I think Jack never recovered from the shock of that fall. As he grew older he realized his responsibility in the case. He should not even have permitted you to do that climbing, much less to persuade you."

"Nonsense! I did it of my own accord."

There was silence between us for awhile, at the end of which I said:

"You have not built a nest yet?"

She looked at me with a puzzled expression. I repeated the remark in another form. "I mean you have not married and made a home of your own."

She still kept her eyes fixed on me, a bit of surprise following her want of comprehension. "Why did you express it the other way?" she asked.

"It has seemed to me that a boy and a girl playing they are birds and building a nest rather prettily typifies their marrying and making a home. Did it never occur to you in that light?"

She was silent. I took her silence for admission.

"Nellie," I said, permitting the feeling I had been keeping back to influence the tone in which I spoke, "you don't know me."
